It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

1843. } THE QUEEN v. THE INHABIT-
Nov. 10. } ANTS OF BIRMINGHAM.

Order of Removal—Settlement—Parent and Child.

A widow having two legitimate children whose settlement was in the parish of B, married a second husband having a settlement in and residing in the parish of A. Whilst the children were under the age of nurture, they all became chargeable to the parish of A. :—Held, that the children could not be separated from the mother and removed to the parish of B, though the mother consented to such removal, and wished them to be sent to their own parish.

On appeal against the order of two Justices, whereby Harriet Atkins and Elizabeth Ann Atkins, children of James Atkins, deceased, were removed from the parish of Aston to the parish of Birmingham, both in the county of Warwick, the Sessions confirmed the order subject to the opinion of the Court, upon a CASE, which set out the examination of Elizabeth Johns, the mother of the paupers, and from which it appeared, that in August 1834, she, the said E. Johns, intermarried with her late husband James Atkins, at Edgbaston, by whom she had two children born in lawful wedlock, namely, the said Harriet Atkins and the said Elizabeth Ann Atkins, the former being nearly seven years, the latter a little more than five years of age; that her said late husband died in December 1837, and that in 1841 she intermarried with Joseph Johns, her present husband, who is now out of employ and unable to support her and her children; that they are all inmates of the workhouse, chargeable to the parish of Aston, and that she consents to the removal of her children from her, and wishes them to be sent to their parish.

By the statement of the grounds of appeal, it was objected, first, that the said order of removal is bad on the face thereof, and inoperative, because it removes the said children Harriet Atkins and Elizabeth Ann Atkins, and separates them from their mother Elizabeth Johns, and from her care and custody, such children being respectively within the ages of nurture, as appears by the said order. Secondly, that the order is bad and inoperative, because the children removed thereby cannot be removed with the consent of their said mother from her, or from her care and custody. Also that the said examination is bad, because the said mother, Elizabeth Johns, has no power to consent to the removal of her said children, and their separation from her, and that the order and examination were bad, because the said H. A. and E. A. A. are thereby separated from their said mother, and removed from her care and custody. On the hearing of the appeal, it was admitted, that the legal settlement of the said H. Atkins and E. A. Atkins was, at the time of making the said order, in the parish of Birmingham; but it was objected, for the appellants, that the said children, being within the age of nurture, could not be separated from their mother by an order of removal, even with her consent.

The Quarter Sessions were of opinion, that the said children, although within the age of nurture, might be removed to their own parish and separated from their mother by her consent, and confirmed the order. If the Court should be of opinion that the decision of the Court of Quarter Sessions on this point was incorrect, then the said order of removal to be quashed. If otherwise, the said order to be confirmed.

Daniell and Mellor, in support of the order of Sessions.—There is no imperative rule of law to prevent the separation of nurse children from their mother. Such separation has taken place in cases in which orders have been made for the removal of children under the age of nurture, without reference to the settlement of their parents—The King v. Bucklebury (1), The King v. Benett (2) The Queen v. Wendron (3). This is like a case of voluntary desertion. The parish of Birmingham being compellable to reimburse the parish of Aston, it avoids all circuity. The form of order on the churchwardens and overseers to reimburse a parish in which a child is residing with its mother for nurture, states that such mother "is not willing to part with the child until it attains the age of seven years"—4 Burn's Justice, Chitty's edit. 1074. So the statute 22 Geo. 3. c. 83. s. 30, which enables guardians of the poor to put out children under seven years of age, provides, that nothing therein contained shall give power to separate children under seven years of age from the parents "without the consent of such parents."

[COLERIDGE, J.—Suppose the mother were not satisfied that the child was properly taken care of, could she get it back again?]

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—According to your argument, if the mother revoked her consent it would be a sufficient ground for getting rid of the order.]

Hayes, (with whom was I. Spooner), contra.—If this child is removeable, by the same rule a child a week old might be removed. None of the authorities referred to on the other side apply to such a case as the present. In The Queen v. Wendron the child was already separated from the mother, and there was no power to remove the child to the parish in which the mother was then settled and residing at the time of the order. In The King v. Benett the mother was an Irishwoman, and the Justices were bound to remove her, though they had no power of removing her illegitimate child from its birth settlement in this country. The rule that nurse children, whether legitimate or illegitimate, cannot be separated from the mother, has always been recognized—The King v. Hemlington (5), The King v. Wankford (6), The King v. Saxmundham (7), Shermanbury v. Bolney (8), and The King v. St. Giles's in the Fields (9). The rule appears to be adopted for the benefit of the child, and it is one which the child is not of an age to waive; and in this particular case, the mother, who had married again, was not a free agent for the purpose of consenting to the removal.—(He was then stopped.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Cases have arisen, where, in order to give effect to the express words of an act of parliament, it has been necessary to break in upon an established principle: no such necessity, however, exists in the present case. It is an established rule, recognized by all Judges, and doubted by none, that a child within the age of nurture must remain with the mother. Such rule has been laid down for the benefit of the child, and has no reference to the will of the mother. We ought to crush the first attempt to depart from that principle, as it is of the highest importance that the rule should be understood. The order of Sessions must be quashed.

WILLIAMS, J.—I fully agree that the rule is intended for the benefit of the child; and it is of the highest importance that it should not be departed from.

COLERIDGE, J.—I also agree that the order of Sessions must be quashed. The question proposed to us has been raised in the driest possible way, and we must lay down a rule applicable to all cases of children within the age of nurture, and cannot make a distinction between the case of a child six days and one of six years old. What could be more shocking than the removal of a child a week old to a distant part of the country, merely because the mother consented to such removal? It is to be observed that, in the present instance also, the mother is a married woman, whose consent to any act relating to the alienation of her property would amount to nothing.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I agree with the rest of the Court that the order of Sessions should be quashed, on the ground that the rule which prohibits the separation of a child under seven years of age from its mother, was intended for the benefit of the child.

Nov. 11. } ANTS OF SOUTH KILVINGTON.

Settlement—Rate, Payment of—What amounts to.

The pauper was let into occupation of three acres and three roods of land, at the rent of 14l. 14s. a year, the landlord agreeing to pay all that came against it. By reason of this agreement of the landlord, the rent was higher than it otherwise would have been. The pauper's name was in the rate book as occupier, but when the rate was demanded, he referred the overseer to the landlord, who paid it:—Held, that this was not such a payment of rates as to satisfy 3 Will. & M. c. 11. s. 6, or 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 66, and that no settlement was gained thereby.

On an appeal against an order of two Justices, (dated the 10th of January 1843,) removing Thomas Gallantree, his wife, and children, from the township of South Kilvington to the township of Newsham-with-Breckenborough, both in the North Riding of the county of York, the Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following—

CASE.

In January 1840, the pauper, who had previously gained a settlement in the township of Newsham-with-Breckenborough, took a cottage, being a separate and distinct dwelling-house in the township of South Kilvington, of a Mr. West, at the annual rent of 5l.; nothing was said about the rates with respect to the cottage, for which in two several rates made for the relief of the poor, on the 12th of November 1840, and the 22nd of February 1841, the pauper was rated at the sum of 2s. 9d., being in each instance a rate of 1s. in the pound on the sum of 2l. 15s., being the amount at which, in each of the said rates, the cottage was assessed, both of which rates the pauper paid. At Candlemas 1841, Mr. West let the pauper a field, containing three acres and three roods of land, in the said township of South Kilvington, upon the terms following: the land was taken from year to year, the rent was fourteen guineas a year, and the landlord was to pay all that came against it. The rent at which the pauper agreed to take the field, was a higher rent, because the landlord was to pay the rates and all that came against it.

The pauper actually occupied the field, together with the cottage, from Candlemas 1841 to August 1842, at the rent of 19l. 14s. a year, and during this period he paid the landlord the whole rent, and was rated and charged in respect of the field and cottage as follows:—

Date of Rate.	Name of Occupant.	Name of Owner.	Description of Property.	No. of Acres.	Amount at which the Property is to be Assessed.	Amount of Rate to be collected.	Amount in the pound.
				A. R.	£. s. d.	s. d.	d.
June 18, 1841	Gallantree, T.	West, W., Esq.	House and land.	3 3	10 12 9	7 11½	9
Jan. 3, 1842	Gallantree, T.	West, W., Esq.	House and land.	3 3	10 12 9	8 0½	9½
June 23, 1842	Gallantree, T.	West, W., Esq.	House and land.	3 3	10 12 9	5 4	6

The overseers of the poor of the township of South Kilvington called upon the pauper and demanded 7s. 11½d., the first of these rates: the pauper paid 2s., being 9d. in the pound, on 2l. 15s., the amount for which he was assessed for the cottage, before he took the land, and referred the overseer to the landlord, Mr. West, for the rest, who thereupon, in pursuance of his agreement, paid the remaining 5s. 11½d., being also 9d. in the pound, on 7l. 17s. 9d., the residue of 10l. 12s. 9d., at which the house and land were assessed, and of the remaining rates of 8s. 0½d. and 5s. 4d. the tenant respectively paid 2s. and 1s. 4½d., being in one instance a rate of 9½d., and in the other instance a rate of 6d. in the pound, on 2l. 15s., the amount above described as that at which the cottager was assessed before he took the land, and the landlord, in pursuance of his agreement, paid the remainder, the overseers always after the above-mentioned reference by the pauper to Mr. West, applying to him for the rates due in respect of that land. The pauper resided in the township during the whole period of his occupation of the land. By their statement of the grounds of appeal, the appellants relied not only on a renting of a tenement by the pauper within the respondent township, sufficient to give him a settlement there; but also that he had gained a settlement therein, by having in the years 1841 and 1842 been charged with and having paid his share towards the public taxes or levies of the said township of South Kilvington; and the only question disputed between the parties was, whether upon the above facts it could be said that the pauper had paid the poor-rate for a year, during his occupation of the land, so as to satisfy the 66th section of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, or whether he had been charged with and paid his share towards the poor-rate, under the 3 & 4 Will. & M. c. 11. s. 6. The Court of Quarter Sessions held, that the payment of the poor-rate by the landlord, in consequence of the agreement between him and the pauper, was a payment of the latter, sufficient to satisfy either of the statutes, and quashed the order by removal. The question for the opinion of this Court was, whether such payment was sufficient under either of those statutes: if the Court should be of opinion that it was, then the order of Sessions to be confirmed; but if it should be of opinion that it was not, then the order of Sessions to be quashed (1).

Bliss and Wharton, in support of the order of Sessions. — The payment was substantially a payment by the tenant—The King v. Bridgewater (2). The King v. Weobley (3) is clearly distinguishable, as the rate which was paid by the collector, was not deducted from the salary of the pauper. The payment may be considered as made by the hand of the landlord—The King v. Hope Mansell (4), The King v. Okehampton (5), The King v. Bramley (6), and The King v. Axmouth (7). Such a payment would be considered as having been made with sufficient authority, even under the Municipal Corporation Act—The King v. the Mayor of Bridgnorth (8). The pauper, being the actual occupier, also complied with the provision of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 66, by paying the rates—The King v. St. Nicholas, Rochester (9), and The King v. St. Nicholas, Colchester (10).

Watson and Archbold, contra.—This was neither a good payment of rates within 3 Will. & M. c. 11. s. 6, nor under 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. An act of parliament must be con-

By 35 Geo. 3. c. 101. s. 4, no person who shall come into any parish, &c., shall gain a settlement in such parish, &c., by being charged with and paying their share towards the public taxes and levies of such parish, &c., for and on account, or in respect of any tenement not being of the yearly value of 10l.; and see 6 Geo. 4. c. 57. s. 2.

4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 66—"No settlement shall be acquired or completed by occupying a tenement, unless the person occupying the same shall have been assessed to the poor-rate, and shall have paid the same in respect of such tenement for one year."

strued according to its express words: by both of the acts it is necessary that the party should be charged with "and pay" the rates in order to gain a settlement. Here, the landlord did not pay the rates as the agent of the pauper, from time to time, but paid the rates as they were made, in respect of the land, by virtue of a contract antecedent to any assessment. The case of The King v. Weobley cannot be distinguished from the present.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The arrangement as to the payment is only a question between the landlord and the pauper: if the landlord did not pay, the pauper, the tenant, would have been liable.]

Similar questions have arisen with respect to payment of rent, under 1 Will. 4. c. 18. s. 1, in which it has been held, that payment out of a fund over which the party had no controul at the time, was no payment by him—The King v. Pakefield (11), The Queen v. Melsonby (12). In The King v. Bridgewater, the payment was made by money borrowed for the purpose, which is the same thing as payment by a party's own money.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think it is clear that no settlement was gained in this case. The case of The King v. Weobley is decisive.

Order of Removal—Quashing for Defect in Examinations—Special Entry of "Not on the Merits."

After an appeal against an order of removal had been entered and respited, the respondents served the appellants with a notice that they, the respondents, had abandoned the order, on the ground that the examinations were defective, and that they intended to apply at the ensuing sessions to quash the order upon a special entry, "Quashed not upon the merits;" and also, that they were ready to pay the appellants all reasonable costs already incurred by them, and all costs of maintenance; and that all future costs, incurred in proceeding to try the appeal, would be at their own peril.

At the ensuing sessions the appellants applied to have the appeal heard, and the order quashed generally; but the Sessions quashed the order, with a special entry in the above form, allowing the appellants their costs up to the time of the notice of abandonment, and the costs of coming to the sessions:—Held, that the Sessions had done right, and that there was no ground for a mandamus to them to hear the appeal.

On the 22nd of April 1843, an order was made under the hands and seals of two of the Justices of the West Riding, for the removal of Ann Auckland, widow of James Auckland, and her two children, from Thorne to Pontefract. The examinations, on which the order was made, were sent, together with the order, to the churchwardens and overseers of Pontefract, and the paupers were afterwards actually removed. At the General Quarter Sessions at Rotherham, held on the 3rd of July 1843, the churchwardens and overseers of Pontefract entered and respited an appeal against the said order.

On the 3rd of August the overseers of Thorne served the overseers of Pontefract with the following notice:—

"To the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, township, or place of Pontefract, in the West Riding of Yorkshire.

"In the matter of an appeal, wherein the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, township, or place of Pontefract, in the said riding, are appellants, and the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Thorne, in the said riding, are respondents. Whereas, under and by virtue of an order, &c., Ann Auckland, widow, &c., were removed from the parish of Thorne aforesaid, to the parish, township, or place of Pontefract aforesaid, as the place of their last legal settlement. And whereas, since the said removal and the entry of the said appeal against the said order of removal, we have discovered and are satisfied that the examinations, on which the said order of removal was granted, are defective and insufficient to support the said order of removal on the trial of the said appeal. Now, we, the undersigned, being the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of Thorne, do hereby give you, and each and every of you, notice that we have abandoned, and do hereby abandon, the said order of removal; and that at the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace to be holden, by adjournment, at Doncaster, in and for the said West Riding, we shall apply to the said Court of Quarter Sessions to quash the said order of removal, upon a special entry, 'Quashed not upon the merits.' And we further give you notice, that we are now ready and willing to pay to you, the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish, township, or place of Pontefract, all reasonable costs already incurred by you in the matter of the said appeal, together with all costs incurred by you for the maintenance and support of the said paupers, since the execution of the said order of removal; and lastly, we further give you notice, that all future costs to be incurred by you, in prosecuting and trying the said appeal, will be so incurred at your own peril.

On the 29th of September, the churchwardens, &c. of Pontefract caused the churchwardens, &c. of Thorne to be served with a notice of trial of the appeal, at the ensuing Quarter Sessions; and at the same time duly served a statement of the grounds of appeal. At the ensuing Sessions the counsel for the appellants claimed a right to have the appeal heard, or if the Court should quash the order without hearing the appeal, and made a special entry, the purport of such special entry should be according to the truth of the case, that the examination was defective, in not sufficiently disclosing a settlement in Pontefract; and they further contended, that a decision, quashing the order under such circumstances, would be a decision on the very merits of the case, and that it would be highly improper, when the facts, as above stated, were all conceded and agreed on, to make an entry, that the order was quashed, not on the merits. After hearing both sides, the chairman stated it to be the opinion of the majority of the Court, that a decision quashing the order, under the facts stated, was a decision on the merits, and that no such special entry ought to be made; but that finding, from the clerk of the peace, that the practice of making such special entry, and so discharging orders on payment of costs by the respondents to the appellants, with the intention of enabling the respondents again to remove, if they could obtain a better examination, had latterly prevailed in cases in which a similar notice of abandonment had been served, therefore, though the Court thought the practice wrong, they decided to abide by the same, until the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench could be obtained for their guidance on the subject. The order of the Sessions, therefore, was, that the order of removal should be discharged, "not on the merits," and that the costs of the appellants, to the time of the service of the notice of abandonment, and the costs of coming to the Sessions, to be taxed, &c., should be paid to them by the respondents; and the said order was so entered and recorded.

On an affidavit stating those facts,

Pashley moved for a rule nisi for a mandamus to the Justices of the West Riding, commanding them to enter continuances and hear the appeal: he cited The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex (1).

[COLERIDGE, J.—According to your statement, the Sessions may have come to a wrong decision, but they reserve no case for our opinion. Why should the Sessions hear your witnesses after the order was quashed?]

The appellants ought not to be prejudiced by the respondents not calling evidence—The King v. the Justices of the West Riding (2). In The Queen v. Townstall (3) and The Queen v. Stayley (4), the Court decided that appellants had a right to go to the Sessions for their costs (5).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me, that the Sessions in this case were perfectly right. The question was not, whether the order of Magistrates was good or not; but when the respondents said to the appellants, "now that we are aware that our examinations are defective, we are ready to pay you your reasonable costs," it was the appellants' duty to find out what a fair amount of costs would be; and if the amount the respondents were ready to pay was a reasonable amount, they should have consented to the abandonment. The Sessions may well have considered that it was against good faith to attempt to try the appeal after a fair proposition of this kind. Here the Sessions have decided in your favour, but add, that it is not on the merits. They may properly make such an entry. No doubt, the appellant parish have a right to enforce the quashing of an improper order, but if they proceed after such a notice as this, they must take the chance of the result.

WILLIAMS, J.—The appellants have insisted on being heard, and have what amounts to a decision in their favour, on the question in dispute.

1843. } THE QUEEN v. THE RECORDER

Bastard—Order of Filiation—Costs of resisting application for—By whom payable—Hearing, What amounts to.

The churchwardens and overseers of the parish of O, in the city of Exeter, applied at the Sessions for an order of filiation upon N. T., as the putative father of a bastard child chargeable to the parish of O. The application was resisted in limine, on the ground, that by a local act of parliament, certain persons were incorporated for the management of the poor of the city of E, and that the application should have been made by them, and not by the churchwardens and overseers. The Court of Quarter Sessions, being of that opinion, made no order of filiation, but refused to order that N. T.'s costs should be paid by the churchwardens and overseers of O:—Held, that these churchwardens and overseers were the parties liable to pay the costs, and that the Court would grant a mandamus to compel the Court of Quarter Sessions to make the order for costs.

Held, also, that the application and its dismissal, as above stated, was a sufficient hearing of the application within the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 73.

Rule, calling on the recorder of the city and county of the city of Exeter, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to him, commanding him to cause continuances to the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be held in and for the said city and county, to be entered, upon the application of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Olave, in the said city and county, at the last General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the same, for an order upon Nicholas Tuckett, for the support and maintenance of a bastard child, born of the body of A. D, single woman, and at such next General Quarter Sessions to make an order for the costs and charges of the said Nicholas Tuckett, incurred in resisting the said application to be paid by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said parish of St. Olave.

From the affidavits on which this rule was granted, it appeared that Nicholas Tuckett, on the 4th of October 1843, was served with a notice signed by the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of St. Olave, in the city of Exeter, of their intention to apply to the Justices in petty session, at the Guildhall of that city, on the 11th of October, for an order of filiation upon him, under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85, as the putative father of a bastard child, born on the body of the said A. D, and chargeable to the said parish of St. Olave. Tuckett attended at the petty sessions according to the notice, and the churchwardens and overseers of St. Olave likewise appeared by their attorney; and Tuckett, under the provisions of the 3rd section of the above act, entered into a recognizance with two sureties, to appear at the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be holden in and for the city and county of the city of Exeter, to answer the charge and abide the judgment of the Court, and to pay the costs incurred by the churchwardens and overseers in bringing the said charge before the Court, in case, &c.

The parties appeared at the Sessions for the city and county of Exeter, and on the case being opened on the part of the churchwardens and overseers, a preliminary objection was taken on behalf of Tuckett, that the churchwardens and overseers were not the proper parties to make the application, as the parish of St. Olave was a parish having guardians within the meaning of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 109, as to which it appeared, that by a local act, 8 & 9 Will. 3, certain persons were incorporated for the management of the poor of the city of Exeter, under the name of the "Governor, Deputy Governor, Assistants, and Guardians of the Poor of the City and County of Exeter." And The Queen v. James (1) and The Queen v. the Justices of Wiltshire (2), were referred to. The recorder was of opinion, that the notice, not having been given by the corporation of the Governor, &c. of the Poor, was not sufficient, and refused the application.

Costs were then applied for on behalf of Tuckett, under 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 73, which section, it was insisted, was imperative, but the recorder refused to make any order for costs, and an order of Session was formally drawn up, which, after reciting, that it had been certified to the Court, that at a petty session, &c., (setting out the application, the appearance of the defendant at such petty session, and the recognizances, &c.) and that the said Court of Quarter sessions had proceeded to hear the said application of the said churchwardens and overseers, the said order concluded as follows:—"Now this Court, upon the hearing of such application, having heard all the parties concerned and their counsel, and being of opinion that the said churchwardens and overseers of the parish of St. Olave aforesaid are not the proper parties to make the application, doth not think fit to make any order thereon; and this Court doth refuse to order and direct that the costs and charges incurred by the said N. Tuckett, in resisting the said application, shall be paid by the churchwardens and overseers."

Merivale, on moving for the rule, cited the following cases—The Queen v. James, The Queen v. the Justices of Wiltshire, The Queen v. Stamper (3), The King v. Cawston (4), St. Mary, Nottingham v. Kirklington (5).

Greenwood shewed cause.—If the churchwardens and overseers were not the proper parties to make the application, which, for the purpose of this rule, it must be taken they were not, neither are they the proper parties to pay costs, and the recorder was, therefore, right in refusing to make the order. The words of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 73. are, if upon the hearing of such application, the Court shall not think fit to make any order thereon, it shall order and direct that costs of the party intended to be charged, shall be paid by "such overseers or guardians." Those words can only refer to those overseers or guardians, who, by the act, are directed to make the application under the act in question, modified as it has been by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85. It is clear, that the words would not apply, if the application had been made by a party who was neither churchwarden, guardian, nor overseer, for instance, the woman herself, or the master of the workhouse; and incapacity admits of no degrees.

[WILLIAMS, J.—According to your argument, the more unfounded the application, the less the liability to costs.]

[COLERIDGE, J.—Will not the word "such" be satisfied by construing it, such as made the application?]

The parties who are to apply, are defined by the statute. Then secondly, there has been no hearing; hearing means going into the merits. The Queen v. Stamper is distinguishable; there, the right party was before the Court; here, the recorder refused to hear the application, as it was made by a wrong party. Suppose a mandamus issued to the Judge. It could not be said, that what took place was a hearing—The King v. the Justices of Gloucestershire (6). In The King v. Cawston the appeal was actually allowed.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me, that the words of the act fully warrant a decision that in every view meets the justice of the case. Parties improperly bring a man before the Justices, upon an application which fails. It would be too much to say that they are not the parties liable to pay the costs incurred in meeting the application.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of the same opinion, on the express words of the statute. On one side, is an overseer making the application, and on the other, the party resisting it: there is then a hearing, and the Court make no order: the party resisting is entitled to his costs against the party making the application.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am quite of the same opinion. I think there was a hearing in this case, and with reference to that point, I should decline adopting the test proposed, namely, would a mandamus lie to compel a hearing? The words of the 73rd section are, "if upon hearing, the Court shall not think fit to make any order thereon, it shall make an order for the costs."

WIGHTMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion. As soon as the parties come before the Sessions, there is, in effect, a hearing.

Bridge, Repair of—Evidence—Indictment, Insufficiency of.

Upon an indictment against the inhabitants of a township, charging them with the repair of a bridge, by a prescriptive liability, the declaration of an inhabitant of the township is admissible in evidence against the township, on the ground that he is a party to the record, although he be not a rated inhabitant.

The indictment stated, that from time whereof, &c., there hath been and still is, a certain common and public bridge, &c. (describing it), and that one part of the said bridge lies in the township of A, and was out of repair, and that the inhabitants of the township of A, from time whereof, &c., have repaired, and have been used and accustomed to repair, &c. the said part of the bridge in the township of A. It appeared in evidence that the part of the bridge in the township of A. consisted of part of the centre arch of the bridge, and of three other arches, and that about the year 1806, the township of A. had widened the part of the centre arch which was in A. about six feet, making it about fifteen feet in width, instead of nine. The other arches in A. remained unaltered:—Held, that the indictment, charging a prescriptive liability to repair the bridge, was sufficient, as at all events the township still remained liable for the ancient part.

Semble, per Lord Denman, C.J. and Patteson, J., that the widening of the bridge was only in the nature of a repair, and did not so far alter the character of the bridge as to enable the township to throw the repair of the new part upon the county.

The indictment stated, that on the 22nd of December 1841, there was, and from time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, there hath been, and continually hitherto there hath been, and still is, a certain common and public bridge over the river Cherwell, commonly called "Nell Bridge," lying and being in a certain common highway, &c., for all the liege subjects, &c., on foot, and with their coaches, horses, carts, and carriages, upon and over the said bridge, to go, return, pass and repass, ride, and labour at their free will and pleasure; and that one part of the said bridge lies and is situate in the township of Adderbury East, in the county of Oxford, and the other part of the said bridge lies and is situate in the parish of Aynho, in the county of Northampton, and that the said part of the said bridge which lies and is situate in the township of Adderbury East, in the parish of Adderbury aforesaid, in the county of Oxford aforesaid, on the 22nd of December 1841, and continually from thence, until &c., was and yet is broken, ruinous, dangerous, and in great decay, for want of needful and necessary upholding, maintaining, amending, and repairing the same, so that the liege subjects cannot pass, &c. as they ought. It then charged, "That the inhabitants of the township of Adderbury East aforesaid, from time whereof, &c., have repaired and amended, and have been used and accustomed to repair and amend, and of right ought to have repaired and amended, and still of right ought to repair and amend the said part of the said bridge which lies and is situate in the said township of Adderbury East, in the parish of Adderbury aforesaid, in the county of Oxford aforesaid, when and so often as it hath been or shall be necessary." It then charged the non-repair, &c. The second count called the bridge a horse-bridge, and the third count a foot-bridge, and charged the inhabitants of the township of Adderbury East with the same prescriptive liability.

Plea—Not guilty.

At the trial, before Parke, B., at the Summer Assizes for the county of Warwick, 1842, it appeared, that the bridge, called Nell Bridge, crossed the river Cherwell; that a part of the centre arch of the bridge was situate in the county of Northampton, and that the other part of the centre arch and all the rest of the bridge, including three other arches, was situate in the township of Adderbury East, in the county of Oxford; that the Oxfordshire part of the bridge, on the day laid in the indictment, was out of repair; and that the township of Adderbury East had its own officers, distinct from any other hamlet or township, or from the parish of Adderbury. It further appeared, that about the year 1805 or 1806, the main or centre arch of the bridge, both in Oxfordshire and Northamptonshire, had been widened from nine to sixteen feet, while the remainder of the arches, on the Oxfordshire side, remained unwidened, and as they were before. In 1840 and 1841, and up to the time of the trial of the indictment, William Gardiner was one of the churchwardens, and James Gardiner, the surveyor of the highways of the township of Adderbury East. They both lived in a house in the township, but there was no evidence to shew they were rated to any rates of the township. A witness proved, that in 1841 he had called upon and seen the Gardiners upon the subject of the repair of the Oxfordshire part of the bridge, by Adderbury East, who stated, that the township of Adderbury had always repaired the bridge, and that they were willing to give any information upon the subject. They also produced certain books, which they said were the parish books, and which were in their custody, containing disbursements for repairs done to the bridge in several years by the township, commencing in 1771. In the year 1806, when the bridge was widened, the expense incurred by the township was 69*l*.

It was objected, on the part of the defendants, that the declarations made by the Gardiners were not receivable in evidence, as they were not shewn to have been rated inhabitants, and might therefore have been called as witnesses; and that even if they were rated, they were competent witnesses for the Crown, since the statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26. Secondly, it was objected that the indictment, which charged a prescriptive liability in the inhabitants of the township to repair a certain common and public bridge, which had existed from time immemorial, was not supported by the evidence, which shewed that a considerable portion of the bridge, mentioned in the indictment, namely, to the extent in part of six feet in width, had been made so recently as the year 1805 or 1806.

The learned Judge admitted the evidence, and declined to stop the case upon the objection to the indictment, but gave the defendants leave to move to enter a verdict upon this point. The defendants were found guilty.

A rule having been obtained by Hayes, to enter a verdict for the defendants, and also for a new trial, on the ground, that the declarations should not have been received,—

The Solicitor General (Sir W. W. Follett), Adams, Serj., and Humfrey, shewed cause.—First, the declarations made by the Gardiners were properly received. The indictment was substantially against all the inhabitants of the township. They were all charged with this prescriptive liability. All the inhabitants, therefore, were parties to this record, and had such an interest that none of them could be compelled to give evidence against the township. The Gardiners were officers of the township, and inhabitants, and, being parties to the record as defendants, their declarations were on that ground admissible against the township. The Gardiners were not less defendants, because they were not shewn to be rated. If the township was properly charged in this indictment, (as the jury have found it was,) all the inhabitants, and not those only who were rated, were the defendants. It may be, that in appeals, the rated inhabitants are the substantial parties—The King v. the Inhabitants of Woburn (1); but that case also decides, that the real parties whoever they may be, cannot be compelled to give evidence against themselves; and, therefore, their declarations are admissible—The King v. the Inhabitants of Harderick (2). The case of The Mayor of London v. Long (3) was relied upon by the defendants; but that was the case of a declaration by an individual member of a corporation, which was held not admissible to affect the corporation aggregate. They also cited on this point Worrall v. Jones (4), and Marsden v. Stansfield (5). Secondly, the defendants are not entitled to have a verdict entered for them, on account of any misdescription of the bridge in the indictment. It is said, that the indictment charges the township with the repair of this bridge by immemorial liability, and that the indictment is not supported by the evidence, because as to one arch of the bridge, it has been proved to have been widened in modern times. The indictment treats it as an ancient bridge; and unquestionably the greater part of it is so. As to three of the arches, there has been no alteration at all, and the evidence proved that the whole was out of repair. The township, therefore, would at all events be liable to repair the old part, and as to that, at least, the indictment is supported. But as the evidence shewed that the township had widened the bridge, it may be very questionable if they are not bound to maintain the new part, as the inhabitants of a county are not bound to widen a public bridge—The King v. the Inhabitants of Devon (6), and probably not to repair one widened by others unless necessarily widened for public utility—The King v. the Inhabitants of the West Riding of Yorkshire (7). If the township is not liable to repair the new part, as well as the old, this indictment would not at a future time be conclusive against it, as to the whole, as it would be competent for the inhabitants to shew what part they had repaired. They also cited The King v. the Inhabitants of the County of Devon (8).

Kelly and Hayes, contra. — It is for those who seek to make use of these declarations to shew, that the parties making them are parties to the record. It is said, that they lived in a house in the parish, but that was not enough to shew them householders. They might have been lodgers only, or servants. It should have been distinctly shewn, that when they made the declarations they were householders.

[PATTESON, J.—The evidence is, that when the declarations were made, one was churchwarden and the other surveyor.]

But if from their situation as parties to the record, they would, in general cases, have been incompetent, that was not so here, as by the statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26, they were not only made competent witnesses, but their ability to refuse was also removed. Section 2. provides, that no churchwarden, overseer, or other officer for any parish, township, or union, or any person rated or assessed, or liable to be rated or assessed, shall be disabled or prevented from giving evidence on any trial, appeal, or other proceeding, by reason only of his being a party to such trial, appeal, or other proceeding, or of his being liable to costs in respect thereof, when he shall be only a nominal party to such trial, appeal, or other proceeding, and shall only be liable to contribute to such costs, in common with other the rate-payers of such parish, township, or union. If, therefore, they were made competent by this act, the ground upon which their declarations might have been previously admissible is gone. Secondly, the indictment was not supported, and the defendants were entitled to an acquittal. The indictment charges the township with the repair of the whole bridge, by prescription; but they cannot be liable by prescription for the widened part, even though they made it. The whole is but one bridge; and no measurement is given in restriction of the liability of the defendants.

[PATTESON, J.—This was widened by the township itself. It is not so clear, that it is not liable for the new part.]

The county would be liable for the new part—The King v. the West Riding of Yorkshire, The King the Inhabitants of Middlesex (9).

[PATTESON, J.—In the former of those two cases, the character of the bridge had been altered.]

The allegations in the indictment must be taken to refer to the whole of the structure in Oxfordshire, and a verdict against the defendants would conclude them as to all.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It does not appear that the act of Victoria that has been referred to, deprives the Crown in this case from using the declarations of the two inhabitants. That act removes any disability that existed to a party being a witness, on the grounds, either that he was rated, or a nominal party to the trial or other proceeding. He is not on that ground to be incompetent; but as a party, he still cannot be compelled to give evidence against himself; and, therefore, his admissions or declarations are receivable. Upon the second point, the question is, whether there is any misdescription of the bridge in the indictment. I think there is none; and we do all we can in favour of the township, if it is admitted that on a future occasion they may be allowed to excuse themselves, if they can do so, from any liability in respect of the more modern part of the bridge; but as has been observed in the course of the argument, as the widening of the bridge was their act, it may be very questionable whether they may not be bound to repair that part also. The indictment alleges, that there was and is a common public bridge, and that from time immemorial the inhabitants of the township have repaired it. If, notwithstanding the widening the whole bridge must still be considered the ancient bridge, the indictment is supported; but if the township can excuse themselves as to the new part, there is still the ancient bridge, and the township could shew the extent to which they were liable. I am of opinion, therefore, that there is no misdescription, and that the rule must be discharged.

PATTESON, J.—I am of the same opinion. The first point, when considered, does not depend upon whether the parties, whose declarations were received, were rated inhabitants of the township or not, but whether they were parties to the record. I do not understand why they should the less be so, though they are not rated. To what are they to be rated? It cannot be in the power of a parish or township to relieve individuals from a burthen of this nature, by not putting their names upon a rate. Upon an indictment of this kind against a parish, every inhabitant of the parish is liable: each and every inhabitant is a defendant upon the record, and although it may be that by some statutes an inhabitant may be called on behalf of the others against the Crown, it by no means necessarily follows, that the Crown could by subpoena compel him to give evidence against himself. If that is so, his declaration may be given in evidence against him, as the admission of a party to the record. Upon the other point, I am inclined to think, (though it is not necessary to decide the point,) that the township, under these circumstances, would be liable for the added, as well as the old part of the bridge. The Middlesex case was very different. There the character of the bridge was altered. Here, I much doubt whether the widening is anything more than a repair. But supposing the township not to be liable for the whole, then the question arises, whether the indictment is supported.—[His Lordship read the allegations.]—It is said, the defendants are not liable for the added part, as it is no part of the ancient common bridge, to which only the prescription attaches. If that is so, then the statement in the indictment does not include that part, but only the ancient bridge.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of the same opinion. The admissibility of the declarations depends upon the fact, of whether the persons making them were parties to the record, which again depends upon whether they were inhabitants or not. They were proved to be inhabitants, and as such, were parties, inasmuch as any fine imposed might be exacted from all or any of the inhabitants. Upon the other point, I think it is no objection to this indictment, that possibly the evidence not only shewed such a bridge as is set out and described in the indictment, but something more.

COLERIDGE, J.—I think we should give a wider extent to the act of Victoria than was intended, if we were to put upon it the interpretation contended for. The 1st section prevents the incompetency of persons, as witnesses, from the fact of their being rated inhabitants, or liable to be rated. The 2nd section enables actual parties to be witnesses. But neither section provides, that persons who are parties to the record shall be compelled to give evidence against themselves. Secondly, are the allegations in the indictment proved? The material allegations state this to be an ancient common bridge. The evidence shewed it was such a bridge, to which something had been done. Then, either all is still the ancient bridge, and the liability of the township is extended to the whole, or the new part must be severed, and then there is the ancient bridge, and something more. In whichever way, therefore, it is received, are not the allegations in the indictment proved?

1843. } THE QUEEN v. THOMAS BAMBER
Nov. 15. } THE YOUNGER.

Highway, Non-repair of—Destruction of Way by encroachment of the Sea.

Where, on an indictment for the non-repair of a highway, ratione tenuræ, the jury found specially that the original way adjoined the sea, which had encroached upon and carried away a portion of the land over which the highway went, and part of the lands in respect of the tenure of which the liability to repair the way attached, and that the defendant had from time to time appropriated other portions of his lands in lieu of such parts as had been washed away; and that, shortly before the period mentioned in the indictment, the sea had made another encroachment, and swept away a large portion of the road altogether, and had left the rest so narrow on the brow of a cliff as to be impassable:—Held, that this finding did not warrant a judgment for the Crown.

Error from the Lancashire Quarter Sessions.

The indictment stated, that, from time whereof, &c. there was and yet is a certain common and public highway, leading from the hamlet and village of Blackpool, in the county of Lancaster, towards and unto the hamlet and village of Bispham with Warbreck, in the said county, used for and by all the liege subjects, &c. with their horses, carts, and carriages, at their free will, &c. And that a certain part of the said common public highway, lying and being in the township of Layton with Warbreck, in the said county, commencing at a certain gate in the road, then abutting on the boundary between the township of B. with N. aforesaid, and the township of L. with W. for the space of 131 yards, and of the length of 131 yards, and of the breadth of 6 yards, on the 1st of June, A.D. 1842, and from thence, &c., was and yet is very ruinous, broken, and in great decay for want of due restoration, reparation, and amendment of the same, so that the liege subjects, &c. could not go, return, &c. And that Thomas Bamber the younger, of the township of L. with W. aforesaid, husbandman, by reason of his tenure of certain lands and tenements situate in the township of L. with W. aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, called the Gyn, ought to repair and amend that part of the highway aforesaid, so as aforesaid being ruinous, broken, and in decay, when and so often as there should and might be occasion, and that the said defendant had not done the same.

Plea—Not guilty.

The indictment was tried at the Quarter Sessions for Lancashire held at Preston in that county, and the finding of the jury was afterwards turned into the following special verdict:—

The jurors, upon their oath, say, that from time whereof the memory of man is not to the contrary, there have been and still are, (except and subject as hereinafter mentioned,) certain ancient lands and tenements situate in the township of Layton with Warbreck aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, called the Gyn, being the said lands and tenements in the said indictment mentioned, and by reason of the said Thomas Bamber the younger's tenure whereof it is by the said indictment supposed that the said Thomas Bamber the younger ought to restore, repair, and amend the said part of the said highway so being ruinous, broken, and in decay as aforesaid; and the same ancient lands and tenements have, during all the time aforesaid, belonged unto and been holden by the same Thomas Bamber the younger, and those whose estate he now hath, and at the taking of the said indictment had, of and in the same, and still belong to, and are holden by, the same Thomas Bamber the younger (except and subject to, as hereinafter mentioned), but that the same township of Layton with Warbreck adjoins to the sea coast, and is liable to encroachments by the sea, and that the sea has from time to time, within living memory, made encroachments in and upon the said ancient lands and tenements, and carried away the soil and earth of the same, so that part of the same space anciently occupied by the said ancient lands and tenements, was at the time of the taking of the said indictment, and now is, occupied by the sea; and that there was, from time immemorial, and now is, (except and subject as hereinafter mentioned,) a certain ancient common and public highway, leading and used as in the said indictment mentioned, and part whereof passed and passes over the said ancient lands and tenements; and that from time immemorial (subject and except as aforesaid, and as hereinafter mentioned), the same Thomas Bamber the younger, and all those whose estate he now hath, and at the taking of the said indictment had, of and in the said ancient lands and tenements, have restored, repaired, and amended, and ought of right to have restored, repaired, and amended, and he, the said Thomas Bamber the younger, ought now to repair and amend so much of the same highway as passes or passed over the said ancient lands and tenements, and that the encroachments of the sea have, within living memory, from time to time extended into and over the said ancient highway, so that a portion of the land over which the same ancient highway went, now is, and at the time of the taking of the said indictment was covered by the sea and impassable, wherefore those whose estate the same Thomas Bamber the younger now hath as aforesaid, have from time to time gradually removed the same ancient highway and appropriated other parts of the said ancient lands and tenements for the site thereof, so as to keep the same along, but on the landward side of, the sea coast, and so that the public have had the uninterrupted use of a road for the purposes of the said ancient highway, and that the same road hath always been repaired by the said Thomas Bamber the younger and those whose estate he hath as aforesaid, as or in lieu of so much of the said ancient highway; and that the said part of the said common and public highway mentioned in the said indictment, and supposed thereby to be ruinous, broken, and in decay, was at that time, when the same is by the same indictment supposed so to be ruinous, broken, and in decay, and still is, part of the said ancient highway so going and passing over the said ancient lands and tenements called the Gyn, and used by the public as aforesaid, though going and passing over a different part of the same ancient lands and tenements from that formerly occupied by any part of the said ancient road, and now occupied by the sea as aforesaid; and that in the month of March last the sea made an encroachment in and upon the same part of the said common and public highway so supposed by the said indictment to be ruinous, broken, and in decay, and washed and carried away large quantities of the earth and soil thereof, and that the same part of the said common and public highway then and there became and was and ever since hath been uneven and very ruinous, broken, and in great decay, for want of due restoration, reparation, and amendment of the same, so that the liege subjects of the Queen, during the time last aforesaid, could not go, return, pass, repass, and labour with their horses, carts, and carriages, along and over the same highway as they ought and were accustomed to do, in manner and form as in the said indictment specified, and that the said Thomas Bamber the younger hath not restored the same, but that a portion of the same part of the same highway now has, and ever since the said month of March last past, had the earth and soil thereof washed away by the sea, and was and is made impassable, and the residue of the said road thereby became, and was, and is too narrow for passage, and was made to stand, and now stands, at the edge of a precipitous bank of the depth of seventy feet, or thereabouts, and shelving down to the sea at an angle to the horizon of forty-five degrees, or thereabouts, and it would cost a very great sum of money to make a passable road over the same space that was occupied by such road up to the month of March last past. But whether, &c.

Upon this finding the Court of Quarter Sessions directed a verdict to be entered for the Crown, and adjudged the defendant to pay a fine of 1s.

Error being brought on this judgment, the case was now argued by—

Cowling, for the plaintiff in error (the defendant below).—The judgment of the Court below is erroneous. If the defendant is liable, he would be equally so if all the lands were washed away. The Court cannot give judgment against the defendant on this verdict: the facts are not stated with sufficient precision. The prosecutor should make out,—first, that this is an ancient highway; secondly, the defendant's liability; thirdly, his default. But, first, there is no proof of such a highway as alleged. The jury find that the public have a right over the highway, "subject and except:" that means, subject and except as to that part washed away. If the ancient line of road was subject to change from time to time, the same road cannot be said to have been used as a highway from the time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and it is a particular line which the indictment charges to be out of repair. The present line of road is distinctly found by the verdict to have been made in modern times. Secondly, the defendant's liability to repair the old line is not found; on the contrary, it is found that the defendant provided a new line as the old one was washed away from time to time. The indictment should have been then for not providing a new road, but the special verdict does not state that he has not done this, and the public, for anything that appears, may now have a road somewhere over the defendant's lands. Thirdly, this being a special verdict, the Court is tied down to the facts found in it: how is it found that the road is ruinous, &c.? It is found that the encroachment of the sea has carried away the road. A party bound to repair a road ratione tenuræ, is not liable to repair in such a case. His liability extends to making good damage that has happened to the surface, but he is not liable to repair a sea bank, which is, in substance, sought to be imposed upon him. It appears that the bank is sixty or seventy feet high; and where is the liability to restore such a bank found? It would, at any rate, be a question for the Commissioners of Sewers—The King v. the Commissioners of Sewers for Essex (1). The length of the bank should be kept in repair by the occupiers of the level fronting the sea. The only case in which such a question has arisen is The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Paul (2). In that case a parish was indicted for the non-repair of a road which had been made on a quay or wall, and which the sea had washed away; and Maule, J. observed, that the interruption of the passage was not from the want of repair, but from the sea having washed away the wall or embankment, and that there was no longer anything for them to repair, and directed an acquittal. This being against an individual, the case is still stronger.

Baines (Drinkwater was with him), for the Crown.—It is not necessary to allege that the highway has existed from time immemorial, or to prove it if alleged—2 Saund. 158, d, Dyer, fol. 33, The King v. Jones (3), The King v. Hollingberry (4). It being shewn that the defendant was liable to repair the old road, the same liability would attach with respect to the substituted road—1 Hawk. P.C. c. 76. s. 10. The jury find, in effect, that a portion of the road is washed away by the sea; but if that be so, the entire width is to be made out from Bamber's land. Besides, according to the case of The King v. the Commissioners of Sewers, which was relied on by the defendant, he is primæ facie liable in respect of his sea frontage—Callis on Sewers, ss. 115, 146. He must either shew that some one else is liable, or that the accident was of such a nature that no care or precaution on his part could have guarded against it—Com. Dig. 'Sewer,' E, 3, Keighley's case (5). The last encroachment, which is found to have happened in March last, is not shewn to be sudden, or that there was any extraordinary flood.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—You have not alleged his duty to be to keep out the sea.]

But he is to restore, at all events, and it is not for the prosecutor to negative any exceptions which the law might imply; the defendant must positively allege facts exempting him from liability.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—The road is found to be ruinous because the sea is not kept out, and not for want of due reparation.]

The road is found to be ruinous, and it is not necessary to allege the process by which it became so; in ordinary cases the indictment does not allege that the road has become ruinous, &c. by reason of horses, carts, &c. passing along it: in The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Paul, there was no proof of the liability of the parish at any time to repair the road, or that they had ever done so.

[COLERIDGE, J.—It appears, to me, that you have alleged one species of prescriptive liability, and the special verdict finds another. Suppose the road to be out of repair, would the defendant, by setting out a new line, comply with the prescriptive obligation imposed on him?]

[WIGHTMAN, J.—Do you say that he is to repair the road which is found to be washed away, or to set out a new one?]

He is to restore the road in the line mentioned in the indictment.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—The special verdict finds that half the old road is under water, and it does not find that the defendant has not set out a new road.]

Cowling, in reply, was stopped by the Court.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears that the sea has continually made encroachments, and washed away both the road and a portion of the lands the defendant holds. He is not charged with not setting out a new road out of the rest. I do not rely much on the argument on behalf of the defendant, that the old line is gone; but here it would appear that the whole of the materials are swept away. Is there any authority for saying that a person in such a case is to find a new earth for the rest of mankind to travel upon?

Habeas Corpus—Commitment—Conviction—Statute 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1—Game.

Upon a return to a habeas corpus, the Court will not give any direction or advice to the gaoler, as to the matter of which his return should consist.

A warrant of commitment, directing the gaoler to imprison a party for three months, omitting the day of the month on which it was granted,—held bad.

Semble—a conviction under the statute 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1. ought to state that the defendant entered or was in the close for the purpose of taking game there, and it is not sufficient to follow the words of the statute.

Robert Fletcher the younger, being a prisoner in the custody of the keeper of Cambridge county gaol, obtained a writ of habeas corpus, under which he was now brought into court. The gaoler had made a return, setting forth a warrant, of which the following is a copy:—

County of Cambridge, to wit.—To the constable of Soham, in the county of Cambridge, and to the keeper of the common gaol at Cambridge, in the said county.—Whereas Robert Fletcher the younger, of Soham, in the said county, labourer, is convicted by and before us, the Reverend John Calthorpe, clerk, and ———, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said county, upon the oath of James Cowell, for that he, the said Robert Fletcher the younger, at the parish of Soham, in the said county, with three other persons unknown, in certain lands there situate, in the occupation of William Cornwell, did by night, to wit, after the expiration of the first hour after sunset, on Monday the twenty-third day of October in the year one thousand eight hundred and forty-three, and before the beginning of the first hour before sunrise on the twenty-fourth day of October in the same year, that is to say, about the hour of one in the night of the said twenty-third day of October, unlawfully enter upon the said land with a net, for the purpose of taking game, contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and thereupon we, the said Justices, adjudged the said Robert Fletcher the younger, for his said offence, to be imprisoned in the common gaol at Cambridge, in and for the said county of Cambridge, and there kept to hard labour for the period of three calendar months, and that, at the expiration of such period, he, the said Robert Fletcher the younger, find sureties by recognizances as hereinafter mentioned. These are therefore to require you, the said constable, to apprehend and forthwith convey the said Robert Fletcher the younger to the said common gaol at Cambridge aforesaid, and deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this precept: and you, the said keeper, are hereby commanded to receive the said Robert Fletcher the younger into your custody in the said common gaol, there to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for the period of three calendar months, and if, at the expiration of such period, the said Robert Fletcher the younger shall not find sureties by recognizance, himself in the sum of 10*l.*, and two sureties in the sum of 5*l.* each, or one surety in the sum of 10*l.*, conditioned that the said Robert Fletcher the younger shall not so offend again for the space of one year next following, then that you, the said keeper, further imprison the said Robert Fletcher the younger in your custody at Cambridge aforesaid, and there to be kept at hard labour for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties shall be sooner found. Given under our hands and seals, the — day of October, in the year of our Lord 1843.

John Calthorp, (L. s.)

The return did not state that the gentlemen were Magistrates.

Biggs Andrews moved that the return should be filed; whereupon—

Worlledge, on behalf of the committing Magistrates, applied to the Court to direct the gaoler to substitute for this another return, setting forth not merely the warrant of commitment, but also a good and valid conviction under 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1.—the Night Poaching Act—the gaoler having expressed his readiness to make any return the Court should direct, but declining to alter his return without such direction. He referred to The Canadian Prisoners' Case (1), where it was held that the gaoler might substitute a return drawn by counsel, for that originally prepared.

[PATTESON, J.—The gaoler is at liberty to make what return he thinks fit; but the Court will not give him any directions or advice in the matter.]

The return originally prepared was thereupon filed.

Biggs Andrews then stated the following objections to it:—First, that the name of one of the Magistrates was omitted in the body of the warrant of commitment, and it did not therefore appear that the defendant had been properly convicted; secondly, that the time alleged for the commission of the offence was an impossible time; and, thirdly, that the date of the warrant was omitted, it being merely “the — day of October, A.D. 1843.”

PATTESON, J., (stopping Andrews,) called on—

Worlledge.—The omission of the name is immaterial, as the word our, in the attestation, must be taken to refer to us, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Cambridge, in the body of the commitment, and it therefore appears that the two committing Magistrates were the two who convicted. It is unnecessary to set out the names of the convicting Magistrates in the recital of the conviction, so long as it is stated to have been made by two Justices; for if there is reasonable ground to infer, from the commitment, that there has been a valid conviction, the Court will do so—The King v. Rogers (2); and it is to be presumed, in all cases, that a conviction had preceded the commitment—per Lord Lyndhurst, C.B., Daniell v. Phillips (3). It also is to be collected, from the commitment taken altogether, that Mr. Calthorp, at all events, was a Justice of the Peace, and one Justice can commit, though a conviction may require two—3 Geo. 4. c. 23. s. 2. The jurisdiction of the Justices need not expressly appear on the commitment, if it can be collected from the return—per Lord Holt, C.J.—Elderton's case (4), 2 Hale's P.C. 122; and it is clear that, reading the commitment in any way, the conviction has taken place before two Justices, and that Mr. Calthorp was, in fact, a Justice of the Peace. Secondly, the words "about one o'clock on the night of the 23rd of October" may be rejected as surplusage, and a sufficient statement of time remain, as the entry is stated to have been "by night." Thirdly, the omission of the date is immaterial, as it appears that the offence, and conviction, and commitment were all in the month of October, and subsequent to the 23rd; and it is impossible, therefore, that the period of imprisonment can have elapsed. Taking the commitment most strongly in favour of the prisoner, it cannot have been previous to the 24th of October.

From the conviction; but it is immaterial to inquire into that, if it is clear that they have not elapsed, and the prisoner is not, therefore, entitled to his discharge. At all events, it would run from the time the gaoler receives the party, and with that date both parties must be acquainted.

Biggs Andrews, contra.—A commitment is to be construed as strictly as a conviction—In re Peerless (5). Here, reading the conviction as recited, it states that the prisoner was convicted before us, John Calthorp, and ———, two of Her Majesty's Justices; from which it does not appear that J. C. was a Justice: and then there is nothing on the face of the commitment to shew that either of the parties who executed it had jurisdiction, which is a fatal defect—The King v. York (6). The return is silent as to their being Magistrates, and does not supply the fact. The omission of the date is also clearly bad, because the commitment ought to inform the party, and also the gaoler, how long he is to be detained; and it affords him no data for this purpose. As to the suggestion that the gaoler must know when he receives him, and the imprisonment ought to reckon from that time, suppose the constable were to delay conveying him to gaol for a day, or even for a week, that period ought to be included; the prisoner ought not to suffer for the constable's misconduct. It cannot date from the conviction, for it may be that the party may have been at large, and then he ought not to be discharged till he has been imprisoned three months. The conviction is also bad, because it does not shew that the prisoner's purpose was to take game by night in the inclosed land, into which the entry is stated to have been made, which it ought to have done—Davies v. the King (7). It may be that he was traversing land to a distant cover, and then he ought to have a locus penitentiæ.

Worlledge, in answer to this last objection.

—The conviction precisely follows the language of the act of parliament in stating that the prisoner did, by night, enter the inclosed land in question, for the purpose of taking game. The entry by night is the gist of the offence, and the natural meaning of the words "entered a close for the purpose of taking game," must be, that his purpose was to take game in that close. Davies v. the King is no authority for the objection, as there no allegation was inserted that the party was by night in the close for the purpose of taking game, and the judgment of the Court proceeded upon that objection.

PATTESON, J.—I am certainly inclined to think that the last objection which has been raised is valid; but it is unnecessary that I should give any decision upon the point, because I am clearly of opinion that a commitment like this, without a date, is bad. The gaoler ought to be able to ascertain, from the warrant itself, how long he is to detain the person committed by it, and the omission in that respect is fatal. This is a defect arising out of the warrant itself, and such as no conviction, however good, could help. Under these circumstances, I shall give no opinion on the other objections, although, to say the least of it, the omission of the name of the other Magistrate was very slovenly.

1843. { THE QUEEN v. THE INHABIT-
Nov. 18. { ANTS OF CHARLBURY AND WALCOTT.

Examinations—Order of Sessions.*

The Court of Quarter Sessions, on appeal, quashed an order of removal, generally, without going into the evidence, on the ground that the examinations, accompanying the order, were defective and insufficient, by reason of an omission, which the Sessions judged material, and which defect and omission had been specifically pointed out in the statement of grounds of appeal. Another order of removal of the pauper, from the respondent to the appellant parish, was then made, and that order was appealed against, on the ground that the former judgment of the Sessions was conclusive as to the settlement. At the trial of the second appeal, the respondents tendered evidence to shew that the first order was quashed on a preliminary objection to the sufficiency of the examination, and that the merits were not gone into. The Court of Quarter Sessions held, that the former judgment was conclusive, and refused to hear the evidence, and quashed the order:—Held, that the Sessions were right in deciding that their first judgment was conclusive, and that it was not necessary to consider whether their decision on the first occasion was right or not.

Upon an appeal against an order of two Justices, dated the 14th of February 1843, for the removal of Elizabeth Wright, widow, and her four children, from the township of Charlbury and Walcott, to the parish of Bloxham, both in the county of Oxford, the Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court on a case, which, after setting out the order of removal, stated that the first of the grounds of appeal against the order was as follows:—"that a former order, made by the Right Hon. Lord C. and B. W. Esq., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said county of Oxford, bearing date the 15th of October, A.D. 1842, for the removal of Elizabeth Wright, widow, and her four children (naming them), from the said township of Charlbury and Walcott to the parish of Bloxham, was quashed, on appeal, by the Court of the General Quarter Sessions held at Oxford, in and for the county of Oxford, on the 2nd of January, A.D. 1843, and which said order of Court related directly to the settlement of the said Elizabeth Wright and her said four children on the day of the date of the said former order of removal, which is the same settlement now in question between the parties to the present appeal, and is therefore binding and conclusive between them, so far as respects the place of the last legal settlement of the said Elizabeth Wright and her said four children, it not appearing on the copy of the examination of Mary Wright, sent to the appellants (such examination being the only one sent with the order now appealed against), that the said Elizabeth Wright has done any act to gain a settlement since the date of the said former order of removal."

Upon the trial of the present appeal, it appeared that a former order of removal had been made, and had been quashed on appeal, as stated in the grounds of appeal above set out; but it also appeared that such former order had been quashed upon an objection taken in the grounds of appeal against that order, that the examination on which it was founded was defective in not stating the date of the birth of the pauper's husband, and which omission the Court of Quarter Sessions, after hearing the arguments of counsel on both sides, held to be material, and therefore quashed the order, without hearing any evidence, or further going into the case. Upon the trial of the present appeal, a witness was tendered, to prove that at the hearing of the former appeal, the order of removal was quashed upon a preliminary objection to the sufficiency of the pauper's examination, and that the merits of the case were not gone into; but the Court of Quarter Sessions held, that such evidence would not alter their decision, and thereupon, after hearing counsel on both sides, the Court of Quarter Sessions quashed the present order of removal, subject to the opinion of this Court, as to whether the judgment quashing the former order of removal, under the circumstances above stated, was conclusive between the parties, so as to preclude the respondents from removing the paupers again, upon a fresh order, founded upon an amended examination, which supplied the omission in the former one. According to the view taken by the Court of Queen's Bench, the order of Sessions was to be confirmed or quashed, as the Court might direct.

Keating and Pigott, in support of the order of Sessions.—The Sessions, on the first occasion, having held the omission material, their judgment is conclusive—The Queen v. Evenwood and Barony (1). True, that was a case arising on a defect in grounds of appeal, but the same strictness of construction holds with respect to statements of grounds of appeal and examinations—The Queen v. Eastville (2), The Queen v. Old Stratford (3), The Queen v. Clint (4). In this case the defect appears on the face of the examination—The Queen v. Church Knowle (5). The cases of The King v. Wick St. Lawrence (6), and Osgathorpe v. Diseworth (7), are distinguishable, as in each of those cases it was shewn that the judgment was not on the merits as regarded the settlement; here, the omission has been found material, and the decision is on the very merits. No distinction can be drawn between cases where the evidence is insufficient to support the case made in the examination, and those in which it is inadmissible by reason of the insufficiency of the examination.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The burthen of shewing that the decision of the Sessions was right, on the first occasion, is not on you.]

Kelly and Walesby, contra.—When the Court of Quarter Sessions decide erroneously on a preliminary point, this Court will review their decision—The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire (8). Here it appears that the former appeal was stopped, on the ground that the date of the birth of the pauper's husband was not stated in the examination. That was a preliminary objection. It had no reference to the real merits, and the date of the birth might or might not become material in the course of the inquiry. In The Queen v. Evenwood and Barony, the appellants were not allowed to be heard, by reason of a defective statement in the grounds of appeal.

[PATTESON, J.—Does not the rule apply quite as strongly to the case of an examination? If you state a settlement imperfectly, is it not the same thing as stating no settlement at all?]

In all the cases cited on the other side the evidence was gone into.

[PATTESON, J.—Not in the case of The Queen v. Evenwood and Barony.]

In that case, the settlement in the appellant parish was admitted, and it was therefore unnecessary for the respondent to give further evidence. Here the respondents were precluded from going into their case.

[PATTESON, J.—If the examination was insufficient, the hearing the evidence would not have supported the settlement.]

The Sessions, at any rate, should have let in the respondents to shew the ground on which the former order was quashed—The King v. Wheelock (9). They deprived themselves of the means of judging whether it was material or not. Great hardship will arise if parishes are bound by the decision of Sessions on immaterial points, as it has been decided that the appellants have a right to go to the Sessions for their costs—The Queen v. Townstall (10) and The Queen v. Stayley (11); and the Court will not compel the Sessions to make a special entry of the grounds of the judgment—The Queen v. the Justices of Lancashire (12).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The object of the legislature has been to obtain a free and true communication of the facts between the parties. When that is not done, great expense is unnecessarily thrown on the contesting parishes. In this case, the examination on which the order was made, being sent by the respondent parish, the appellants by their grounds of appeal objected, that such examination was defective, in not stating the date of the birth of the pauper's husband. It is clear, that that date might have been very material. The respondents having then notice of this omission, it is in their discretion either to go to the Sessions, or to abandon their order, and proceed to obtain a new one. It is said, indeed, that there would be a difficulty in doing this, as the appellants may enter the appeal at the Sessions, at all events, in order to get their costs, and the order would therefore be quashed in this way. That, however, has nothing to do with the question; costs might be tendered or the amount of them referred to some competent person. In this case, however, the parties do go to the Sessions to take their chance, and the Sessions find the examination insufficient by reason of the omission, which they hold to be material, and the order is quashed. Then there is a second order of removal of the paupers, and when the appeal against this second order comes on for hearing, the Sessions are called upon to make a special entry referring to the former order, to the effect that such former appeal was not decided on the merits. This they refuse to do, and the question whether the former order was conclusive, is that which they submit to us. Whether the omission in the examination was material, we cannot tell. As the pauper was about to be removed to her husband's birth settlement, the date of his birth might be most material in making the case out: at all events, if removing parties choose to abide by the original order when the defect in the examination is pointed out to them, they must abide by the judgment of the Sessions when the case comes to be heard. The case of The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire has been cited, to shew that the Court will compel the Sessions to hear when they refuse a hearing on wrong grounds. That was the case of a mandamus, and we thought that the appellants ought to have been let in to be heard upon the information contained in their grounds of appeal, and that the Sessions improperly refused to hear. In the present case, we must abide by our decision in the case of The Queen v. Evenwood and Barony, and the order of Sessions must, therefore, be confirmed.

PATTESON, J.—Many nice points may, no doubt, be raised for our decision in cases of this nature; and it is said, that decisions on technical grounds increase litigation, but does not the true communication of the facts between the parties lessen the number of appeals? Are there not many cases in which settlements are fixed, merely on the statements contained in the examination and grounds of appeal, without the parties going to the Sessions? If an order of removal is quashed generally, it is competent to the parties to shew upon what ground it was quashed; and if it was quashed on a ground which does not decide the question of the settlement, but on some other objection, the question of settlement may be gone into again, as in the case of Osgathorpe v. Diseworth. But in this case there was an omission in the examination, which was found to be material by the Sessions, and we do not enter into the question whether it was material or not; the Sessions so decided it. Then there is a second order of removal, and upon appeal the respondents say, now we ought to be allowed to go into the grounds on which the first order was quashed. They do state those grounds, and the Sessions hold that their former judgment was conclusive, and only come to us for our opinion, whether they were right on this point. It seems to me, that if the Sessions quash an order by reason of the omission of a material fact in the examination, it comes to the same thing as if they went into the case, and the evidence was defective; and it is in effect like a judgment on a demurrer to the examination, that is to say, admitting all the facts, the examination shews no settlement. If an order quashed for want of evidence is conclusive, it appears to me that an order quashed for a material omission in the examination is also conclusive on the merits. The case of The Queen v. Evenwood and Barony seems to be on all fours with the present case, and upon consideration I agree to the principle established by that case; and that principle is, that wherever there is a material omission, either in an examination or in the statement of grounds of appeal, and that is so decided by the Sessions, and the order is either quashed or confirmed, as the case may be, on that ground, that is a decision on the settlement itself. I think, therefore, that the Sessions decided rightly in this case, and that their former order was conclusive.

WILLIAMS, J.—I entirely concur. It has long been settled, that when an order of removal is quashed, it is conclusive between the same parties on the same state of facts. A decision that a pauper is not chargeable, is not a decision on a mere matter of preliminary form. As soon as fresh relief is given a new state of facts arises, and you may then remove again. In the present case an order is quashed on account of the examination being defective; but, it is contended, that there was not a decision on the merits. What is to be considered a decision on the merits? If an appeal comes on for hearing, whether more or less, and the evidence is insufficient, surely that is a hearing on the merits; here the examination is insufficient, and so stated to be in the grounds of appeal, and is so decided by the Sessions. It cannot, I presume, be said, that in such a case witnesses ought to be called on each side. Surely there has been a hearing; and the Sessions having decided on a matter eminently within their jurisdiction, that is a decision on the merits; and the order being quashed on a hearing on the merits, I think the first judgment was conclusive.

COLERIDGE, J.—I quite agree with the observation of my Brother Patteson, that in consequence of adhering to minuteness and accuracy in the examinations and statements of grounds of appeal, fewer cases are taken to the Sessions; and where an examination is objected to on the ground of insufficiency (not mis-statement), it may be that it does not give sufficient information, which objection stands on the equity of the statute; or it may be, that supposing all the facts are proved, sufficient is not shewn to support a settlement, which stands on the letter of the statute, which forbids parties going out of the grounds stated in their examination. But in either case the Sessions are to decide; and it appears to me that a decision on the examination is as much a decision on the merits, as if the whole facts were proved by the witnesses, and a decision were come to by reason of a defect in the evidence. It is true, that when the Sessions improperly refuse to hear, the Court will interfere by mandamus; but in this case, if they had heard the evidence that was tendered, still the result would have been the same. The respondents do inform the Sessions of the ground on which the first order was quashed; the Sessions say it was on the merits and conclusive: we cannot say that the Sessions were wrong, if, on the facts stated, they may have been right. The date of the birth of the pauper's husband may have been a cardinal point, the proof of his legitimacy might depend upon it; and the appellants should have full opportunity of ascertaining the time of his birth, and other particulars of his history.

Order of Sessions confirmed.

At the hearing of an appeal, the Sessions were of opinion, upon objection taken, that the examinations were insufficient, and quashed the order, but at the request of the respondents, and with a view to enable them to obtain a fresh order, they stated in the order of Sessions, that the order of removal was quashed, "but not on the merits:"—Held, upon a case stated, that the Sessions were not bound to quash the order absolutely, and that this Court would not entertain the question, whether the objection went to the merits of the settlement, though that question was raised on the case, the Sessions having found in terms that they quashed not on the merits.

Upon an appeal against an order of two Justices, dated the 2nd of June, A.D. 1842, for the removal of William Webb, his wife, and four children, from the parish of Thatcham, in the county of Berks, to the parish of Kingsclere, in the county of Southampton, the Sessions quashed the order, "but not on the merits," subject to a case to be stated for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, "whether the insufficiency of the examination of the pauper is a defect of form, or a question of merit." The order of removal was made upon the examination of the pauper, and of Thomas Webb, the brother of the father of the pauper. Thomas Webb stated, that he was sixty years of age, and born in the parish of Kingsclere, where he is a parishioner, and was relieved by that parish upwards of forty years ago; and that his father was also a parishioner of Kingsclere, and received relief of such parish for several years previous to and up to his death. That his late brother Alexander Webb, the father of the said William Webb (the pauper), was a parishioner of the said parish of Kingsclere, of which he also received relief for upwards of two years previous to his death, which occurred in the parish of Thatcham, where he then resided. (The remainder of the examination was immaterial.)

The grounds of appeal stated, first, that the said order of removal, and the examinations on which the same are grounded, is and are bad upon the face and faces thereof. Fifthly, that the said examination and examinations is and are bad upon the face and faces thereof, because it does not appear in and by the said examination and examinations, or either of them, at what time or times, or in what year or years, the said Alexander Webb received relief from the said parish of Kingsclere, nor from whom, if from any one, the said Alexander Webb received the same; eighthly, that they were also bad on the face thereof, because it did not appear by them that the said Alexander Webb ever received any relief from the said parish of Kingsclere at any time when he was not residing in the said parish of Kingsclere; twelfthly, that they were bad, &c., because it did not appear that the two years, during which it is alleged in the said examination of the said Thomas Webb, that the said Alexander received relief from the said parish of Kingsclere, were the two years immediately preceding the death of the said Alexander Webb.

At the hearing of the said appeal, the counsel for the respondents stated, that the pauper William Webb had a settlement in the appellant parish, derived through Alexander Webb his father, whom the appellant parish had acknowledged to be their parishioner by having relieved him while resident in the respondent parish. The appellants relied upon their grounds of appeal, and objected, that the respondents were not entitled to go into evidence of that head of settlement, inasmuch as the time at which the said Alexander Webb was supposed to have been relieved by the appellant parish, while resident in the respondent parish, had not been stated with sufficient particularity in the examinations upon which the said order of removal was founded, and that the examinations were on that ground insufficient to support the order. The Court, after hearing counsel for the respondents, adopted this view of the case, and quashed the order, without allowing the respondents to go into their case, upon the ground of the insufficiency of the examinations in that respect; but at the request of the respondents, and with a view to enable them to obtain a fresh order of removal, the Court directed the order of Quarter Sessions for quashing the order of removal to be drawn up in the following form:—

“Upon the appeal of the churchwarden and overseers of the poor of the parish of Kingsclere, in the county of Southampton, (entered and respited at the last session until this session,) against an order under the hands and seals of A. B. and C. D, two of her Majesty's Justices, &c., for the removal, &c., and upon reading the said order of the said two Justices, and upon hearing counsel for and on behalf of the said parish of Thatcham, the respondents, and also upon hearing counsel for and on behalf of the said parish of Kingsclere, the appellants, it appeared unto this Court, that the examination of the pauper and other persons annexed to the said order of Justices is insufficient. It is therefore ordered and adjudged by the Court, that the order of the said two Justices be quashed, but not on the merits, and it is hereby quashed accordingly. And it is further ordered, that a special case be stated for the opinion of her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, at Westminster, whether the insufficiency of the examination of the pauper is a question of form or a question of merit.”

The above case had been accordingly stated in compliance with the direction of the Court of Quarter Sessions, as contained in the last-mentioned order; and that the question for the opinion of the Court was, whether, under the circumstances above stated, the Court of Quarter Sessions were not bound to quash the order of removal absolutely, inasmuch as they had decided that the examination on which it was founded was insufficient, or whether such insufficiency of examination was a mere defect of form. If the Court should be of opinion, that the insufficiency of the examinations is a mere defect of form, the entry of the Court of Quarter Sessions was to stand, otherwise the order of removal to be quashed absolutely.

Tyrwhitt, in support of the order of Sessions, relied on the judgment just pronounced in The Queen v. Charlbury and Walcott. The Sessions had a right to decide on the law, and to add the special entry—The Queen v. Brighton (1), The King v. Cottingham (2).

The Court called on—

Carrington and Bros, contra.—The decision in The Queen v. Charlbury and Walcott is in the appellants' favour, inasmuch as the Sessions have quashed for the insufficiency of the examination. That is a defect in substance, and the decision of the Sessions is therefore conclusive as to the settlement at the time of the order of removal. It is utterly inconsistent that by such an entry the Sessions should reserve to the respondents power to remove again.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The Sessions here have decided, that the objection taken did not go to the merits of the settlement. We decline to enter into the grounds of their decision. They appear to have considered that the omission of the date of the relief was not in this case material; and they say, by their entry, that they do not decide on the merits.

PATTESON, J. concurred.

COLERIDGE, J.—We have never said that all decisions of the Sessions, on the sufficiency of the examinations, are decisions on the merits.

Parish—Township—Settlement.

Previous to the year 1834, the parish of Hales Owen consisted of the township of H, the township of O, and other townships. Only one set of overseers was appointed for the whole parish, who made a joint poor-rate for such parish, which rate formed a common fund for parochial purposes. In 1834, by the authority of a mandamus from the Court of King's Bench, separate overseers were appointed for the township of H, which from that time maintained its own poor separately:—Held, that no settlement was gained in H, as a distinct township, prior to 1834; and that a pauper whose husband's father was hired, and served for a year in the township of H, in the year 1790, and who had acquired no subsequent settlement, was not removeable to such township.

Upon appeal against an order of removal, whereby Elizabeth, the wife of John Parker, (who had deserted her,) and her three children, were removed from the parish of Rowley Regis, in the county of Stafford, to the township of Hunnington, in the county of Salop, the Sessions of the county of Stafford confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following—

CASE.

John Parker, the pauper's husband, is the son of William Parker, and has done no act to gain a settlement in his own right, but his father, William Parker, about the year 1790, was hired, and served for a year with one Daniel Hawkeswood, in the township of Hunnington, which at that time formed part of the parish of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop. At the time of such service, and up to the year 1832, the parish of Hales Owen consisted of the said township of Hunnington, the township Oldbury, and ten other townships, all in the county of Salop, and three other townships in the county of Worcester. The three Worcestershire townships had always had separate overseers, and supported their own poor, and managed their parochial affairs apart from each other and the rest of the parish, but that part of the parish of Hales Owen which is in the county of Salop, and which consists of the township of Hunnington, the township of Oldbury, and ten other townships, formed a distinct district for the maintenance of its poor, and all parochial matters, up to the year 1832, and was known as the parish of Hales Owen, in the county of Salop, and for which only one set of overseers of the poor were appointed, namely, four, who were annually appointed for the whole of the said last-mentioned parish, and who, together with the churchwardens, made a joint rate extending over the whole of the said last-mentioned parish, and which formed one common fund for the general maintenance and relief of the poor, and for payment of all parochial charges for the last-mentioned parish; but each of the said townships, including Hunnington, had then respective headboroughs, and repaired their highways separately.

In the year 1832 (1), a mandamus was obtained, directing the Justices of the county of Salop to appoint separate overseers for the township of Oldbury; and by the same authority, in the year 1834, separate overseers were appointed for the remaining eleven townships, including the said township of Hunnington, from which time separate overseers have continued to be appointed for all the said twelve townships, and each of the said twelve townships, from the time of such separation, has continued to maintain their own poor respectively, as distinct and separate parishes.

The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether upon the before-mentioned facts, now that the said parish of Hales Owen had ceased to maintain its own poor, and separate overseers were appointed for the said twelve townships, the said paupers were settled in the said township of Hunnington. If the Court were of opinion that the said paupers were settled in the said parish of Hunnington, the order of Sessions was to be confirmed; if not, the order of Sessions to be quashed.

F. V. Lee, in support of the order of Sessions. —The question is, whether the settlement gained by the father in that part of Hales Owen which forms the township of Hunnington, can be now considered a settlement in Hunnington. There is no case to shew that a settlement should not be held to be gained in Hunnington. The case of The Queen v. Tipton (2) will be relied on on the other side, but that case is distinguishable, as it turned on the precise words of the statute 54 Geo. 3. c. 170. s. 3, which is declaratory as to the settlements of bastard children born in district workhouses. In The King v. Oakmere (3), the separation of the township was made by act of parliament, but The King v. Oldbury (4) is in favour of holding a settlement to have been gained in Hunnington.

[WILLIAMS, J. referred to The King v. Saughton-on-the-Hill (5).]

In that case, there were, at the time of the removal, no inhabitants in Gloverstone to serve the office of overseers. In The King v. Crowland (6), it was held, that a pauper might be chargeable on a portion of a parish, though there were no overseers. Hunnington must be considered as if it always was a township, and if so, the overseers of Hales Owen would be sufficiently overseers for that portion forming the township of Hunnington, to enable a party to gain a settlement there—The King v. Merevall (7). Wherever a parish is made up of several villis, each of which ought to appoint its own overseers, a settlement may be considered as having been gained by relation, after such overseers are appointed.

[COLERIDGE, J.—According to the argument that must be adopted on the other side, no settlement could be gained in this township prior to 1834.]

A decision for the appellants must go to that extent.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—You assume that all villis have from time immemorial been liable to the separate maintenance of their own poor.]

Corbett, contra.—This is not to be distinguished from The Queen v. Tipton. (He was then stopped.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—There certainly is some practical inconvenience resulting from the state of the law, as regards the right of settlement under circumstances like the present, but the principle which was recognized in The Queen v. Tipton, is the same that must govern this case. The same principle also governed the decision in The King v. Saughton, where it was held, that a settlement once acquired in a township, was extinguished by a settlement acquired in another township, which had, at the time of the order, ceased to be capable of having overseers, though the necessary effect of the decision was to leave the pauper without any settlement at all. So here, though the party is not settled in the parish of Hales

Owen, yet she cannot be considered as settled in any of those parts or townships which were not independent of the parish of Hales Owen, for the purpose of settlement, at the time the hiring took place, in respect of which the settlement is sought to be established. In the case of The King v. Oldbury, I referred to a passage in Lord Tenterden's judgment in the case of The King v. Oakmere, as to the effect of the modern appointment of overseers to townships which previously had none. It seems to me, however, that those remarks are not altogether sound. Though a vill or township may have existed from time immemorial, it cannot be said, that the obligation on it to maintain its own poor separately has existed from time immemorial, as there may have been no means of appointing officers for that purpose. What fell from Lord Tenterden, in the case referred to, was wholly immaterial with reference to the decision of the particular case; and I think that the present case cannot be distinguished from that of The Queen v. Tipton, by which we must be governed; and the order of Sessions must, therefore, be quashed.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of the same opinion. In deciding this case, we must refer to that period of time at which the settlement was supposed to have been gained. That was before any settlement could be gained in the township of Hunnington. The case of The Queen v. Tipton is, therefore, directly in point.

COLERIDGE, J.—If this question had been entirely new, I should have wished to have had it more fully argued on the present occasion, but it seems to me that we are bound by the recent case of The Queen v. Tipton.

Certiorari—Notice of Motion for—Requisites of.

The Court of Quarter Sessions having confirmed an order of removal, subject to a case, a notice of the intention of the appellant parish to apply for a certiorari, was addressed to "J. S., Esq., and T. H. M., Esq., two of Her Majesty's Justices and keepers of the peace" for the West Riding of the county of York; and the affidavit of service of such notice stated that the deponent served "J. S., Esq. and T. H. M., Esq., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace" for the West Riding:—Held, that the affidavit was insufficient, by reason of its not stating that the Justices so served were two of the Justices before whom the order of Sessions was made, and the rule for quashing the certiorari was made absolute, the special case being already set down for argument in the Crown paper.

Upon an appeal against an order for the removal of Matthew Wadsworth, his wife and five children, from the township of Upper Thong to the township of Cartworth, both in the West Riding of Yorkshire, which was heard at the adjourned sessions for the West Riding, held at Wakefield, on the 5th of January 1842, the order was confirmed, subject to a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench.

On the 29th of April 1842, according to the affidavit of the appellants' attorney, he served T. H. M., Esq., and on the 30th of April, he served J. S., Esq., who, his affidavit stated, were "two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the said riding," with copies of the notice thereunto annexed, by delivering a copy of such notice to each of them personally. This notice was addressed to "J. S., Esq. and T. H. M., Esq., two of Her Majesty's Justices and keepers of the peace of the West Riding of the county of York," and was as follows:—

"Take notice, that Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench will be moved on the 7th day of May next, or as soon after as counsel can be heard on behalf of the township of Cartworth, in the West Riding of the county of York, that a writ of certiorari may be issued, to remove into the said court a certain order, made at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace held by adjournment at Wakefield, in and for the said riding, on the 5th day of January last, confirming a certain other order, made by two Justices of the Peace in and for the said riding, touching the removal of Matthew Wadsworth, Sarah his wife, and their five children, from the township of Upper Thong, in the said riding, to the said township of Cartworth, and in confirming which order a special case was reserved by the said Court of Quarter Sessions for the opinion of Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench. Dated the 29th of April 1842.

"S. T. and B. Huddersfield, attornies for the inhabitants of the said township of Cartworth."

The writ of certiorari was issued on the 9th of May 1842, and was in the usual form to bring up "all and singular the order and orders made by the Justices between the inhabitants of the parishes touching the settlement," &c. The writ was forwarded to the clerk of the peace, but no return was made till the 9th of June 1843, when the special case was sent up, signed by the chairman. On the 15th of June, the rule for quashing the order was obtained, and the special case was set down in the Crown paper for the present term.

On the 4th of November,—

Pashley obtained a rule, calling on the defendants to shew cause "why the writ of certiorari issued in this prosecution should not be quashed, and why the defendants should not pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the township of Upper Thong the costs occasioned to them in consequence of the issuing of the said writ, and the costs of that application."

Both rules coming on together—

Pickering shewed cause against Pashley's rule.—The certiorari issued within the six months, and the case is now in the Crown paper. It is too late to move to quash the certiorari a year and half after it has been granted—The King v. Rattislaw (1), The King v. Wakefield (2). Here the objection might have been taken sooner. The delay in the return to the certiorari has arisen from the difficulty in settling the special case; and one of the grounds on which the certiorari is now sought to be quashed is, that the affidavit of service of the notice does not state that the Justices on whom it was served were present at the time the order was made (3). The King v. Rattislaw will be relied on. In that case it distinctly appeared that one of the Justices served had not been present at the time the order was made; here it is not decided that they were present. If the very names of these Justices do not appear, yet they must be taken to have been present at the making of the order, till the contrary appear. In The Queen v. How (4), the decision of individual Magistrates was sought to be impugned, and they shewed cause and objected to the notice; here the notice is mere form, the case having been granted by the Sessions, and the proceeding not being of a hostile character, but matter of consent.

Pashley, contra.—The notice given is not sufficient within the terms of the act 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5. The affidavit only states service on J. S. and T. H. M., two of the Magistrates of the West Riding. It should have gone further, and stated that they were two of the Magistrates by or before whom the order was made, otherwise it amounts to nothing. It cannot even be collected that at the time the order was made, the parties on whom the notice was served were Magistrates. The judgment of Lord Denman, C.J. in The Queen v. How is decisive. The Justices should have an opportunity of shewing cause—The King v. Nichols (5), and the right parties should therefore be served. In The Queen v. the Justices of Wilts (6), the affidavit was of service on three Magistrates, who allowed, to remove any conviction, judgment, order, or other proceedings, had or made before any Justice or Justices of the Peace for any county, city, &c., or the respective General or Quarter Sessions thereof, "unless it be duly proved, upon oath, that the said party or parties suing forth the same hath or have given six days' notice thereof in writing to the Justice or Justices, or two of them, (if so many there be), by and before whom such conviction, judgment, order, or other proceeding, shall be so had and made, to the end that such Justice or Justices, or the parties therein concerned, may shew cause, if he or they shall so think fit, against the issuing or granting such certiorari."

(3) The statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5. enacts, that no writ of certiorari shall be granted, issued forth, or were sworn to have been present "at the trial and hearing of the said appeal." The statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. is not the less imperative, because the Sessions have consented to grant a case—The King v. the Justices of Sussex (7). [It was also objected that the notice was not given by the right parties, but the argument on this point is omitted.]

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The only ground on which this notice could be held sufficient would be, that it is to be presumed that all the Magistrates of the West Riding were present when the order was made. I think we can make no such presumption. The caption, indeed, states that the Sessions were held before A. B. and C. D. (naming them), and others their fellows, Justices," &c. But we cannot presume that those others were present; indeed, we know that such is not generally the case. We may observe, that it is possible for a certiorari to go to the sessions without any case being granted; and we can draw no line to distinguish as to the practice. It may be that an order is sought to be set aside for defect on the face of it, and indeed it may be just possible that the Justices might have some cause to shew against the certiorari, such as that the case was granted under a mistake, or on some condition that has not been complied with. The rule must be absolute.

WILLIAMS, J.—The terms of the act of parliament are, that "no certiorari shall issue to remove any order of Justices, without notice to two of those by or before whom it was made, to the end that such Justices may shew cause against the issuing of the writ." Has that been done in this case? I agree with my Lord that it cannot be presumed that all the Magistrates in the division were actually present; if so, the certiorari has issued on an insufficient notice, and must be quashed.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am of the same opinion, though I yield to the objection with great reluctance, as we cannot but see that this mode of arriving at the result by a separate motion is indirect and expensive. The act of parliament did not contemplate cases in which a certiorari is moved for after a case granted at sessions, and it is in such cases purely a matter of form. Where there is a conviction or other matter, with respect to which the acts of Magistrates are individually in peril, it is important that they should have notice, but when the Magistrates at sessions give a judgment subject to a case, the rest is mere matter of form. I fully accede, however, to the principle already laid down, and in holding the notice to be insufficient.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I entirely agree with the rest of the Court; and I would further observe, that even if the presumption which is contended for could, with propriety, be made, these parties could hardly be brought within the benefit of it, as it is not stated that the Magistrates on whom the notice was served were Magistrates at all at the time when the order was made.

Statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5.—Certiorari.

A writ of certiorari having been quashed, on the ground that the affidavit on which it had issued did not shew that the two Magistrates upon whom notice had been served were present at the sessions, the order of which was removed:—Held, that more than six months having elapsed since the making of the order, a fresh writ could not be issued, by reason of the statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5.

In this case, the Court having quashed the writ of certiorari, on the ground that the affidavits on which it had been obtained did not shew that the two Magistrates upon whom notices were served had been present at the sessions when the appeal was heard (see ante, p. 26.)

Pickering now moved for a new writ, pursuant to the former application, in Easter term, 1842, upon affidavits which stated that these Magistrates were actually present; that the respondents knew the fact; and that the delay between the hearing of the appeal at the January sessions in 1842, and its final settlement in June 1843, had arisen from the obstacles raised by the respondents themselves. He contended that the provisions of the statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5, which directs that a writ shall not issue, "unless such certiorari be moved or applied for within six calendar months next after the making of the order complained of, had been complied with by the parties having moved or applied for the prior writ which had been quashed; that there was only one condition imposed by the act, and that was, that a motion should be made within the period prescribed, and that the writ might issue at any time; that in The King v. the Justices of Sussex (1) no application had been made within six months, and that the same observation was applicable to The King v. Bloxam (2), and the various other cases in which the writ had been quashed upon the ground of its being after the prescribed period; that if the application was made within the six months, the writ might issue after their expiration. It was to be inferred from the observation of Coleridge, J., "Suppose the application is made in time, but the Judge takes time to consider, and grants the application after the six months are expired," in The Queen v. the Inhabitants of St. Mary, Whitechapel (3), that this case differed from The King v. Rattislaw (4), inasmuch as there one of the Justices served was not present, and it was not necessary to decide this point; that though the general rule of practice in this court was, according to The Queen v. the Manchester and Leeds Railway Company (5), that a party would not be permitted to succeed on a second application, who had previously applied for the very same thing, without coming properly prepared, yet that such rule was not inflexible; and that the facts of this case would justify this Court in allowing a deviation from the general practice. There had been no laches on the part of the appellants. The affidavit on which the former writ had been obtained was in the usual form, and it was the first time that such an affidavit had been decided to be bad.

PATTESON, J. said, that he would confer with the Judges who had heard the question of the validity of the prior writ discussed; and, on the following day, delivered the following judgment:—I have consulted with the other Judges, and we are all of opinion that you cannot by any possibility attach the former proceeding to this motion. We must, therefore, consider you as now making a new application, which, not being within six months, is insufficient to satisfy the terms of the statute. The only mode by which any other conclusion could be arrived at is, by supposing the application to have been made within the six months, and the writ to issue upon that application, after their expiration; but in order to do this, we must say, that the original motion is in some way connected with the present one. We cannot, however, do that, for the original motion was made on an insufficient foundation; it consequently failed, and having failed it is gone altogether.

A party was indicted under the first-mentioned act for perjury committed before a Surveyor General of Customs, and it was not averred in the indictment, that the Commissioners had given directions for its being preferred, but it was negatived by affidavit that any such directions had been given;—the Court, nevertheless, refused to interfere, at the instance of the defendant, either by quashing the indictment, or by staying the proceedings.

The indictment stated, in the first count, that one S. P, before &c., was a person employed in her Majesty's Customs, and had been and was charged by and at the instance of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Customs, (amongst other things,) with having in his capacity as baggage officer, at Freshwater, in the year 1840, knowingly and in violation of the trust confided in him, passed under its real value a wardrobe belonging to W. Burnby, landing waiter, the said charge being a charge relative to and concerning the Customs; and that a certain examination and inquiry was in due manner instituted, taken, and made before W. R. W, one of the Surveyors General of her Majesty's Customs, touching and concerning the said charge, and touching and concerning the conduct of the said S. P; and that upon such examination, one William Burnby was produced, and did appear as a witness touching and concerning the matters of the said inquiry, and was examined as a witness, and was duly sworn, &c., before the said R. P. W, he, the said R. P. W, so being such Surveyor General, as aforesaid, having lawful and competent power and authority to administer the said oath to the said William Burnby.—[The indictment then assigned perjury in the usual manner, on certain evidence given by Burnby, as to the value of the wardrobe.]

The second count alleged, that an inquiry was instituted before the said W. R. W, touching and concerning the conduct of S. P, as an officer and person employed in her Majesty's Customs, upon certain matters and charges relative to the Customs before then complained, and brought against him, the said J. P, by and on behalf of the Honourable Commissioners of her Majesty's Customs, and for ascertaining the truth of the facts in relation thereto, and that upon the last-mentioned inquiry, the said W. Burnby appeared and was examined, &c., and took his corporal oath, &c., the said last-mentioned oath being then and there administered to the said W. Burnby, by the said W. R. W, so being such Surveyor General as aforesaid, and having lawful and competent power and authority to administer the said last-mentioned oath, and contained similar assignments of perjury.

At the Sittings at Guildhall, after Trinity term, before the jury were sworn, it was objected, that though the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 51. s. 29. (1) gave the Surveyor General power to administer an oath, and made persons taking a false oath guilty of perjury; yet that the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 53. s. 112. (2) made it necessary that

(1) Which enacts, "That upon examination and inquiries made by any Surveyor General of Customs or any Inspector General of the Customs, for ascertaining the truth of facts relative to the Customs, or the conduct of officers or persons employed therein, and upon the like examinations and inquiries made by the collector or comptroller of any out-port in the United Kingdom, or of any port in the Isle of Man, or made by any person or persons in any of the British possessions abroad, appointed by the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs, to make such examinations and inquiries, any person examined before him or them as a witness, shall deliver his testimony on oath, to be administered by such of the surveyors general, or such of the inspectors general, or such collector and comptroller, or such person or persons as shall examine him, and who are hereby authorized to administer such oath; and if such person shall be convicted of making a false oath, touching any of the facts so testified on oath, or of giving false evidence on his examination on oath, before any of the Surveyors General or Inspectors General of the Customs, or such collector or comptroller, or such person or persons in conformity to the directions of this act, every such person so convicted as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be liable to the pains and penalties to which persons are liable for wilful and corrupt perjury."

(2) Which enacts, "That no indictment shall be preferred, or suit commenced, for the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture, under this or any other act relating to the Customs or Excise, (except in the cases of persons detained and carried before one or more Justices, in pursuance of this act,) unless such suit shall be commenced in the name of his Majesty's either the proceedings should be in the name of the Attorney General or the consent of the Commissioners of Customs should have been obtained previously to instituting it. The record having been withdrawn,—

The Attorney General in this term obtained a rule nisi on behalf of the defendant, for quashing the indictment, on the ground that it did not appear that it had been preferred with the sanction of the Commissioners of Customs, and also on the affidavit of the assistant secretary of the Commissioners, that in his belief no order for the prosecution had been made by them.

Cockburn, Montagu Chambers, and Poulton shewed cause.—First, the Court will not, at the instance of the defendant, quash an indictment for matter not appearing on the face of it. No case can be found in which this has been done. In The King v. Belton (8), Holt, C.J. refused to quash an indictment for pulling down fences, and observed, "That the defendant might as well move to quash a declaration without pleading to it." And in another case, referred to in the report, the same Chief Justice said, "We never quash indictments for forgery, perjury, &c." So The King v. Johnson (4), Com. Dig. 'Indictment,' (H). Secondly, the 112th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 53, does not apply to this case, but only to proceedings for penalties and forfeitures. Lastly, the assent of the Commissioners need not be alleged, nor would such an allegation be traversable.

Attorney General, or in the name of the Lord Advocate of Scotland, or unless such indictment shall be preferred, under the directions of the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs or Excise, or unless such suit shall be commenced in the name of some officer of Customs or Excise, under the direction of the said Commissioners respectively."

Section 113. enacts, "That if any prosecution whatever shall be commenced for the recovery of any fine, penalty, or forfeiture incurred under this or any other act relating to the Customs or Excise, it shall be lawful for His Majesty's Attorney General, if he is satisfied that such fine, penalty, or forfeiture was incurred without any intention of fraud, or that it is inexpedient to proceed in the said prosecution, to stop all further proceedings by entering a nolle prosequi, or otherwise."

(4) 1 Wils. 325.

Sir F. Pollock (Attorney General), The-siger, J. Jervis, and F. Pollock, contra.—The rule is drawn up in the alternative, either to quash or to stay proceedings. If it is clear that the consent of the Commissioners has not been given, then the proceedings can lead to no result, and the Court will stay them. The case comes within the letter of the 112th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 53. It is said, that this is not an indictment for a penalty or forfeiture under the act; but that section must be read so as to apply to all indictments under the act, and as if a stop were after the word "preferred," and another after "forfeiture," the words "penalty" and "forfeiture" referring only to the word "suit." That must obviously be the intention of the act, as penalties and forfeitures are not generally recoverable by indictment, and under this particular act (section 75), the mode of recovering them is by action or information.

[WIGHTMAN, J. referred to section 53, by which persons making signals to smuggling vessels are liable to a fine of 100*l.*, on indictment or information.]

Even in that case, the indictment would not be for the penalty, but for the offence. Then the consent of the Commissioners should be averred in the indictment, or, at all events, proved at the trial. In this case, it is clear, that it could not be proved, as they gave no such consent.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—The 112th section embraces both Customs and Excise, which is not the case with section 75.]

The Court will interfere to prevent collusion; and this prosecution is, no doubt, defended by the Commissioners.

[COLERIDGE, J. referred to section 116, by which it is enacted, that the averment that the Commissioners have directed proceedings to be instituted shall be sufficient, without proof of the fact, unless the defendant shall prove the contrary.]

That had not before been adverted to, but it would go to shew the necessity of the averment.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think that there are insurmountable difficulties against making this rule absolute. In the first place, I am not by any means sure that the general words in the 112th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 53. apply to a case of this description.

Where a party has committed perjury before the Surveyor General, a power to indict is given by the earlier act, and this is sought to be controuled by the terms of a subsequent act. My opinion is, that the words of the latter section do not apply to indictments for perjury, but to offences against the Customs and Excise laws. But, again, supposing that they do apply, still I doubt whether it would be essential that it should appear on the face of the indictment that the Commissioners directed the indictment to be preferred. If it were essential that it should so appear, the omission would be a ground for arresting the judgment. Then, as to staying the proceedings, the same difficulties again recur, and we should be deciding a matter which ought, I think, never to be dealt with in this summary way. Then there is some degree of discretion to be exercised in a matter of this kind; and I am not prepared to say that if the act applied to the case, that I should be prepared, as a matter of discretion, to grant the application. No conspiracy or collusion is suggested. If a case of that kind were made out, it might be well to interfere, but even in that case the Attorney General would have the power of entering a nolle prosequi. It has been remarked, that the Attorney General ought to be loth to interpose. I agree; but if that be so, does not the remark apply with tenfold force to the application to this Court? We are bound to see that justice is done. I indeed granted the rule with some reluctance, and have no hesitation in saying, that hardly any case could be laid before me, on affidavit, sufficient to induce the Court to exercise powers which it appears the legislature intended to lodge in the hands of the Attorney General. The defendant then, if he is in the right, should make that appear in such a course of proceeding as may bring him within the act. The rule must be discharged.

WILLIAMS, J. — Assuming that the defendant requires and deserves protection, is it to be had at the hands of the Court? It is said that the perjury here was committed under peculiar circumstances, and before a party who, but for the act, would have had no power to administer an oath: that may be true, yet it does not follow that signal and malignant perjury might not be committed under such circumstances. Why then should the Court interfere, when by the very argument, it is conceded, that if the powers given by the act are abused, the Commissioners might apply to the Attorney General to stay the proceedings? I think that this Court should not interfere.

COLERIDGE, J. — This is an indictment for perjury. Without going into the particular acts of parliament, thus much must be admitted, that the Court will not interfere to stay proceedings, so long as there is a particle of doubt as to the propriety of so doing. Now, is not this a case of doubt? It is contended, that the case is within the 112th section of the latter act, 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 53. Upon that point I am inclined to agree with the Attorney General; but I feel great doubt on the second question, namely, whether there is any necessity that the assent of the Commissioners should appear by averment. It is important to remark that no injustice can be done by our refusal to interfere. If the assent of the Commissioners is by law a condition precedent, then the party indicted must have some way of availing himself of the omission to get such consent, without the interposition of the Court. At all events, if the law has put the power of interfering in the hands of the Attorney General, there is no necessity for our interference.

WIGHTMAN, J. — The offence here charged might not only relate to the Customs, but might most materially affect the rights of third persons. I can conceive cases where the power of interference might be most material, even where the Excise or Customs alone was concerned; but it may be so in all cases where the rights of the public are concerned. The arguments used in support of the rule would apply equally to a case of forgery under sect. 27, and it might be that such forgery would be most prejudicial to the interest of third parties. Can we hold that an indictment under that section might be immediately stopped on summary application?

1843. } THE QUEEN v. FEARGUS O'CONNOR AND OTHERS.
June 7. }

Indictment—Venue.

A count in an indictment for misdemeanour, with the venue "Lancashire" in the margin, stating that certain unlawful assemblies were held by evil-disposed persons at "divers places," and that the defendants, "at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid," unlawfully aided and abetted the said evil-disposed persons:—Held good on motion in arrest of judgment, the "want of a proper or perfect venue" (no place being stated where the unlawful assemblies were holden) being cured by the 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20. -

A count, stating that the defendants, together with other evil-disposed persons, &c., unlawfully did endeavour to excite Her Majesty's subjects to disaffection, &c., no place being stated,—Held bad on motion in arrest of judgment, there being no words of reference to the venue in the margin, and the defect not being cured by the said statute.

Misdemeanour. The defendants were tried, before Rolfe, B. at the Liverpool Summer Assizes, 1843, on the following two counts (being the fourth and fifth) of an indictment preferred against them. All the defendants were convicted on the fifth count; on the fourth, Feargus O'Connor and some others were acquitted, Macdowall and the remainder convicted.

Fourth count. Lancashire to wit. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that heretofore, to wit, on the 1st of August in the year aforesaid, and on divers other days and times between that day and the 1st of October in the year aforesaid, and at divers places, divers evil-disposed persons unlawfully and tumultuously assembled together, and by violence, threats, and intimidation to divers other persons, being then peaceable subjects of this realm, forced the said last-mentioned subjects to leave their occupation and employments, and thereby impeded and stopped the labour employed in the lawful and peaceable carrying on by divers large numbers of the subjects of this realm of certain trades, manufactures, and businesses, and thereby caused great confusion, terror, and alarm in the minds of the peaceable subjects of this realm; and that afterwards, on the 1st of August in the year aforesaid, and on divers other days and times, between that day and the 1st of October in the year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the said defendants, &c., together with divers other evil-disposed persons to the jurors aforesaid as yet unknown, did unlawfully aid, abet, assist, comfort, support, and encourage the said evil-disposed persons in this count first mentioned, to continue and persist in the said unlawful assemblings, threats, intimidations, and violence, the said impeding and stopping of the labour employed in the said trades, manufactures, and businesses, with intent thereby to cause terror and alarm in the minds of the peaceable subjects of this realm, and by means of such terror and alarm violently and unlawfully to cause and procure certain great changes to be made in the constitution of this realm, as by law established, against the peace of our said Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

Fifth count. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the defendants, together with divers other evil-disposed persons, to the jurors aforesaid as yet unknown, afterwards, to wit, on the 1st day of August in the year aforesaid, and on divers other days between that day and the 1st of October in the year aforesaid, unlawfully did endeavour to excite Her Majesty's liege subjects to disaffection and hatred of her laws, and unlawfully did endeavour to persuade and encourage the said liege subjects to unite, confederate, and agree to leave their several and respective employments, and to produce a cessation of labour throughout a large portion of this realm, with intent and in order by so doing to bring about and produce a change in the laws and constitution of this realm, and against the peace of our said Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

Upon being brought up to receive the judgment of the Court, in Easter term (May 4), a motion in arrest of judgment was made on behalf of the several defendants who had been convicted upon the above counts, by—

Dundas, Murphy, Serj., Bodkin, and Atherton.—They contended, both with regard to the fourth and fifth counts, that they were bad in law, as no special venue was stated in the body of those counts, and that a statement of time and place was necessary to every material fact, in order to shew jurisdiction both to find and try the offence. They contended, also, that these defects were not cured by verdict under the 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20. The following authorities were referred to:—Com. Dig. 'Indictment,' G, 2, The King v. Hart(1), The King v. Hollond(2), The Queen v. Peck(3), The Queen v. Rowed(4), The King v. Haynes(5), and The King v. Mathews(6). Several other objections were also taken to the fourth count, the principal of which were, that there was no sufficient description of the nature of the acts of "aiding and abetting;" that it was not stated that the offences, which the defendants were there charged with aiding and abetting, were committed within the jurisdiction of the Court; that the divers evil-disposed persons mentioned in the first part of the same count, were not described by name, nor as "to the jurors unknown;" and that it was uncertain whether it charged the defendants as inciting others to the commission of an offence, or with participation in an offence.

Rule nisi.

On May 26, The Attorney General (Sir F. Pollock), The Solicitor General (Sir W. F. Follett), Wortley, Sir G. Lewin, Waddington, J. Hildyard, and F. Pollock, shewed cause.—As to the fourth count, the venue is correctly stated, because the unlawful assemblages, which the defendants are charged with aiding and abetting, might have taken place anywhere. The material part of the charge, to which time and place must be attached, is the aiding and abetting. The defendants might have "aided and abetted" within the jurisdiction of the Court, in the county of Lancaster, an offence of tumultuous assembling, with the intent laid in the indictment, which was actually committed out of Lancashire. In East, P.C. 780, it is said to have been "expressly decided" in Stott's case, that an indictment for receiving need not allege time and place as to the fact of stealing the goods; it is sufficient if they be alleged to the fact of the receiving. But, at all events, the defect, if any, is cured by the 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20, which provides that no judgment for felony or misdemeanour shall be arrested "for want of a proper or perfect venue, where the Court shall appear, by the indictment, to have had jurisdiction over the offence." As to the fifth count, the objection is, that no venue at all is stated: but the venue is apparent from the margin; and although there are no words of reference expressly connecting the material facts with it, yet this, again, is only the want of a "proper or perfect" venue; and inasmuch as it appears, by the venue stated in the margin, that the Court had jurisdiction over the offence, it is cured by the same statute. If not, it is impossible to assign to the provision of the statute any definite meaning at all. The King v. Hart is no authority to the contrary, for the question now is, whether such defect can be cured after verdict.

[PATTESON, J.—That does not appear a substantial distinction between the cases.]

Since the 4 Anne, c. 36. s. 6, it has become sufficient to lay a county for a venue—Ware v. Boydell(7), and The King v. Burdett(8); and in civil cases, at all events, it is clear that the venue in the margin indicates the county where the act is done: the mere want of words of reference to that venue may, therefore, be holpen by the statute as an "imperfect" venue. The Queen v. Mitchell(9) is not applicable; a wrong jury had been summoned in that case—Skinner v. Gunton(10), Tyson v. Paske(11), and Mellor v. Barber(12). In Duncan v. Passenger(13), the word "there" was held, on special demurrer, to import a reference to the county in the margin. The 6 Geo. 4. c. 51. s. 13. having rendered the coming of jurors from particular hundreds unnecessary, the allegation of county in the margin can have no meaning, unless it be considered as an "imperfect" venue. the jurors of a certain county have found that an offence has been committed, it must be taken to have been committed in that county.—[Counsel for the Crown proceeded to argue the other objections taken to the fourth count.]

On the 3rd of June—

Erle, Dundas, Baines, Murphy, Serj., Bodkin, and Atherton, supported the rule.—First, as to the fourth count. The want of allegation of place to the principal offence is a good objection to a count in substance, as unless it appears that the principals committed an indictable offence, the aiders and abettors are accessory only to an innocent act. Here, the acts charged against the principals may have taken place beyond Her Majesty's dominions. It is stated on the part of the Crown, that it is sufficient if the principal offences were committed within the realms of the Queen. This count does not shew that they were, and it is therefore bad for want of a proper averment of place—Com. Dig. 'Indictment,' (G) 2, Hawk. P. C. lib. 2. c. 25. s. 83, The King v. Holland, The King v. Haynes, Collins v. Goldsmith (14), Hamond's case (15), The King v. Yarrington (16), The King v. Connop (17), 3rd Burn's Justice, 383, (by D'Oyley and Williams), where this passage occurs: "In bigamy the indictment was found in Middlesex, and stated the first marriage to have taken place in the county of —, and the second marriage in the county of —, and at the conclusion it stated, 'And the jurors aforesaid, &c. further say, that the said J. J. F. was apprehended on the — day of — at —,' leaving a blank for the place. Judgment being respited after conviction, the Judges held unanimously that the indictment was bad, for the Middlesex grand jury on the face of it had no jurisdiction. Hilary term, 1834. The King v. J. J. Fraser, cor. Arabin, Serj., O. B. September Sessions, 1833. MS."

[COLERIDGE, J. referred to The King v. Helsham (18).]

to what is cured by verdict under the Statutes of Jeofails: those statutes are confined to civil matters. Nor does The King v. Fuller (19) shew, that the statement of the principal offence is an immaterial fact, as in that case the indictment was upon a statute which made the mere endeavour to incite a felony, and it was not therefore necessary to state the means used. In The King v. Stott (20), no direct decision appears to have been given as to the necessity of stating time and place. The stat. 5 Ann. c. 31. s. 5. assumes, that there has been a stealing, and then creates the offence of receiving. There would also be a continuing larceny in the thief, though he has the goods in several counties, until he hands them over to the receiver. The defect of sufficient allegation of time and place is not cured by the stat. 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20. This is not merely the "want of a proper or perfect venue," but there is an absence of any venue to a material statement. The principal offence, which is an essential fact, is laid wholly without venue, though the act of the accessories has a venue attached to it. It cannot be contended, that all allegation of the venue, upon which the jurisdiction to inquire and try depends, can be dispensed with. The venue in the margin, "Lancashire, to wit," will not cure this error. Both the nature of the offence and the place where committed must be shewn in order to give jurisdiction. The marginal venue refers to the presentment of the jurors, not to the offence; and the mention of place in the body of the indictment will not refer to the county in the margin, though it may be otherwise in civil cases—The Queen v. Rhodes (21), Anonymous case (22), The King v. Burridge (23), The King v. Kilderby (23), and the cases there cited. The King v. Hart is admitted to be in point; and although in that case the objection was taken at the close of the case for the prosecution, yet it was evidently treated as if it had been taken after verdict. Then as to the fifth count. That count has no venue even in the margin, nor is any place mentioned in the body. A total omission of venue is much more than an improper or imperfect venue. To the latter only the statute has reference. That requires as a condition precedent to any defect being cured, that it shall appear by the indictment itself that the Court has jurisdiction over the offence—Ogle's case (25), nor can the caption give assistance in this respect—Faulkner's case (26).

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J. now delivered the judgment of the Court.—The Court have considered the case of The Queen v. Feargus O'Connor, with reference to the objections arising on the venue. None is stated in the fifth count, and it is plain, that at common law the count is on that account bad. Every material fact must be stated with time and place, in order that it may appear that the grand jury had jurisdiction to find the bill, and also that it may be known whence the petty jury are to come, who are to try the case. This is laid down in all the books and the authorities cited at the bar. Indeed, it was hardly contended, on the part of the Crown, that this count could be supported at common law, as it contained no venue in itself, nor any words of reference to the venue in the margin, to which therefore the facts stated in the fifth count cannot be referred, according to the distinction hereafter mentioned. Recourse is then had to the statute of the 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20, which enacts, that no judgment after verdict, or confession or default, shall be stayed for want of a proper or perfect venue, provided it shall appear by the indictment that the Court had jurisdiction over the offence. Now, whether the total omission of the venue can be considered as cured by those words, or whether they are to be confined to cases where some venue is stated, but improperly or imperfectly, in either case the condition on which that remedy for the defect of venue is given by the 7 Geo. 4. is, that it shall appear by the indictment that the Court had jurisdiction over the offence. If this means local jurisdiction, the fifth count does not shew it; for no place is mentioned in the body of it, and we cannot, as already stated, import into it for this purpose the county noted in the margin, as has been done in civil actions. To hold this would be to say, as was undoubtedly said by the Solicitor General, that whenever a grand jury of any county whatever, has found a bill of indictment for a crime cognizable under the commission, a trial which takes place upon it in that county must be good after verdict, although the indictment may not shew the Court to have any local jurisdiction over the offence, on which condition alone the defect is cured by the statute. The argument drawn from the 16 & 17 Car. 2. c. 8, and the 4 Ann. c. 10. was, that as in civil actions the total omission of the venue is cured by the first of those acts, under the words "for want of a right venue," so the total omission of the venue in criminal cases will be cured under the 7 Geo. 4, which uses the words "for want of a proper or perfect venue." But the defect cured in civil actions is not the total omission of the venue, but a wrong venue; and it is cured by the statute of Charles, if the case was tried by a jury of the proper county where the action is laid. The action in every civil case is laid in the county stated in the margin, and if the trial took place in that county, the condition is fulfilled. By the 4 Ann. the remedy is extended to cases of judgment by default: all the defects which would have been cured by any of the Statutes of Jeofails, in case the verdict of twelve men had been given in such action, being expressly cured by the second section of the statute. To bear any analogy to this statute, the 7 Geo. 4. should have cured the defect of venue when the case was tried by a jury of the county in which the indictment is preferred. The venue in the margin may shew this, but certainly does not make the indictment shew, that the Court had jurisdiction to try the offence unless it be specially referred to in the body of the indictment. The distinction between civil and criminal cases in this respect, is found in Tyson v. Paske, in Lenthal's case (27), The King v. Burridge, The King v. Fosset (28), there cited, and numerous other cases which were quoted at the bar. It has been established in such a variety of cases, that it is impossible for this Court to overrule them. It follows, that the Court cannot connect the body of the indictment with the margin in this case, for want of such special reference; that it does not appear by the indictment, that the Court, where the indictment was found, had jurisdiction; and that the defect is not cured by the statute of the 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. The Court has considered, whether the statute of the 7 Geo. 4. may not admit of a different and wider meaning: namely, that the offence shall appear to be of such a nature that the Court has authority to try it; and a strong argument in favour of this construction arises from the apparent impossibility of giving effect to the words in any other manner. But we are satisfied that such is not the case, and are convinced that defects of venue are not intended to be cured, unless the jurisdiction of the Court in respect of locality is made to appear. One consideration indeed is decisive on this point. Persons accused might be punished for offences committed in another realm, if the quality of the offence alone gave jurisdiction. This clearly was not intended. Mr. Dundas referred to a case reported, not quite correctly, in the last edition of Burn's Justice; it is also reported in the 1st of Moody's Crown Cases, 407, Fraser's case. We have before us that very case (in which the opinion of all the Judges was taken), and a copy of the indictment itself. The prisoner was tried for bigamy at the Old Bailey in 1833. The first marriage was alleged to have been contracted in Kent, and the second in Surrey; he was alleged to have been apprehended on a day named, but of the place or county at which he was apprehended no mention was made. The conviction was held bad, the felony being proved in Surrey, while the venue in the margin was Middlesex, but no one suggested that Middlesex could be drawn from the margin into the body of the averment of his apprehension, although that would unquestionably have cured the defect; nor was it suggested that the Court appeared by the indictment to have jurisdiction over the offence of bigamy, which would have cured the defect, if the statute could apply to the nature of the offence, and not to the place where it was committed, or where the prisoner was apprehended. The objection on the score of omitting local venue, is not merely technical, but real and important; for the allegation of material facts, as occurring in a particular county, is not only that which authorizes the grand jury to entertain the bill of indictment, but is also the warrant for the sheriff to summon the petty jury, who must pass between the Crown and prisoner. The trial of witnesses for perjury would be embarrassed, and justice defeated, if the jury should appear to have been impanelled to try without authority. To make the act of trying confer the right would be a change so violent, that we cannot believe it to have been intended by the legislature. Upon the whole, we are of opinion, that the judgment on the fifth count must be arrested. An objection was also taken to the fourth, on the score of the venue; a material fact being alleged without place. Stott's case was thought, on the part of the Crown, to bear directly on this doctrine, and it was not successfully distinguished by the defendants in the argument; but the Master of the Crown Office has found the paper book in that case, on which Mr. Justice Ashurst took his note of the argument, conducted by Lord Abinger on the one side, and the late Mr. Justice Vaughan on the other, in Michaelmas term, 1798. The indorsement of that learned Judge intimates, that the case stood for further argument. The prisoner was convicted in April, and then sentenced to twelve months imprisonment, more than half of which had expired before the argument, and there is every reason to believe that Sir Edward East was mistaken in reporting that case as decided; and he himself intimates, indeed, that if there was an error in the sentence, it would possibly be amended, by being changed to transportation for fourteen years: a strong reason for not pursuing the argument much further. We think, however, that here the 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 20. applies a remedy, as the conduct imputed as criminal to the defendants is stated with a venue. The count states the fact of unlawful assemblies having taken place at divers places, without stating where; but such statement is introductory only to the charge against the defendants, which is, the aiding and assisting persons to continue the said assemblies; and the aiding and assisting is laid to have been in the county of Lancaster. The count, therefore, has a venue, although an imperfect one, because the material facts in the early part of it are without place; but the part which charges the defendants with the offence, has a venue, and refers to the former part of the count, which former part, therefore, may fairly be considered to have an imperfect venue; and as the offence itself is laid with a proper venue, it appears by the count, that the Court had jurisdiction; and that is the very case contemplated by the statute.

The Court consequently directed a further day for argument, on the part of the defendants, as to the other objections taken to the fourth count, which was had accordingly in the same term: but judgment has not yet been given.

Judgment arrested on the fifth count.

Appeal—Order of Removal—Mandamus—Sessions.

Where the Sessions have jurisdiction over an appeal against an order of removal, and, having quashed the order, make a special entry on their records, "quashed, not on the merits," this Court will not interfere, and direct a mandamus to erase such entry, although the order was quashed on an objection which went to the merits.

The examination on which an order of removal was founded, set forth a prior order of removal to the appellant township, which had been suspended, but did not shew that the former order had been served, or the pauper removed. The appellants stated, as a ground of objection, that the examination was bad on the face of it, for not shewing these facts:—Held, that a decision by the Sessions that this objection was valid, was a decision on the merits of the settlement.

The ground of removal of the pauper, alleged in the examination, in this case, was a prior order between the same townships, unappealed against. There was, however, no statement that the pauper had been removed, or the prior order had ever been served; and it also appeared that it had been suspended. The appellants objected, that the examination was bad on the face of it, inasmuch as it shewed no ground for the present order, and also denied the facts.

When the case came on to be heard, at the last Sessions for the West Riding of Yorkshire, the Justices held, that the first objection was fatal, and expressed their intention to quash the order; but upon the interference of one of the two Magistrates who had made the order, they inserted on their records an entry that it was quashed "not on the merits." This entry was protested against by the appellants, who then offered to go into the facts, but the Sessions refused to hear them.

Pashley now moved for a mandamus to the Justices, either to erase the entry, or to hear the appeal. It is clear, that the decision on this objection was as much a decision on the merits of the settlement, as if the respondents had gone into the case, and had failed, before the recent statute, to establish the fact that notice of the prior order had been given to the appellants, or that the pauper had been removed—The Queen v. Clint (1), The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (2), The Queen v. Church Knowle (3), The Queen v. Evenwood and Barony (4), The Queen v. the Justices of Middlesex (5). Then the appellants ask the Court to do nothing more than it usually does—The King v. the Justices of Devon (6). Although this Court will not compel the Sessions to make a special entry, yet when what they have done would operate as a conclusive barrier against the hearing of the case on a future occasion—The King v. Wick St. Lawrence (7), this Court will direct it to be erased.

[PATTESON, J.—Suppose there was merely a general entry, then the respondents might shew, at a future day, the real ground for the decision; and if the Justices held that a decision on such an objection was not a decision on the merits, we could not interfere. How, then, can I now do so?]

The Court never assumes that Magistrates will act contrary to the law; and this being a decision on the merits, the Court must consider that the Justices will come to that conclusion. As to the power of the Court to make such an erasure, The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding of Yorkshire (8) is precisely in point. The cases in which this Court has compelled the Sessions to make entries on their records of matters which have never actually occurred,—e. g. continuances,—are much stronger instances of the controuling power of this Court than the present would be.

PATTESON, J.—In this case, it appeared that the examination on which the order of the Magistrates was founded, shewed no ground for the removal of the pauper. It set forth, as the ground, a prior order of removal to the appellant parish, unappealed against, which, it alleged, had been suspended; and there was no statement contained in it shewing that it had ever been served. The examination was, therefore, bad; and the Sessions, being of that opinion, decided that they would quash the order, with a special entry that it was quashed not on the merits. Considerable discussion then ensued, and an offer was made by the appellants to go into the case; but the respondents objected, that the appellants must abide by the decision of the Court already given. The Sessions refused to hear it; and thereupon an entry was made, that the appeal was quashed not on the merits. At first, I was inclined to think that the Sessions were right in doing this, and that a decision upon this objection was not a quashing on the merits. I am, however, now satisfied that my original impression was wrong. The cases of The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Evenwood and Barony, and The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Charlbury (9), have rightly decided, that where the examination omits some material facts, it is the same thing as if, on the hearing of the appeal, the parties had not brought evidence of such facts before the Court. I think the term “merits” is an unfortunate expression, and extremely likely to mislead. It is quite clear, therefore, that the Sessions were wrong in their decision; and then the question arises, whether this Court can direct the record to be amended. In The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding of Yorkshire, this Court certainly directed an entry of an appeal on the record of the Court of Quarter Sessions to be erased; and that case, it is contended, is an authority for this application; but there, the Court had originally possessed no power to make any entry at all. The Sessions had entered an appeal, in that case, on the motion of the respondents, and in the absence of the appellants, which they had no authority to do. They consequently had no jurisdiction, for the case was not properly before them. In this case, however, the appeal was properly entered, and the Court had jurisdiction over it, and they have decided it. How, then, can we compel them to re-hear a case on which they have decided? It may be true, that their decision is erroneous; but we cannot interfere with that. The law in such a case has provided no means of redress; for this court is not a court of error, to which appeals may be made from the Sessions. Whether upon any subsequent occasion the Magistrates will permit the appellants to contradict their record, by evidence that the former decision was, in fact, a decision on the merits, is a question which remains to be settled. The rule, however, now applied for must be refused.

Rule refused.

BAIL COURT. 1843. Nov. 22.	{	THE QUEEN v. THE JUSTICES OF THE WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE, in the matter of an appeal between THE INHABITANTS OF HARNLEY AND THE INHABITANTS OF ROTHWELL.

Appeal, Notice of — Poor — Statute 22 Geo. 3. c. 28.

Where a parish is incorporated under 22 Geo. 3. c. 28, the notice of appeal must be signed by the guardian, and he must describe himself therein as such. It is insufficient that he should describe himself as an overseer.

The appellant parish had been incorporated under Gilbert's Act, 22 Geo. 3. c. 28, and the notice of appeal in this instance had been signed by the guardian. He was not, however, so described, but the notice purported to be signed by the churchwardens and overseers, and was actually signed by them also. Upon the trial of the appeal at the Sessions, it was objected that the guardian alone ought to have signed the notice, and that he should have described himself as guardian. This objection was successful, and the appeal was thereupon dismissed.

R. Hall now moved for a rule nisi for a mandamus to the Justices to enter continuances and hear the appeal.—The signatures of the churchwardens and overseers were superfluous, and did not vitiate the notice; it is the same as if an inhabitant, as well as the churchwardens and overseers, in an ordinary case, had signed. It is usual to procure their signatures, in order to obviate any question as to the validity of the appointment of the guardian, but if he be regularly appointed, their names are mere surplusage. There is also a doubt under section 7, whether the overseers ought not to be parties to the notice, for its terms only seem to apply to cases in which notices are to be given to, and not by the overseers, and for other purposes the guardian is declared only to be an overseer. The exclusive powers, too, of the guardian are confined to those matters which relate to the care and management of the poor, and there is an obvious distinction between them and the removal of paupers, or appeals against removals. The act also contemplated that notices of appeal would still be served on the overseers as the proper parties.

[PATTESON, J.—Upon the appointment of a guardian, the overseers cease to have any power. They can then do nothing. The direction to the overseers to hand over notices, affords no argument; it only applies to cases where ignorant people might deliver such matters to them.]

Then with regard to the other objection that the guardian was not so described, this was unnecessary, for the parties could ascertain what his authority was; and, at all events, he was described as an overseer, which character as guardian he is expressly stated to fill. The words are, that "he shall, to all intents and purposes, except with regard to the making and collecting of rates, be an overseer of the poor." The notice, therefore, sufficiently discloses his authority, and the capacity in which he signed it. The practice too has always been to include him under the general description of the heading, "We, the undersigned churchwardens and overseers," at the commencement of the notice, and not to add any further description. The validity of such a notice, under these circumstances, is of considerable importance.

PATTESON, J.—It seems to me perfectly clear, that as soon as a guardian is appointed, the whole of the powers of the parish officers as to these matters become vested in him. This is in his capacity of guardian, and quâ overseer he has no authority. A notice of appeal ought, therefore, to be signed by him in his character of guardian; and if he omits to sign it as such, it is a blunder. The Sessions, I think, were quite right, and there will, therefore, be no rule.

Rule refused.

Indictment—Amendment—Venue—Certiorari.

After an indictment has been preferred at the Central Criminal Court, and removed by certiorari into this court, and set down for trial at the sittings, having the venue such as is prescribed by 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 36. s. 3, and no other, the Court will, by consent, order an amendment to be made in the venue, both in the margin and body of such indictment, in order to admit of its being tried by a London or Middlesex jury.

Erle had, in the present term, obtained a rule calling on the defendants to shew cause why a procedendo should not issue in this case, and the indictment be sent back to the Central Criminal Court, or why the indictment should not be amended by inserting a proper venue. It appeared that this was an indictment for a conspiracy which had been preferred at the Central Criminal Court in February 1842. The venue in the margin was "Central Criminal Court, to wit," and the material facts were alleged to have taken place within the jurisdiction of the said court, according to the provisions of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 36. s. 3. in that respect. The indictment had been removed by certiorari, and notice of trial had been given for the sittings after Easter term, 1842, and made a remanet at those sittings, and had subsequently been postponed. The rule was obtained in consequence of the judgment in The Queen v. Stowell (1), in which it was held that an indictment found at the Central Criminal Court could not be tried by a Middlesex jury, without its being averred that the material facts had taken place within the county.

The Solicitor General and Kelly appeared for the defendants, and consented to any amendment being made to remove the objection, which the Court had power to order.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We are all clearly of opinion that this Court has power to order such an amendment to be made by consent, after the certiorari has issued.

Appeal—Notice, Sufficiency of—Special Case.

It is not an objection to a notice of appeal against an order of removal, that such notice does not mention the names of the Justices who made the order.

The Court of Quarter Sessions should not, in a special case, ask questions of the Court, with a view to a re-hearing of the case.

Upon an appeal against an order of removal, it was objected by the respondents that the notice of appeal was insufficient, because it did not state the names of the Justices who made such order. The Sessions thought the objection should prevail, and confirmed the order, subject to a case for the opinion of the Court upon the question, whether such notice was sufficient. If the Court should be of opinion that such notice was sufficient, the case to go back to the Sessions to be re-heard.

Baines, in support of the order of Sessions.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We do not wish to encourage the practice of asking questions of this Court with a view to a re-hearing of the case by the Sessions; but in this instance we may say, that there is nothing whatever in the objection.

Case sent back to the Sessions.

Hiring and Service—Evidence—Custom—Written Contract—Special Case.

Where a workman is hired for a year to work at a particular trade, under a written agreement, which says nothing as to any periods of absence allowed to the workman, parol evidence may be given that it is the custom of the particular trade for the workmen employed in it to take certain holidays, and to absent themselves on such occasions from their work without the permission of their masters.

The Sessions should not send up a case with a view to its being re-heard by them, but should decide both ways, provisionally.

Upon an appeal against an order of two Justices for the removal of Benjamin Tile, his wife, and three children, from the parish of Stoke-upon-Trent, in the county of Stafford, to the parish of Trentham, in the said county, the Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following—

CASE.

The pauper's father was settled in the parish of Trentham. In the month of November 1815 the pauper was hired by and served Messrs. Bourne & Co., china-manufacturers, of Trentham, in the respondent parish, from the 11th day of November 1815, for nearly two years. After the pauper had been in the service some time, he signed a writing in a book, and which was also signed by other workmen, at different times, and was as follows:—
"Plate and dish workers. This day agreed with Ralph Bourne to serve Messrs. Bourne, Baker & Bourne, from the 11th of November next until the 11th of November 1817, at prices, good out of oven, as per opposite side: we agree to lose no time on our own account, to do our work well, and to behave ourselves well in every respect as good servants. Witness our hands, the 10th day of January 1815." This writing was signed by none of the masters, but was always left in their custody. On the opposite side of the book was a statement of the prices to be paid for the making of the plates and dishes at per dozen. It was objected, on the part of the respondents, that the above writing was not a valid agreement, because it was not stamped, and not signed by the masters, but the objection was overruled, and the writing was read. On the part of the respondents, evidence was offered to shew that an universal custom prevailed amongst china-manufacturers to allow holidays at certain fixed times of the year to the platers and dishers, and that, at these times, the latter could, notwithstanding the above writing in the book, absent themselves from their work without their masters' permission. This evidence was objected to as inadmissible, and was rejected. The pauper was called by the appellants, and proved that he was hired by and served Messrs. Bourne & Co. for nearly two years, from the 11th of November 1815, as a plater; that during that period he had his Sundays to himself, doing no work on those days; that he absented himself from his work at Easter for two or three days, and at the wakes, and in August; and that, after these holidays, he returned to his work. The pauper also proved that he always had work of his masters' that he might have done on the play-days. On the part of the respondents, the following question was asked the pauper:—"At the time of the hiring or signing the book, was anything said as to the holidays or Sundays that you were to have to yourself?" This question was objected to, as being a contradiction of the terms of the writing in the book; also, the following question:—"Is it the custom of persons employed in the trade of dish and plate makers, under such a contract as this, to have certain holidays in the course of the year, and the Sundays, to themselves?" This question was objected to, on the ground that evidence of the custom of the trade was inadmissible. The objections to both the questions were allowed by the Court. The questions for the opinion of the Court were—First, whether the writing in the book was an agreement which ought to have been received by the Court? Secondly, whether, under the circumstances stated, evidence was admissible to shew an universally prevailing custom among china-manufacturers to allow platers and dishers holidays at certain fixed times of the year? Thirdly, whether the questions above stated, or any of them, were admissible? If the Court were of opinion that the writing was an agreement that ought to have been received, and that the evidence of the custom was inadmissible, and that the questions were improper, then the order of Sessions to be confirmed; but if the Court should be of opinion that the written evidence ought not to have been received, or that evidence of the custom was admissible, or that either of the questions was proper, then the Court of Quarter Sessions were to re-hear the appeal.

Godson and Whitmore, in support of the order of Sessions.—(The objection as to the stamp was abandoned by the respondents.) Then, as to the first question, it was not necessary that the writing should have the signatures of the masters—The King v. Houghton-le-Spring (1). Here, there has been actual service under it, and the question of mutuality, therefore, does not arise. As to the second point, if it was meant, by the evidence, to vary the effect of the contract, it would be inadmissible.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Could you not shew, in answer to evidence of absence by the servant, that leave was given by the master? and, in the same way, could not a custom, for the servant to absent himself at particular days, be shewn?]

Absence by custom would have been immaterial, and would not prevent the settlement being acquired—The King v. Horwick (2), The King v. St. Agnes (3), The King v. Birmingham (4); but anything said at the time of the agreement with reference to the custom would be inadmissible.

Lee and Yardley, contra.—The questions were put for the purpose of explanation, and were not inconsistent with the written agreement. That agreement did not exclude the custom sought to be proved—Holding v. Pigott (5), Hutton v. Warren (6). The object, no doubt, was to get at the fact, that this, in truth, was an exceptive hiring—The Queen v. Threkingham (7).

LORD DENMAN, C. J.—I think that, if the evidence of the custom had been admitted, the Sessions would not have thought the contract was to except part of the time, and I think the Sessions ought to have admitted it. It must be taken that both parties knew what the custom was. This is not inconsistent with the contract. The trade, indeed, might not be constantly going on for a whole year. The case must, therefore, go back to the Sessions, though I think this is an improper practice. The Sessions should decide provisionally both ways, leaving the event to depend on the judgment of the Court (8).

PATTESON, J.—The contract was general; and, by the evidence, no direct contradiction is introduced. The contract is not to work from day to day, or every day, but generally from one time to another.

WILLIAMS, J.—There was no stipulation as to time in the agreement, which is very general. I think that the evidence did not go to contradict anything in it, and was improperly rejected. The custom of the trade, indeed, may be said to be impliedly taken as part of the contract, and the evidence is tendered to shew what that custom is.

COLERIDGE, J.—I have always understood that the general usage of trade may be given in evidence on the ground that the parties contracted with reference to it. In this case, I do not see how the evidence was inconsistent with the written contract.

Order of Sessions quashed, and the case sent back to be re-heard.

BAIL COURT. }
1843. } THE QUEEN v. KING.
Nov. 21. }

Commitment—Statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29. s. 26.—Deer Stealing.

A warrant of commitment, on a conviction, must recite a conviction for an offence over which the committing Magistrate had jurisdiction; and the Court will not presume a conviction to be good, which, according to the recital, shews a want of jurisdiction.

A commitment, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29. s. 26, reciting a conviction, that the defendant "did unlawfully kill and carry away one fallow deer, the property of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, against the form of the statute,"—Held, bad, for omitting to state that the deer was in the uninclosed part of some forest, chase, or purlieu.

The defendant, with one Charles Lilley, had been committed, on the 14th of September 1843, to the house of correction at Winchester, under the warrant of a Magistrate, which recited, that they were convicted, on the 7th of September inst., at the parish of Milton, in the said county of Southampton, for that they "did unlawfully kill and carry away one fallow deer belonging to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided," and adjudged them to pay the sum of 50*l.* each, and in default of payment to be imprisoned for four calendar months, and commanded the keeper of the house of correction to imprison them during that period, unless the penalty was sooner paid.

King being now brought up under a writ of habeas corpus, to which the keeper of the house of correction made the above return,—

Barstow moved to discharge him out of custody.—The commitment is invalid, inasmuch as it recites a conviction, which discloses no offence over which the Magistrate had jurisdiction. The statute 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29. s. 26. provides, that "if any person shall unlawfully and wilfully course, hunt, snare, or carry away, or kill or wound, or attempt to kill or wound, any deer kept or being in any uninclosed part of any forest, chace, or purlieu, he shall, for every such offence, on conviction thereof, before a Justice of the Peace, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 50*l*." That the deer should be in some uninclosed part of a forest, chace, or purlieu, is a necessary portion of the offence, and in that respect the conviction is defective. The prior part of the section, which makes it an offence if the deer be in any inclosed part of a forest, &c., or any inclosed land wherein deer are usually kept, declares the offence to be felony, over which the Justice has no power of summary conviction. For anything that appears on this commitment, and on the conviction recited in it, the deer in question may have been in such an inclosure; or it may have been in some other uninclosed place, not being part of any forest, chace, or purlieu, where it would be no offence to kill it.

Smirke was then called on to support the commitment.—It must be admitted that the conviction would be bad if it were in the form recited; but the warrant need not be so precise; and so long as it states that the defendant has been convicted, it suffices, and the Court will presume, till the contrary is shewn, that the conviction was regular. This is provided for by the 71st section, which enacts, "that no warrants of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party had been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same. Then, in The King v. Taylor (1), it was held, that although the warrant of commitment is plainly defective on the face of it, yet, if it shews there has been a conviction, the Court will not notice the defect, till the conviction itself is brought before them, The King v. Rogers (2) is an authority to the same effect. That decision would certainly appear to be at variance with the judgment in The Queen v. Chaney (3); but it was not cited in the argument, otherwise the decision might have been different. The object of the section of the act was to render the form of the warrant immaterial, and so long as it contains a general statement that the party has been convicted, its purpose is answered.

[PATTESON, J.—According to that argument, it would be good if the Magistrate were merely to say, "the defendant has been convicted by me in a penalty: receive him into your custody." Looking at The King v. Rogers, it appears to me to be quite contrary to what I decided in The Queen v. Chaney.]

That case is perhaps distinguishable: the commitment stated a continuance to navigate a ship after a pilot had offered his services, which constituted no offence per se.

[PATTESON, J.—It was an offence if the party knew it; so here it would be an offence if the deer were in the uninclosed part of a forest. What a monstrous thing it would be, that there should be a bad warrant of commitment, and a bad conviction, as far as we can see, and that the party cannot be discharged. I cannot, however, overrule the decision of the full Court, without taking time to consider.]

Barstow.—The King v. Rogers is not applicable; the warrant there recited a perfectly good conviction, so far as the jurisdiction of the Magistrates was concerned; but an objection was raised, that the penalty was not duly awarded. That was a mere formal matter; it shewed no want of jurisdiction, like this commitment. If the argument on the other side were sound, a warrant of commitment, directing the gaolers to receive the body of A. B. duly convicted before me, without specifying any offence at all, would be valid. Here, too, the certiorari is taken away, which creates a distinction between this and the cases quoted, for it deprives the party of any means of seeing whether the conviction be right. It may be conceded, that a warrant of commitment need not contain the same nicety as an indictment; but it is absolutely necessary it should shew some jurisdiction; and here the jurisdiction, which appears to have been exercised, was no jurisdiction at all.

PATTESON, J.—Wickes v. Clutterbuck (4) was a case in which the party had been convicted for fishing in a pond, the commitment omitting to state that it was inclosed. The Court did not enter into the question, whether the conviction was right or wrong, but held the commitment to be bad. In that case an action of trespass had been brought, and the question arose in the course of the trial, but in other respects it is not distinguishable from the present case. I therefore think that this warrant is void; and although I should not certainly have held that I was bound to discharge the prisoner, if the defect were a mere informality, yet where there is a defect of jurisdiction apparent on the face of the warrant, I feel that I ought not to assume that the Magistrate possessed any. I also think that this case is not distinguishable from The Queen v. Chaney, where the warrant was defective in the same respect. As to The King v. Rogers, it is to be observed, that the objection raised was with respect to the omission of a proper award of the penalty, a mere matter of form. It was certainly a formal defect, which would have rendered the conviction bad, if it were contained in it, but the commitment itself did not exhibit any want of jurisdiction.

Highway—Order of Magistrates—Certainty.

In an order made by Magistrates at special Sessions, under 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. ss. 94, 95, for the indictment of a highway, it should distinctly appear that such highway is within the division for which such special sessions are held; and if that do not appear, the subsequent proceedings at the Quarter Sessions are void, though it may appear, on the face of them, that the highway was within their jurisdiction.

Rule for a mandamus, calling on the Magistrates of the West Riding of Yorkshire, to issue a warrant for levying costs against a party against whom an indictment had been preferred for not repairing a highway, pursuant to the provisions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 50. ss. 94, 95, and at the trial of which the defendant was found guilty, and an order for the payment of the costs of the indictment was made by the Sessions.

Hall shewed cause, and objected to the order of Sessions, amongst other things, that it did not appear by the original order of Justices, made at special sessions, and by which the indictment was directed to be preferred, that the road in question was within the division in and for which such special sessions were held—The Queen v. Cartworth (1), Walton v. Chesterfield (2). The divisions of counties, with reference to special sessions, is regulated by 9 Geo. 4. c. 43. and 6 Will. 4. c. 12. On this objection being taken, the Court called on Pashley, in support of the rule.—This is a proceeding founded on the order of Quarter Sessions. The order of Magistrates is not in question—Sellwood v. Mount (3).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The question will be, whether the Quarter Sessions were properly set in motion?]

It must be taken, that everything alleged in the order of Quarter Sessions is true. That order of Sessions shews the road to be within the division.

[COLERIDGE, J.—But you should shew enough to give the Sessions jurisdiction to try; and that depends on the question, whether the order of Magistrates was a sufficient and proper order.]

The act of parliament is merely directory. Many things are essential to making orders at petty sessions, which need not appear in the orders themselves.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think this objection must prevail. In cases of this sort, all things necessary to give the Sessions jurisdiction should appear in every part of the proceedings. I see no difficulty likely to arise from this rule, any more than in indictments, where everything must be shewn necessary to a complete description of the subject-matter.

Certiorari—Notice under 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5.

It is necessary that the notice previous to applying for a certiorari under statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5, should be, in the first instance, sworn to have been given to two Justices, before whom the order was made; and an omission, in this respect, cannot be supplied by a subsequent affidavit.

Baines had obtained a rule nisi for quashing the certiorari issued in this case, for bringing up an order made at the sessions for the West Riding of Yorkshire. The objection was, that the two Justices on whom the notice had been served, were not sworn to have been two of those before whom the order had been made.

Archbold shewed cause.—First, the affidavits are not properly entitled. They should, in moving for this rule, have been entitled, "The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Gilbersome." This is the converse of the case of Hollis v. Brandon (1). The rule is to quash a certiorari which has already issued.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The officer of the court informs us, that they are entitled in the usual way. These affidavits were right when sworn, and are now set out in the subsequent proceedings. In informations, the same thing takes place. The Court there refers to affidavits which are sworn, but not entitled.]

Secondly, we now produce an affidavit, that one of the Magistrates on whom the notice was served, was the chairman of the sessions, and that the other was present when the order was made.

Baines, contra.—Such an affidavit is now too late. The certiorari was granted at the time on imperfect materials—The Queen v. the Justices of Shrewsbury and Salop (2); and no opportunity given of shewing cause against granting it.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We decided, the other day, that it should appear by the affidavit of service of the notice, under statute 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5, that such notice was served on two Magistrates present at the time of making the order of sessions (3). It is too late now to come with an affidavit that they were, in fact, present. As well might the notice have been sworn to have been served on two Magistrates of the county of Middlesex, and then, on objection taken, might we have an affidavit that such Magistrates were also Magistrates for the West Riding of Yorkshire.

Commitment—Statute 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 2.

A commitment, under 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 2, stating, that the defendant, a miner, had contracted to serve A. B, but omitting to state "in the employment of a miner,"—Held bad.

A commitment, under that statute, alleging a complaint of the master on oath, and then reciting that the Magistrate had duly examined the proofs and allegations of both the parties touching the matter of the complaint, and adjudging it to be true, held bad for want of an averment that the latter examination was on oath.

The defendant, and two other persons, named Jones and Fairley, had been committed to Stafford gaol, under a commitment by a Magistrate, which, after the usual direction, stated, that "whereas complaint hath been made unto me, one of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the said county, upon the oath of James Dabbs, of the parish of Wednesbury, miner, that Thomas Lewis, late of the foreign of Walsall, in the said county, miner, hath contracted with the said James Dabbs, and Samuel Dabbs, his partner, to serve them in the employment of a miner, until he shall have given to or received from his said masters one fortnight's notice to quit and leave his said masters' service, and until such notice shall have fully expired, and hath entered into such service, and absented himself from the same service, in the county aforesaid, without his said masters' consent, before his said contract was completed. And whereas, in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, I have duly examined the proofs and allegations of both the said parties, touching the matters of the said complaint, and upon due consideration had thereof, have adjudged and determined, and do hereby adjudge and determine, the said complaint to be true, and I do therefore convict the said Thomas Lewis of the said offence, in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided." The commitment then directed his imprisonment. The commitments in the other two cases were the same, with the exception that the words, "in the employment of a miner," were omitted. The prisoners being now brought up under a writ of habeas corpus,—

Bodkin moved for their discharge.—He objected as to the two latter commitments, that the omission of the statement, that they contracted to serve in the employment of miners, rendered them void under 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 2; and that, as to the first commitment, the conviction was not stated to have been founded upon evidence given on oath.

WILLIAMS, J. called on

F. V. Lee to support the commitments.—It must be admitted that the last two commitments are bad, for the reason assigned; but as to the first, the question is, whether the recital, that complaint had been made upon oath, cannot be called in aid to shew what were the proofs and allegations into which the Magistrate had examined. In effect the Magistrate says, that complaint has been made to me, upon the oath of James Dabbs, and then goes on to say, "I have examined the proofs and allegations of both the said parties, that is, the proof upon oath.

WILLIAMS, J.—Indeed, I do not think any such construction can be given to the commitment. As Lord Ellenborough said in one case, "I cannot read this in a manner different from that which I should adopt in reading any other composition, and I am not to resort to any violent intendment to support it." The statute requires the complaint to be upon oath, and then, in a substantive distinct part, empowers the Justice to examine into the matter. At that hearing something might occur to excuse the party, and it is quite clear that it therefore ought to be upon oath. The commitment is consequently defective.

Appeal—Examination—Chargeability—Order of Sessions.

Where the examinations do not disclose any evidence of chargeability, and the order of removal is on that ground quashed generally by order of Sessions, such order of Sessions cannot be treated as conclusive of the settlement of the pauper; and at a subsequent Sessions the ground on which the former order was quashed may be shewn.

The question of chargeability is a question on the merits; i. e. on the merits as they exist at the time of removal, and does not affect the goodness or badness of the settlement.

Upon an appeal against the order of two Justices, for the removal of Catharine Cocking from the parish of Perranzabuloe, in the county of Cornwall, to the borough of Bodmin, in the same county, the Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of the Court upon a case, which set out the examination of the pauper and other persons, on which the order was made, and which went to shew relief given to the pauper by the appellant parish, whilst residing in the respondent parish; and which also stated the said Catharine Cocking to be then resident in and chargeable to the parish of Perranzabuloe.

One of the grounds of appeal was, "because a former order of H. W. and W. P. K., two of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the said county of Cornwall, removing the said Catharine Cocking from the said parish of Perranzabuloe, to the said borough of Bodmin, has been quashed by the Court of Quarter Sessions for the county of Cornwall, at the April Sessions, in the present year, and which said order of the said Court of Quarter Sessions, related directly to the point then and now in question between the parties to the present appeal, and is therefore binding and conclusive between them, so far as respects the place of the last legal settlement of the said Catharine Cocking.

At the hearing of the appeal, the appellants, in support of this ground of appeal, put in an order of Sessions, dated the 5th of April 1843, whereby, upon an appeal against an order, bearing date the 9th of November 1842, under the hands and seals of H. W. and W. P. K, Esqrs., two of her Majesty's Justices, &c., for the removal of Catharine Cocking, widow, from the respondent to the appellant parish, such order was, "upon hearing what could be proved and alleged on oath on either side, ordered and adjudged to be reversed;" and the churchwardens and overseers of the borough of Bodmin were ordered to take and convey the said Catharine Cocking from the said borough to the parish of Perranzabuloe, and deliver her to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of that parish, who were thereby required to receive her and provide for her as their own parishioner. And the appellants further identified the pauper as being the subject of the former order.

In answer to this, the respondents tendered evidence to shew that the merits were not heard at the trial of the former appeal. It was then admitted on both sides, that the former order, of the 29th of November, was quashed, because the examination, upon which that order was founded, did not contain evidence of chargeability; and the Court, being of opinion that the omission went to the merits, quashed the second order generally.

If this Court should be of opinion that the former order was not quashed upon the merits, the order of Quarter Sessions to be quashed; but if the Court should be of a contrary opinion, the same to stand confirmed.

Erle, (Johnson was with him,) in support of the order of Sessions.—The order was quashed generally at a former sessions. That was a solemn adjudication, and the subsequent Sessions had a right to treat such former order as conclusive.

[PATTERSON, J.—If the examination contains no statement of chargeability, and the order of removal is quashed on that ground, that is not conclusive of the question of settlement: many cases go to establish that. If a pauper is not chargeable to-day, he may be to-morrow⁽¹⁾, but how does that touch the goodness or badness of the settlement?]

In The Queen v. Charlbury and Walcot (2), the Court seems to have intimated that a defect in the examination, which the Sessions judged material to the merits, was conclusive; and, in that case, the Sessions refused to hear a witness who was tendered to shew the ground on which a former order was quashed.

[COLERIDGE, J.—In that case, the fact which the Sessions judged material was a date; such a date might have been material, and how could we say that it was not? It must not be supposed that that case turned at all on the refusal to hear; the Sessions, knowing what the evidence was, were satisfied that it would not alter their decision.]

The former Sessions not having made any special entry of the special ground on which the order was made, it must be taken to be made on the merits.

[PATTERSON, J.—Chargeability and removeability are both merits. In The Queen v. Charlbury I expressly drew the distinction, and it applies here. The second removal is made upon a new state of facts, and the question on the second appeal has nothing to do with that which has been already decided.]

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Granting you all that you wish in point of principle, still it is clear that the Sessions were wrong. The former order of Sessions was made upon the state of facts then presented to them. Their decision on those facts was a decision on the merits, but such decision cannot affect the new case that is presented to them. The Sessions have misapprehended the effect of the former decision of this Court.

Examination — Particularity — Grounds of Appeal — Settlement by renting Feed of a Cow.

The examination of a pauper stated that he was put out an apprentice by covenant indenture:—Held, that the nature of the binding was described with sufficient particularity, as distinguished from a binding by the parish.

*A settlement set up in one of the grounds of appeal was, that the pauper had rented "a tenement," consisting of the keeping or feeding of a cow, of which he was the owner, "by and on the land and premises" of J. H, for the space of one whole year, and which was of the value of 10*l.* a year at the least:—Held, insufficient, as not shewing, on the face of it, that the cow was to be fed on the growing produce of the land.*

On an appeal against an order of two Justices, for the removal of William Burdett, and Sarah, his wife, from the township of Denby, in the West Riding of the county of York, to the township of Cumberworth Half, in the same riding, the Sessions confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court upon the following

CASE.

The examination respecting the settlement of the said William Burdett, and Sarah, his wife, whereon the said order was made, was the following:—This examinant (William Burdett) maketh oath and saith, I am sixty-nine years of age, and the place of my settlement is at Cumberworth Half, in the said riding, which I gained by apprenticeship with Amos Burdett, of Gilsf, in Cumberworth Half aforesaid. When I was about fourteen years of age, I was put out an apprentice by covenant indenture to the said Amos Burdett for the term of seven years, to learn the trade of a clothier, and I went to, and resided with, the said Amos Burdett, in Cumberworth Half, under the said indenture, for five years and six months, when my brother, Joseph Morton, purchased my time out with my master for the sum of two guineas, which was paid by my mother, and the indentures were destroyed; and I have never done any act since whereby to gain a settlement. I was married at Louth, in Lincolnshire, to my wife, Sarah Roberts, in the year 1795. On the hearing of the appeal, as soon as the respondents had opened their case, the appellants objected that the said examination was insufficient on the face of it, and that the said order of removal ought, on that ground, to be quashed. The grounds of insufficiency relied on under the grounds of appeal, which properly pointed them out, were, that the alleged indenture of apprenticeship was neither shewn to have been produced before the Justices who took the said examination, nor was its loss or destruction sufficiently shewn, to let in secondary evidence before the said Justices of such indenture; and that, if a sufficient foundation were laid in the said examination to warrant the reception of such secondary evidence, then, that the secondary evidence given respecting the said indenture was wholly defective and insufficient, in the following respects; that is to say, that it did not appear by the said examination whether the said William Burdett was a parish apprentice, or by whom he was bound, or who were the parties to the supposed indenture; and that, if he were a parish apprentice, then, that it did not appear by the said examination whether the said binding was allowed by the Justices of the Peace; and that it did not appear by the said examination either that the money given or contracted for in relation to such apprentice was inserted in the said indenture, or that the said indenture was duly stamped, in pursuance of the statutes in force at the time when it was executed. The Court of Quarter Sessions, after hearing counsel on both sides upon the alleged insufficiency of the said examination, overruled the objections taken, and held the said examination good. The appellants, after such decision of the Court, conceded that the respondents could prove the settlement stated in the examination, and that settlement was taken as proved. The appellants proposed to rely on a subsequently-acquired settlement, as stated in the following, which was the seventh ground:—That, subsequent to the said alleged apprenticeship in our said township of Cumberworth Half, that is to say, in or about the year 1812, the said William Burdett, the pauper, rented a cottage or tenement of the value and for the sum (which he paid) of 1*l.* 10*s.* per annum, situate at Exley Gate, in your said township of Denby, in which he resided for the term of one whole year at the least, and the said pauper has ever since continued to reside, and does in fact now reside, in the same cottage at Exley Gate aforesaid; and that in or about the year aforesaid, and at the same time that he so occupied and resided in the said cottage or tenement at Exley Gate aforesaid, he also rented and occupied another tenement at Denby Hall, in your said township of Denby, consisting of the keeping or feeding of a cow, of which he was the owner, by and on the land and premises of James Haigh, of Denby Hall aforesaid, for the space of one whole year, and which was of the value of 10*l.* a year at the least, and for which the said pauper paid to the said James Haigh the sum of 4*s.* a week during the whole year, whereby the said pauper did acquire a settlement, and is now legally settled in your said township of Denby. The respondents, upon this, admitted that the facts stated in the said seventh ground of appeal were all true; and it was agreed by the counsel on both sides, that evidence sufficient to establish the said seventh ground of appeal should be taken as having been adduced by the appellants; but the counsel for the respondents objected that the said seventh ground of appeal did not shew upon the face of it a legal settlement in the said township of Denby. After hearing this question argued, the Court of Quarter Sessions decided, that the said seventh ground of appeal did not shew upon the face of it a legal settlement in the said township, and thereupon confirmed the said order of removal, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench.

If the Court of Queen's Bench should be of opinion either that the said examination is bad, as contended by the counsel for the appellants, or that the said seventh ground does shew a legal settlement in Denby, then the said order of removal and the said order of Sessions to be quashed; otherwise, the said order of Sessions and the said order of removal to stand confirmed.

Sir G. Lewin and Overend, in support of the order of Sessions.—As to the first point, a "covenant indenture" is a term that gives, on the face of it, sufficient information.

Supposing it to be necessary to shew whether the indenture was a parish indenture or not, the words of this examination do sufficiently shew it. The stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2. s. 5. provides, that churchwardens and overseers may bind poor children to be apprentices till such man child shall be of the age of twenty-four years, and such woman child of the age of twenty-one years, or the time of her marriage, "the same to be as effectual to all purposes as if such child were of full age, and by indenture of covenant bound him or herself." The statute, therefore, places a binding by indenture of covenant (which must be taken to be the same thing as a covenant indenture,) in contradistinction to a binding by the Justices. But it is sufficient to shew an apprenticeship, without saying whether the binding was by the parish or not. This kind of settlement is created by 3 W. & M. c. 11. s. 8, which uses the words, "apprenticeship by indenture." Then, as to the destruction, that is positively stated.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—You need not labour that point; but we will hear the other side on the objection to the examination, before we go into the other question arising on the grounds of appeal.]

R. Hall and Pashley, contra.—The examination should give full information as to the description of the indenture: here it is ambiguous. The terms "covenant indenture" do not define any particular sort of indenture; nor can it be said that the 43 Eliz. intended to draw any distinction, any more than if it had used the word "indenture" only, which would comprehend both descriptions of indenture: they both contain covenants. The terms used, "I was put," &c., would rather go to shew that the pauper did not bind himself. The terms "single and unmarried," and the word "occupy," have been considered ambiguous—The Queen v. Wymondham (1), The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding, (Drighlington v. Pudsey,) (2), The Queen v. Old Stratford (3). So, "hiring and service," without more—The Queen v. North Bovey (4). Cur. adv. vult.

The COURT desired to hear the argument on the second point.

Sir G. Lewin and Overend.—It does not appear, from the grounds of appeal, that the keeping and feeding of the cow constituted a tenement: for that purpose, it should appear that the cow was to be fed all the year round on the growing produce of the land—The King v. Bardwell (8), referring to The King v. Minster (9), where the point was not taken. Here the agreement would include a period when the snow was on the ground, and when, therefore, the cow could not have been pasture fed—The King v. Sutton St. Edmund's (10), The King v. Tisbury (11). The “keeping and feeding” of a cow does not necessarily imply pasture feeding, any more than the “going” of sheep, which was held to convey no such meaning in The King v. Thornham (12). It should have been expressly stated that the cow was to be pasture fed—The King v. Darley Abbey (13), The King v. Stoke-upon-Trent (14). The King v. Piddletrenthide (15) was decided on the ground that the right to take rabbits gave an interest in the land. The words here, “by and on the land and premises,” would seem to imply feeding sometimes on the land and sometimes in a cow-house; and it would have been no breach of contract by James Haigh to have fed the cow by means other than pasture. The statement will not be aided by intendment—The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding, The Queen v.

Old Stratford, The Queen v. the Recorder of Leeds (16).

R. Hall and Pashley, contra.—The feeding and keeping of the cow was a tenement within the 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. The words “by and on the land,” limits the feeding to the produce at the time. Hay previously severed could not be considered as forming any part of the land. The King v. Piddletrenthide was decided on the authority of Kinver v. Stone (17), which turned on the question of the profit derived from the warren, without inquiring into the mode of feeding rabbits in winter. The King v. Minster is an authority for the appellants.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Upon the first point, namely, whether the examination is good or not, we entertained some doubt at first; but I now think that the terms “covenant indenture” are sufficiently descriptive to allow the Sessions to deal with the case. As to the grounds of appeal, it appears to me, that that which is stated does not compose a tenement. The statement does not import that the cow was to be fed on the growing produce of any particular land, within the rule laid down in The King v. Tisbury, and that class of cases. I think the meaning which is sought to be introduced, as to the words, “by and on the land and premises,” is quite out of the question; and that the description would be satisfied by shewing that the cow was to be fed by hay or other means on the premises. I think, therefore, that the appellants have given notice of that which they called a tenement, but could not prove to be so; and that the order of Sessions must be confirmed.

PATTESON, J.—I was not present at the former argument, but I quite agree as to the effect of the words “covenant indenture.” As to the other point, it is said, that the notice purports that the cow was to be fed on the produce of the land during the whole year: that seems to me a very strong construction to put upon it. It appears to me, on reading it, that it would admit of the cow's being fed on the land as long as the produce lasted, and by other means when there was no grass for it to eat. The case of The King v. Sutton St. Edmund's seems to me to shew the distinction more strongly than any other case. There Bayley, J. referred during the argument to The King v. Oswald Twissell, where the pauper rented, inter alia, the milk of a cow, to be kept by the owner; her keep made up the necessary value, 10l., and she was, in fact, pasture fed; but it was held, that inasmuch as it did not appear to have been matter of bargain that she should be pasture fed, hiring her milk was not necessarily taking a tenement. I thought it would have been contended here, that (the value of the tenement being of 10l.) the keep of the cow would be a tenement so far as she was fed on the produce of the land, though not so far as she was fed by other means, as in the very case of The King v. Sutton St. Edmund's, where the keep of the cows on the pasture during the summer months was admitted to be a tenement. Nothing of that sort, however, can be collected in this case.

COLERIDGE, J.—I think the Sessions were right on both points, though, on the first, I was of a different opinion on the former argument. It is important to look at the wording of the stat. 43 Eliz. c. 5, where an "indenture of covenant" is put in contradistinction to a parish indenture. It further appears, that in this case no application was made to the Magistrates when the indenture was put an end to. As to the second point, if we read the statement as any man of common sense must be supposed to do, it would seem, that the cow was to be fed and kept on the lands and premises of James Haigh. The use of the word "tenement" in the beginning, will not make that a tenement which otherwise would not amount to one, but the description is tied up with what follows as to the statement of the mode in which the cow was to be fed; and that does not necessarily constitute a tenement, for the reasons already given.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion on both points. The word "tenement" is explained by what follows; and the "feeding and keeping" might, for anything that appears, be upon hay made in some former year, or on other land. The explanation given of what is meant by the word "tenement," is not sufficient to constitute it a tenement for the purpose of a settlement.

Order of Sessions confirmed.

Commitment—Sureties to keep the Peace —Gaol—House of Correction.

A commitment of a party who refuses to give sureties to keep the peace, need not be made to the gaol, but is good if made to the house of correction.

This was a rule calling upon G. Briscoe and J. Barker, the committing Magistrates, A. P. Brevitt, the party complaining before them, and the keeper of the house of correction at Stafford, to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not issue to the keeper, commanding him to have the body of William Aston before this Court, on a day to be named by the Court. The ground of the application was, that the commitment ought to have been to the county gaol, and not to the house of correction. The affidavit, on which the rule was granted, stated, that William Aston had been committed, and was then confined in the house of correction, in and for the county of Stafford, under a warrant of commitment, under the hands of George Briscoe and John Barker, for refusing to find sureties to keep the peace towards Archibald Paul Brevitt. The warrant was in these terms:—

"To all constables and peace officers in the said county, and to the keeper of the house of correction at Stafford, in the said county.

"Whereas Archibald Paul Brevitt, of the parish of Darlaston, in the said county, gentleman, hath made oath before us, George Briscoe and John Barker, Esqs., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said county of Stafford, that he is afraid that William Aston, of the parish of Lapley, in the said county, farmer, will do him some bodily injury, having so threatened, and hath therefore required surety of the peace and good behaviour against the said William Aston. And whereas the said William Aston has this day been brought before us to answer the said complaint; and upon our examination thereof, we, the said Justices, have ordered and adjudged, and do hereby order and adjudge, that the said William Aston shall find sufficient sureties to be bound with him in a recognizance in the sum of 25*l.* each, for him to keep the peace, and to be of good behaviour towards the Queen, and all her liege people, and especially towards the said Archibald Paul Brevitt, for the space of one calendar month now next ensuing. And whereas, the said William Aston hath refused, and doth now refuse, before us, to find such sureties, these are therefore to require you, the said constables, forthwith to convey the said William Aston to the said house of correction, and to deliver him to the said keeper thereof there, together with this precept. And we do hereby require you, the said keeper, to receive the said William Aston into your custody, in the said house of correction, and him there safely to keep for the space of one calendar month, unless he shall, in the mean time, find such sureties as aforesaid, to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for the term above mentioned. Given under our hands and seals, the 5th day of January 1844.

“George Briscoe (L.S.)”

“John Barker (L.S.)”

The governor of the prison stated, in his affidavit in answer, that the gaol and house of correction were one and the same building, under the same continuous roof, and within the same boundary wall, and that he was governor of both; that all persons committed for assaults, or for want of sureties to keep the peace, either to the gaol or house of correction, were confined in one department, which was called “Misdemeanants’ Class,” being the only place in the prison that could be appropriated to so numerous a class of prisoners; and that, had the commitment of the said W. Aston been directed to the “keeper of the gaol,” instead of to the “keeper of the house of correction,” the said W. Aston would have been placed in the same class and building wherein he then was, and in all respects under the same rules and regulations as he had been.

Martin shewed cause.—The commitment in this case was legal. The 6 Geo. 1. c. 19. s. 2, after reciting the inconvenience of committing to the gaol persons charged with small offences, or for want of sureties, enacts, that it “shall be lawful for Justices of the Peace, within their respective jurisdictions, to commit such vagrants, and other criminals, offenders, person and persons, either to the common gaol or house of correction.” It appears from the 4 Geo. 4. c. 64. ss. 5. and 10. and 5 Geo. 4. c. 85. s. 10. coupled with the affidavits, that the Justices have the power of classifying the prisoners, and that Aston would have been placed in the same class, and in the same part of the building, if he had been committed to the gaol instead of the house of correction. The commitment is good however, notwithstanding the acts relating to gaols. He referred to Ex parte Evans (1), Willes v. Bridger (2), and the 18 Eliz. c. 3.

M. D. Hill, contra.—At common law, and by various statutes, the commitment ought to have been to the gaol, of which the sheriff is the keeper; and it is submitted, that the alteration made by the 6 Geo. 1. c. 19. s. 2. does not apply to this case; secondly, it does not appear that the party committed has been heard in his own defence. Again, the 5th section of 4 Geo. 4. c. 64. provides, that where “any house of correction shall be part of the same building, or inclosed in the same boundary wall as, or shall be contiguous to the common gaol, or shall be under the superintendence of the same keeper and the same visiting Justices, it shall be lawful for the Justices of the Peace of the county, &c., assembled at any general or quarter sessions from time to time, with the consent of the sheriff of the county,” to classify the prisoners. Here it does not appear, from the affidavits, that the conditions precedent have been complied with, that the house of correction is under the superintendence of the same visiting Justices, or that there has been any order at sessions, or any consent of the sheriff.

LORD ABINGER, C.B.—I think this rule must be discharged. The objection to this warrant of commitment is not that the party complaining ought not to be committed at all, but that he ought in terms to have been committed to the gaol, and not to the house of correction. The first question is, whether a commitment for want of sureties is legal; and of that there can be no doubt. The 6 Geo. 1. c. 19. s. 2, which gave Justices of the Peace power of committing to houses of correction, does not mention felons, but parties charged with small offences; and accordingly, in the case of Ex parte Evans, where the question was, whether a person charged with treason could be committed to the house of correction, Lord Kenyon admits, that the practice of committing felons to the house of correction cannot be founded on the authority of that statute, which applies to inferior offences only; but he says, that the practice of committing to the house of correction, that has subsisted since 1715, ought not to be overthrown. Here we have the positive statement of the gaoler that the party is committed for want of sureties, and that all persons so committed are confined in the department where the prisoner has been placed. I think, therefore, that the keeper of the gaol is justified by the uniform practice, the house of correction being in fact a public gaol.

(1) 8 Term Rep. 172.

(2) 2 B. & Ald. 278.

PARKE, B.—I am of the same opinion. The only question is, whether this commitment is valid; I think it is, and that the defendant is in proper custody. The question does not turn on the Gaol Acts that have been cited, but is decided by the case of Ex parte Evans. Before the 6 Geo. 1. c. 19, doubts were entertained, whether the house of correction was a public prison, but that statute has made the house of correction the king's prison. The practice is to commit all felons to the house of correction. In Ex parte Evans it was held, that houses of correction were public gaols; and if so, then all persons committed for want of sureties may be confined there. That is the necessary consequence of that case. The commitment is therefore correct; and this rule must be discharged.

ALDERSON, B.—The principle is, that a party is to be committed to the king's gaol, and not to a private one. Here the commitment has been to the house of correction; and a question has been raised, whether that commitment is valid; it being alleged that the rules of that place of confinement may not be the same as those of public gaols. Here, however, it appears that the house of correction and the gaol are the same building; that the same person is the keeper of both, and that the regulations of both are also similar. So that if the question stood on the authority of the Gaol Acts only, the commitment would be legal. It is enough, however, to say, that this is a public gaol, under the controul of the king, and not of a private individual; and that there is nothing in the regulations of the house of correction that is inconsistent with the objects of the commitment.

GURNEY, B.—I am of the same opinion, and will add only one remark, that the party complaining of a commitment to the house of correction has the same remedy for any grievances he may sustain, as if he had been committed to the gaol, since both places of confinement are under the regulation of the same individuals.

Rule discharged.

Appeal, Notice of—Signature of, by Officers de facto—How far Respondents can object to.

A notice and statement of grounds of appeal purported to be signed by one churchwarden and two overseers; one of those, however, who signed as overseers, being the same person who had signed as churchwarden:—Held, that the respondents could not set up as an objection to the hearing of the appeal, the irregularity in the appointment of the officers of the appellant parish, that parish being bound by the notice.

This was an appeal against an order of two Justices for the removal of Wm. Pierce and Mary his wife, from the borough of Leominster, in the county of Hereford, to the parish of Addington, in the county of Bucks.

At the trial, the appellants being called upon to prove the notice of appeal and statement of grounds of appeal, it appeared that a notice and statement of grounds of appeal had been served upon the officers of the respondent parish, fourteen clear days at least before the Sessions.

This notice and statement was addressed "To the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the borough of Leominster, in the county of Hereford," and ran in the usual form, "We the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Addington, in the county of Buckingham, do hereby give you notice, that at the last General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, holden, &c., we did enter, or cause to be entered, an appeal against an order, under the hands and seals of F. W. and W. A., two of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said borough of Leominster, dated the 1st day of December now last past, for and concerning the removal of William Pierce, otherwise William Lovenge, and Mary his wife, from the said borough of Leominster to the said parish of Addington, and that the hearing of the said appeal was by order of the said Court of Quarter Sessions respited and adjourned until the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace in and for the said county; and we further give you notice, that at such next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be holden in and for the said county, we shall proceed to try the said appeal; and pursuant to the statute in that behalf, we do hereby state the grounds of our appeal as follows"—(here followed a statement of the grounds of appeal).

(Signed)

"John Clare, churchwarden,

"John Clare, } overseers of the

"Matthew Adams, } poor.

"Dated the 11th day of March 1843."

At the time of the said notice and statement of grounds of appeal being signed and given, the persons whose signatures were affixed thereto were the only existing parochial officers of the appellant parish, whether churchwardens or overseers; John Clare, who signed the above notice and statement of grounds of appeal as churchwarden, was the same person who also signed it as one of the overseers. Clare and Adams, by whom the said notice and statement of grounds of appeal is signed, were in fact appointed overseers of the appellant parish in the year 1842. Clare was one of the churchwardens of the appellant parish, and continued to be such churchwarden until after the giving of the said statement of grounds of appeal, until the trial of the said appeal. There had been another person appointed churchwarden as well as Clare, but that person had died in October 1842, before the time at which the said notice of appeal was given, and no successor to the deceased churchwarden was appointed. It was objected by the respondents, that, under the circumstances, the appellants could not be heard in support of the appeal, inasmuch as the said John Clare and Matthew Adam, by whom the said notice of appeal was signed, did not, at the time of signing the same, legally constitute either the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the appellant parish, and because, at the time of giving the said notice of appeal, there was no body of churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the appellant parish legally constituted in that behalf, and competent to give the said notice of appeal, or any other notice of appeal against the said order of removal; and also because a statement of the grounds of appeal in writing had not been sent or delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the respondent parish by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the appellant parish, inasmuch as the said John Clare and Matthew Adams, by whom the said statement was sent or delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the respondent parish, were not for that purpose the legally constituted churchwardens and overseers of the appellant parish, or a majority thereof, and because, at the time when the said statement was so sent or delivered as aforesaid, there was no body of churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the appellant parish, legally constituted in that behalf, and competent to send or deliver to the churchwardens and overseers of the respondent parish the said statement of grounds of appeal against the said order of removal. Upon the above objection, the Court of Quarter Sessions decided that the appellants were entitled to be heard in support of the said appeal, and proceeded to try the same, and quashed the said order of removal. The question for this Court was, whether, under the circumstances disclosed in this case, the appellants were entitled to be heard in support of their appeal. If the Court should be of opinion, that the appellants were not entitled to be heard in support of their appeal, the order of Sessions to be quashed, and the order of removal to be confirmed; but if this Court should be of opinion that the appellants were entitled to be heard in support of their said appeal, the order of removal to stand discharged, and the order of Sessions to be confirmed.

B. Andrews and Barrett, in support of the order of Sessions.—Unless the parties who signed the notice were the proper parish officers, there were none capable of signing it. But it will be contended, that there should be, at least, two distinct persons as overseers, in addition to the churchwardens. That objection would have been equally applicable before the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. In The King v. All Saints, Derby (1), it was held, that an indenture of apprenticeship, signed by two persons, styling themselves churchwardens and overseers, and who, in fact, were the only persons filling the offices of churchwardens and overseers, was not valid under the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2. s. 1, which requires the binding to be by the churchwardens and overseers. In consequence of that decision, the statute 51 Geo. 3. c. 80. was passed, to render such indentures valid (2). The statutes which relate to removals and appeals are worded in a different manner. The statute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. enables the Justices to remove upon complaint made by the churchwardens or overseers, and that statute, by section 2, gives a power of appeal to "all such persons who think themselves aggrieved." The statute which first connects the parish officers with appeals, is the 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. s. 8, which enacts, that no appeal from any order of removal shall be proceeded upon in any Court of Quarter Sessions, unless "reasonable notice be given by the "churchwardens or overseers" of the one parish, to the "churchwardens or overseers of the other." In this case the notice has been signed by all the existing parish officers, and is therefore good within the provision of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, s. 81.—The King v. the Justices of Derbyshire (3), The King v. the Justices of Warwickshire (4), The King v. the Justices of Suffolk (5), The Queen v. Churchknowle (6), The Queen v. the Justices of Cheshire (7).

By the general interpretation clause, section 109, of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, the word overseer includes churchwardens. A signature by a majority de facto of the parish officers was sufficient under the Certificate Act, 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 30. s. 1.—The King v. Wymondham (8). All intendment will be made in favour of the notice—The King v. Hinckley (9), The King v. Catesby (10), The King v. the Justices of Denbyshire (11).

Greaves and Venables, contra.—The words of the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2. s. 1. are express, that there must be, at least, two distinct persons, independent of the churchwardens, to constitute legal overseers. The appellant parish does not bring itself legally before the Court. The notice, no doubt, commences: "We, the churchwardens and overseers," and purports to be the notice of three distinct people; but it turns out, at the trial, that Clare was both churchwarden and overseer, and it did not appear which appointment he received first. If Clare's appointment to be overseer was a nullity, there would be but one overseer, which would be insufficient—The King v. Clifton (12). Besides, by the common law there should be two churchwardens—The King v. Hinckley, The King v. the Rector of Birmingham (13).

[PATRSON, J.—It hardly can be contended, that on the death of one of two churchwardens, the other ceases to be churchwarden. The question, however, is not whether these are bad officers, but whether, supposing them to be so, they yet may not give a good notice of appeal.]

According to The King v. Loxdale (14), and The King v. St. Margaret's, Leicester (15), the officers to do a valid act should be officers de jure. The cases of The King v. All Saints, Derby, was recognized in Woodcock v. Gibson (16). These persons could not have brought an action for parish property—Doe d. the Churchwardens, &c. of Llandisilio v. Roe (17). quasi action. Neither could these parties do any other act which churchwardens and overseers are empowered to do—Blackett v. Blizard (18), The Governors of the Poor of Bristol v. Wait (19). The necessity of a signature by the majority of the officers, was admitted in The King v. the Justices of the North Riding (20), and Doe d. Nicholson v. Middleton (21) shews, that they should all be in existence at the time. The Queen v. Colbeck (22) is decisive, that individual rate-payers cannot now appeal.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—At the trial of the appeal the respondents objected, as the case states, that the persons by whom the notice of appeal was signed, did not legally constitute either the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the appellant parish; and because there was no body of overseers competent to give the said notice. It appeared that Clare was one of the churchwardens, that another person had been appointed churchwarden, who died before the notice of appeal was given, and no successor had been appointed. Clare signed the notice twice, once as churchwarden, and once as overseer. We think the Sessions perfectly right in proceeding to try the appeal in spite of this novel objection, for which there could be no reasonable foundation, unless the appellant parish were free to repudiate the acts of their officers; but we are clearly of opinion, that they are bound by their acts, and must submit to any judgment against those whom they have represented as having power to act for them, unless the document were invalid on its face. The respondents, therefore, would have had all the benefit of a decision on the merits, if in their favour, and are not at liberty to enter into the legality of the several appointments in the adverse parish.

THE QUEEN v. LORD GODOLPHIN AND ANOTHER.

Poor-rate, Allowance of—Mandamus.

The allowance of a poor-rate by the Justices is purely a ministerial act; and if it be good on the face of it, they cannot inquire into its validity.

Where a poor-rate had been made by the two overseers of a parish alone, there being also two churchwardens who had not been sworn in, and the Magistrates had refused to allow it, as not being made by the majority of the parish officers, a mandamus to the Justices to allow the rate was granted.

A rule for a mandamus to Justices to allow a poor-rate is absolute in the first instance.

A poor-rate, regular in form, had been made by the two overseers of a parish, and signed by them. There were also two churchwardens, who had been appointed, the one by the minister, the other by the parishioners; but they had never been sworn in, and they declined to act. The last churchwardens, who had been sworn in, had been appointed, in 1837, and one of them had died in the interim. Upon this rate being laid before Lord Godolphin and another Magistrate for Cambridgeshire, they declined to allow it, on the ground that it ought to have been made by a majority of the parish officers.

Gunning moved for a mandamus to these Magistrates to allow the rate.—The act of the Justices, in allowing the rate, is purely ministerial, and they have no right to make any inquiry into its validity. Their signatures are mere matter of ornament; and so long as it appears to be good, as this does, on the face of it, they have no discretion—The Queen v. Lord Yarborough (1), The King v. the Justices of Dorchester (2). Their allowance is not a judicial act, and is required merely for the purpose of putting the matter into a train for inquiry. But even if they had a discretion, they were wrong: until the fresh churchwardens were sworn in, the former churchwardens would remain in office; and then, one of them having died, the overseers alone constituted a majority.

[WILLIAMS, J.—Suppose it had been made but by one overseer.]

They still would have been compelled to allow it; for the rate, on the face of it, would appear to be good; the other parish officers might be dead; and if a Magistrate were allowed to make any inquiry beyond what appears on the rate, his allowance would cease to be merely ministerial. The rule is stated by the Master to be absolute in the first instance.

Game—6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 65. s. 9.—Information—Sufficiency.

By section 9. of 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 65. relating to trespasses by entering upon land in pursuit of game, it is enacted, "that upon any information made or exhibited before a Justice of the Peace of any such offence as aforesaid, it shall not be necessary that the charge contained in such information should be made on the oath of the informer or prosecutor in such case; provided, that before any proceeding shall be had or taken upon such information, either for summoning the party accused, or compelling his appearance to answer the same, the charge contained in such information shall be deposed to on the oath of some other person or persons, being a credible witness or credible witnesses."

An information under this section was as follows: "Staffordshire, to wit.—Be it remembered, that, on, &c., at &c., Sir O. M., of &c., a credible witness, in his proper person, cometh before me, W. F. C., one of the Justices, &c., and giveth me, the said Justice, to understand and be informed, that R. R., of &c., did, on &c., at &c., unlawfully commit a certain trespass, by entering, in the day-time of the same day, upon a certain close of land, in the possession and occupation of J. W., there situate, in pursuit of game, contrary to the statute, &c.; whereby, and by force of the statute, R. R. has forfeited a sum of money not exceeding 2l., &c. And the said information having been also verified upon the oath of W. A., of &c., another credible witness, before me, the said Justice; whereupon the said Sir O. M. prays that the said R. R. may be forthwith summoned to appear before one of the said Justices, to answer the said information, and make his defence thereto. O. M., W. A.—Exhibited by Sir O. M., and sworn before me, the day and year first above written, W. F. C." There was no other document deposing to the charge contained in the information:—Held, that this information alone was not a sufficient compliance with the above section to give two Magistrates jurisdiction to entertain the charge.

This was an indictment for perjury, alleged to have been committed by the defendant, upon the hearing, before two Justices of Staffordshire, of an information, laid by Sir Oswald Moseley, against a person of the name of Robinson, for a trespass committed by him under the stat. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32. s. 40, in entering upon land in pursuit of game. One Atkinson was sworn, and gave evidence in support of the information, before the two Justices. The defendant appeared as a witness for Robinson upon that occasion, and the perjury was assigned upon evidence then given by him. Robinson was also present before the Justices.

Upon the trial of the indictment, before Williams, J., at the Summer Assizes for Staffordshire, 1843, the following information, upon which the proceeding before the Magistrates was grounded, was put in evidence on the part of the prosecution:—

"Staffordshire, to wit.—Be it remembered, that within three calendar months after the commission of the offence hereinafter named, to wit, on the 13th of January 1843, at Rolleston, in the said county, Sir Oswald Moseley, of Rolleston, in the said county, Baronet, a credible witness, in his proper person, cometh before me, William Fawcener Chetwynd, one of the Justices of our Lady the present Queen, assigned to keep the peace of our said Lady the Queen in and for the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanours done and committed within the said county, and now here giveth me, the said Justice, to understand and be informed, that Richard Robinson, of the parish of Tutbury, in the county of Stafford, did, on the 11th of January, in the year of our Lord 1843, at the parish of Rolleston, in the said county, unlawfully commit a certain trespass, by entering, in the daytime of the same day, upon a certain close of land, in the possession and occupation of Thomas Warren, there situate, in pursuit of game, contrary to the statute in such case made and provided; whereby and by force of the said statute the said Richard Robinson has forfeited a sum of money not exceeding 2*l.*, to be applied as the said statute directs; and the said information having been also verified upon the oath of William Atkinson, of Rolleston, gardener, another credible witness, before me, the said Justice, whereupon the said Sir Oswald Moseley prays that the said Richard Robinson may be forthwith summoned to appear before one of the said Justices, to answer the said information, and make his defence thereto.

"Oswald Moseley.

William Atkinson.

"Exhibited by Sir Oswald Moseley, and sworn before me, the day and year first above written. W. F. Chetwynd."

It was objected, on behalf of the defendant, that this information was not a sufficient compliance with the stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 65. s. 9, to give the Magistrates jurisdiction to entertain the charge, as it did not appear by the information, nor was there any separate deposition to shew, that before any proceeding was taken upon the information, the charge contained in it had been deposed to on the oath of some other person than the informer, as required by the statute. The learned Judge gave leave to the counsel for the defendant to move to enter a verdict upon this point (1). The defendant was found guilty. Upon his being brought up for judgment, in Michaelmas term last (Nov. 22), a rule was obtained by—

Talfourd, Serj., to enter a verdict for the defendant upon the leave reserved (2).

The Attorney General, (Sir F. Pollock,) Whateley, and Greaves now shewed cause.—The objection to the information is, that the charge contained in it is not "deposed to," as required by the 9th section. It is stated, in the body of it, to have been verified upon the oath of William Atkinson, and in the jurat the word "sworn" appears; and it contains the signatures both of the informer and Atkinson.

[COLERIDGE, J.—The jurat states it to have been exhibited upon oath by Sir Oswald Moseley, and "sworn." Can you rely on the word "sworn" as applicable to Atkinson?]

By section 9, the information need not be upon oath; and the word "sworn," therefore, can only apply to Atkinson and his verification of the charge; and as the word "sworn" is always so used where a charge is taken upon oath, it must mean that Atkinson was sworn to the truth of the matter contained in the information. The information (stated to have been verified by Atkinson) means the offence of which the Justice was informed—the charge actually made, and not the mere document. But neither to be named in such summons; and if such party shall not appear accordingly, then the Justice or Justices may proceed in the case, in the manner directed by the said act; and it is expedient to explain and amend the said enactment as hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore enacted and declared, that upon any information made or exhibited before a Justice of the Peace of any such offence as aforesaid, it shall not be necessary that the charge contained in such information should be made on the oath of the informer or prosecutor in such case; provided, that before any proceeding shall be had or taken upon such information, either for summoning the party accused, or compelling his appearance to answer the same, the charge contained in such information shall be deposed to, on the oath of some other person or persons, being a credible witness or credible witnesses."

(1) Section 9. "And whereas by an act passed in the first and second years of the reign of His present Majesty, intituled, 'An act to amend the Laws in England relative to Game,' it is enacted, that where any person shall be charged, on the oath of a credible witness, with any offence punishable upon summary conviction, by virtue of the said last-mentioned act, before a Justice of the Peace, the Justice may summon the party charged to appear before himself, or any one or two Justices of the Peace, as the case may require, at a time and place

(2) A rule was also obtained to arrest the judgment, on the ground that the indictment was defective; and also because the evidence upon which the perjury was assigned was immaterial. These points were argued at considerable length; but as the judgment proceeded solely upon the insufficiency of the information, the arguments upon those points are omitted.

the information nor the deposition to support it is required to be in writing—Paley on Convictions, p. 18; and it was proved by Atkinson that he was in fact sworn before the two Justices, and gave his evidence as to the truth of the charge. But section 9. of 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 65. is to be read in conjunction with section 41. (3) of the 1 & 2 Will. 4. c. 32; and from those sections it will appear, that an information is only necessary in two cases, namely, where the charge is determined in the absence of the party, or where a warrant issues for his apprehension. No information is necessary where a person voluntarily appears; or, at all events, any defects in it would be cured by appearance, from analogy to the cases of appearance after an imperfect or defective summons—The King v. Johnson (4), The Queen v. Barrett (5), The King v. the Mayor of Wilton (6), The King v. Aikin (7), The King v. Stone (8).

Talfourd, Serj., contra, (M. D. Hill and Gray with him).—The information is not a sufficient compliance with the statute.—First, it charges no offence upon the face of it; and it is no answer to say that it follows the language of the Act—Chaney v. Payne (9). It should have stated that Robinson was in pursuit of game there—In re Fletcher (10), The King v. Gainer (11), The Queen v. Davis (12). Secondly, the charge contained in the information must be “deposed to on the oath of some other person” than the informer. Here the information only is “verified upon oath.”

[PATTESON, J.—The section seems to contemplate a deposition as something separate and subsequent to the information: this professes to be both information and deposition together. It would be difficult to frame an indictment for perjury against Atkinson upon this document. There are no words of his.]

The whole of it is in the Magistrates’ language.—(He was then stopped.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The objection that the defendant was brought before the Magistrates by means of an information only, and that therefore they were not entitled to call upon him for an answer, must prevail. The jurisdiction was deficient under section 9. of the statute referred to, because it does not appear, that before any proceeding was had upon the information, there was any deposition taken at all; but the information only of Sir Oswald Moseley was exhibited and sworn. It would not be a reasonable construction to put upon the latter part of this information, to hold, that it appeared by it, that Atkinson had made a deposition upon oath, so as to bring the matter within the above section. We decide nothing as to any of the other points.

PATTESON, J.—I wish also to say, that we decide this solely and entirely upon the insufficiency of this information, with reference to the 9th section of the act. By that section, an information is necessary (but it need not be on the oath of the informer); and after the information is laid, and before any step is taken upon the information, by summons or otherwise, it is required, that the charge contained in the information should be deposed to, on the oath of some other person, being a credible witness. There is no such thing here, nor anything that would afford an opportunity to indict Atkinson for perjury, if the matters in the information were untrue. The information is the language of Sir Oswald Moseley in the first instance, and the Magistrates' in the second; but none of it is that of Atkinson.

(3) Section 41. “And be it enacted, that the prosecution for every offence punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the commission of the offence; and that where any person shall be charged, on the oath of a credible witness, with any such offence before a Justice of the Peace, the Justice may summon the party charged to appear before himself, or any one or two Justices of the Peace, as the case may require, at a time and place to be named in such summons; and if such party shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the due service of the summons, by delivering a copy thereof to the party, or by delivering such copy at the party’s usual place of abode to some inmate thereof, and explaining the purport thereof to such inmate) the Justice or Justices may either proceed to hear and determine the case in the absence of the party, or may issue his or their warrant for apprehending and bringing such party before him or them, as the case may be,” &c.

WILLIAMS, J.—It is necessary that the inquiry before the Magistrates should have been a judicial proceeding, in order to assign perjury upon the evidence there given. There must have been power to administer an oath. The proceeding could only be taken upon such an information as, from compliance with the previous requisites, the Magistrates might entertain. The act clearly requires, that after the information is laid, there should be the deposition upon oath of some other credible witness. Here there is nothing at all of that sort. The word "verified," in the information, is wholly insufficient, even if it is attributable to Atkinson.

COLERIDGE, J.—I quite agree that this is a question of jurisdiction, which is to be decided upon section 9.—[His Lordship read part of the preamble and the enactment.]—We are not to question the propriety of this provision, but to see whether it has been complied with. Before any summons issues, the charge must be deposited to on the oath of a credible witness. Here that had not been done.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. THE INHABIT-
Feb. 8. } ANTS OF PILKINGTON.

Examination, Sufficiency of—Hiring and Service—Evidence—Case.

A pauper, in his examination, stated, "When I was about fifteen years of age, I went to work at Messrs. C. & D's factory, called Ringley Mills, in O, in the township of P. It was about the latter end of the year 1828. There was a custom in the mill, requiring the work-people to give a fortnight's notice before leaving their employment. I remained in the employment more than two years, during the whole of which time I resided in O, in the said township of P, and slept there: I worked under the custom as to giving notice. The works consisted of two mills, adjoining each other. When I wanted to leave the first mill (in which I had been working for about a year) to go to the other mill, I was compelled to serve [sic] a fortnight's notice before leaving. The second mill was under a similar custom; and after I had worked in it better than a year, I had a dispute with the overlooker, and wanted to leave at once, but was not allowed. The overlooker afterwards gave me a fortnight's notice, at the end of which time I left the factory," &c.

The grounds of appeal were, first, that the examination does not shew any settlement in the township of P; secondly, that it does not contain any legal evidence of the settlement of the person removed; thirdly, that it is bad upon the face of it, and does not warrant any order of removal; fourthly, that it does not state sufficient facts to shew that the pauper gained a settlement by hiring and service in P; fifthly, that there was no such hiring and service at Messrs. C. & D's factory, or residence in the township of P, as in the examination is alleged; sixthly, that the pauper was not legally settled in the township of P.

It was objected at the Sessions, that the examination was insufficient, as no general or yearly hiring was stated, or could be implied from it; that it did not state that the party was hired at all, nor with whom he purported to make a contract, nor that he made any contract at all; and that there was no allegation in the examination that the paupers were settled in the appellant township:—Held, with reference to these objections, that the examination was sufficient.

The Court of Quarter Sessions ought not simply to state facts, and ask the opinion of this Court, as a jury, upon them; but, having drawn their own conclusions from the facts, they may ask whether, in the opinion of this Court, the facts will warrant their finding.

This was an appeal against an order of two Justices of the Peace for the borough of Preston, in the county of Lancaster, dated the 30th of September 1842, for the removal of Christopher Morley, his wife, and two children, from the township of Preston to the township of Pilkington, in the county of Lancaster, as the place of their last legal settlement. The order was confirmed, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench on the following—

CASE.

The order was grounded on the following examination: "The borough of Chester, in the county of Lancaster.—Examination of Christopher Morley, relating to the settlement of himself and family, taken upon oath before us, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said borough, this 30th of September 1842. When I was about fifteen years of age, I went to work at Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield's factory, called Ringley Mill, in Oatwood, in the township of Pilkington. It was about the latter end of the year 1828. There was a custom in the mill, requiring the work-people to give a fortnight's notice before leaving their employment. I remained in the employment more than two years, during the whole of which time I resided in Oatwood, in the said township of Pilkington, and slept there. I worked under the custom as to giving notice. The works consisted of two mills, adjoining each other. When I wanted to leave the first mill (in which I had been working for about a year) to go to the other mill, I was compelled to serve a fortnight's notice before leaving. The second mill was under a similar custom; and after I had worked in it better than a year, I had a dispute with the overlooker, and wanted to leave at once, but was not allowed. The overlooker afterwards gave me a fortnight's notice, at the end of which time I left the factory. I have not since done any act to gain a settlement in my own right. I was lawfully married, about six years ago, to Mary Dowling, single woman, my present wife, at Bolton Old Church, and we have two children, the lawful issue of that marriage, namely, Ann, aged three years, and Jane, aged one year. Having been in distress, and having applied to that township of Preston, in which I have been residing, for relief, I was placed in the workhouse at Walton-le-Dale, in the Preston union, in which place I am now dwelling, at the expense of the township of Preston. My wife and family are also now dwelling in the Walton-le-Dale workhouse, at the expense of the township of Preston. The mark of × Christopher Morley. Sworn before us, James Barstow, James Manning."

moval was made, does not shew any settlement in the township of Pilkington; that the examination does not contain any legal evidence of the settlement of the persons removed; that the examination is bad upon the face of it, and does not warrant any order of removal; that the examination does not state sufficient facts to shew that the said Christopher Morley gained a settlement by hiring and service in Pilkington; that there was no such hiring or service at Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield's factory, or residence in the township of Pilkington, as in the examination in this case is alleged; that the said Christopher Morley was not legally settled in the township of Pilkington.

The appeal came on to be heard at Preston, in February 1843, when the appellants objected to the sufficiency of the examination, inasmuch as no general or yearly hiring was stated in or could be implied from the examination, the examination merely stating, that the examinant went to work at Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield's factory, called Ringley Mill, without stating that he was hired at all, nor with whom he purported to make a contract or to engage, nor that he made any contract at all. The appellants also objected, that there was no allegation in the examination that the paupers were settled in the appellant township. The Sessions overruled these objections, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench. The following facts were proved on behalf of the respondents:—In the latter part of the year 1828, the pauper, Christopher Morley, went to work as a piecer at Crompton & Ditchfield's cotton mill, called Ringley Mill, at Oatwood, within Pilkington. He was to serve the persons working the mill as masters and spinners, who were Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield; but the practice at such mills is, that the piecers assist certain spinners, to whom respectively they are attached. The wages paid by the master spinner are in proportion to the work done. The spinner receives the whole wages for the work done by him with such assistance, and thereout pays the piecers, without the interference of the master spinner. The obligation of the parties to remain in the same service, varies in different mills. There were no printed rules in Crompton & Ditchfield's mill to regulate such obligation, but it was understood that all persons there employed were bound to give a fortnight's notice of their intention to leave the service. Subject to this understanding, the spinner engages and dismisses his own piecers, without the interference of the master spinner. Morley was thus engaged by one Eatock, a spinner, and served under him for a little more than a year, during all which time he was a bachelor, unmarried, and without child or children, and worked and slept in Pilkington. His wages were reckoned by the week, but paid every fortnight by the hands of Eatock, and he could leave the service by giving a fortnight's notice at the end of any week. At the end of the above period, Morley, wishing to work as a spinner in an adjoining mill, belonging to Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield, was required to give a fortnight's notice of his intention to leave. This adjoining mill was worked by one Meadowcroft, who took it of Messrs. Crompton, and had the sole management of it, spinning by commission for Crompton & Ditchfield, at so much a hundredweight of cotton yarn spun; but the mill was under the superintendence and controul of Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield. Morley immediately engaged himself with Meadowcroft, to work at the adjoining mill as a spinner, and to be paid according to the quantity of work done. Nothing was said as to how long he was to remain, but the same understanding prevailed as to notice. He served more than a year, receiving his wages every fortnight from Meadowcroft's manager. He then left, having received a fortnight's notice from Meadowcroft's manager. During this last service, he was a bachelor, unmarried, and without child or children, and worked and slept at Oatwood, within Pilkington. The respondents having closed their case, the appellants objected, that no settlement appeared to have been gained by Morley; that there was not in the case of either service a hiring for a year, or anything equivalent; that the first service was a service to Eatock, and therefore varied from the examination; that no settlement could be gained by the hiring or service as a piecer as above described; that the second hiring and service was with Meadowcroft, and therefore varied from the examination. No further evidence having been given by the appellants, the Sessions confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench upon the several objections taken as above mentioned. It was not disputed but that the settlement of Morley's children was the same as his.

This case was argued January 24th.

Cowling, in support of the order of Sessions.—First, the examination is sufficient, with reference to the objections taken to it. It is objected, that a good settlement by hiring and service does not appear upon the face of it; but it may be, that there never was an actual contract, so none could be stated to have been made by the pauper; but the facts are stated, and from those a hiring and contract for a year will necessarily be inferred—The King v. Lyth (1), The King v. the Holy Trinity in Wareham (2). Here the inability to leave under a fortnight's notice, is of itself sufficient to raise the inference of a hiring for a year—The King v. St. Andrew in Pershore (3). Secondly, the evidence shews a good hiring and service with Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield. The objection was, that Morley's contract was with Eatock, and that he was his servant. Morley was to serve the master spinner in the mill. It does not appear to whom the fortnight's notice would have to be given.

[PATTESON, J.—The evidence states, that, subject to the understanding as to the fortnight's notice, the spinner (that is, Eatock) engages and dismisses his own piecers (of whom Morley was one) without the interference of the master spinner.]

There is no doubt that Morley could have sued the master spinner for his wages in the first instance, if they had not been handed over to Eatock.

Wortley and J. Peel, contra.—The examination is insufficient upon the face of it. Full information must be given. Here the pauper himself, to whom the circumstances must have been known, was under examination. He states, that he "went to work" at the factory, and "remained in their employment better than two years." Such statements are consistent with no service at all. The Justices should have asked him whether he was hired, and whether he served. The impression of the pauper clearly is, that there was no hiring for a year, because he states, "I was compelled to serve a fort-night's notice before leaving." And again, with reference to the second mill, he states, "I wanted to leave at once, but was not allowed." The pauper does not say that he went to work for the master, nor for whom, or with whom he worked, nor that he was their servant. Nothing is to be left upon the examination as matter of inference, nor upon the grounds of appeal—The Queen v. North Bovey (4), The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (5), The Queen v. Old Stratford (6), The Queen v. Wymondham (7).

[PATTERSON, J.—Suppose a case where there is never any express contract at all, but the party goes and lives a year, and receives his wages: how can the pauper draw any inference as to there being a contract for a year? Others may draw the inference. The grounds of appeal too are extremely vague, and do not hit the points.]

Secondly, the evidence shews no such hiring and service for a year with Messrs. Crompton & Ditchfield as will confer a settlement—The King v. Sparsholt (8), The King v. Hanbury (9). If this is not sufficiently found, the case will be sent back again to the Sessions—The King v. Road (10).

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The question in this case was, whether the notice of appeal stated any valid objection to the examination. There was a minute criticism of some of the expressions in it; but we think that there is no valid objection to the examination. It may be very true, that when the settlement depends upon a single fact, known to the pauper, such as residing, or being at the time of the hiring unmarried, and without child or children, it is reasonable to expect that the examination should contain a specific statement of that very fact; but it is very different as to the legal consequence of those facts. A hiring may be a very difficult question of law. The Justices may possibly ask a pauper whether he was hired or not; and the answer may be, "I don't know what you call hired, but I will tell you what took place upon the occasion;" and then he may state facts, as upon the present occasion; and if those facts so stated amount to a hiring for a year, then the Justices may properly adjudicate that the settlement was gained, and remove the party. They must form their opinion upon the effect of such statement. In the second place, the Sessions found a settlement on the evidence of the hiring and service, subject to our opinion whether the objections were well founded or not. The first objection was, that it was doubtful whether this was a general hiring; but they thought the facts of the case furnished evidence of such a hiring: and, secondly, that it was doubtful whether the pauper was hired by the owner of the mill or by the person called the spinner, who immediately employs the pauper and others in his situation. The Sessions found the hiring and service by the owner, subject to our opinion. Now, the Court have either done right or wrong in sending that to us. They have done right, if they ask our opinion whether the facts stated will warrant the finding which they have made of the party being hired; but they have done wrong, if they refer to us the mere question of fact, and ask our opinion, as a jury, upon it. We are not to assume that they have done wrong. We therefore must conclude that they have put the question to us in this way—whether the facts which led them to the judgment which they have formed are such as were sufficient for the conclusions they have come to. We think those facts were sufficient. The case of The King v. Sparsholt was referred to, as shewing that we are to form our opinion, or to send the case back to the Sessions upon such a question; but in that case the order of removal was confirmed, and what was done by the Justices was right. We do not take upon ourselves to say that they have done anything wrong, where there is a sufficient foundation for their judgment. In this case the order will be confirmed.

Order confirmed (11).

BAIL COURT. }
 1844. } THE QUEEN v. REYNOLDS
 Jan. 22. } AND HODGSON.

Commitment—Conviction—Stat. 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1.—Certiorari.

A commitment, setting forth an order of Quarter Sessions, confirming a conviction under 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1, and directing the gaoler to detain the parties at the expiration of the period of imprisonment awarded for their offence, until they shall find sureties and enter into recognizances that they shall not offend again for the space of one year from the conviction, instead of that they shall not so offend again, is bad.

Where the certiorari is taken away from a defendant, but not from the prosecutor, the Court will assume that the warrant of commitment contains a true recital of the conviction, unless it is brought before the Court by the prosecutor, though the recital shews the conviction to be bad.

The defendants being imprisoned in the house of correction at Wakefield, a writ of habeas corpus had been obtained, under which they were now brought up, and to which the governor made a return, setting forth that they were detained under a warrant of commitment made at the last Quarter Sessions for the West Riding of Yorkshire, of the substance of which the following is a copy:—"Upon hearing the appeal of Henry Reynolds, of &c., and Edward Hodgson, of &c., under the hands and seals of A. Brown and W. W. Whitaker, Esqs., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said riding, bearing date the 2nd of December last, at Micklethwaite, in the said riding, whereby the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson were convicted, for that they, the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson, within six calendar months then last past, to wit, on the 30th of November, A.D. 1843, in the night of the same day, that was to say, between the first hour after sunset on the 29th day of the said month of November, and the beginning of the last hour before sunrise on the succeeding day, to wit, about the hour of two o'clock in the morning of the said 30th of November, in the year aforesaid, at the township of Wetherby, in the said riding, by night, as aforesaid, did unlawfully and wilfully enter into certain inclosed lands of one R. T. Willson, Esq., called Land Beck Wood, there situate, and were then and there unlawfully in the said land, each of them armed with a certain engine or instrument, called a gun, for the purpose of then and there taking and destroying game, contrary to the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and that they, the said Justices, did adjudge the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson, for their said first offence, to be imprisoned in the house of correction at Wakefield, in and for the said riding, and there kept to hard labour, for the period of three calendar months, and at the expiration of such period to find sureties by recognizance, each of them in the sum of 10*l.*, and two sureties in the sum of 5*l.* each, or one surety in the sum of 10*l.*, conditioned that each of them, the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson, should not offend again for the space of one year then next following. And the said Justices did further adjudge, that each of them, the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson, in case they should not find such sureties as aforesaid, should be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the said house of correction for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties should be sooner found: it is ordered, adjudged, and determined, that the said conviction be affirmed, and that the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson shall, for their first offence, be imprisoned in the house of correction at Wakefield, in and for the said riding, and there kept to hard labour for the period of three calendar months, and at the expiration of such period shall find sureties by recognizance, each of them in the sum of 10*l.*, and two sureties in the sum of 5*l.* each, or one surety in the sum of 10*l.*, conditioned, that each of them, the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson, shall not offend again for the space of one year then next following. And it is further ordered, adjudged, and determined, that each of them, the said H. Reynolds and E. Hodgson, in case they shall not find sureties as aforesaid, shall be further imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the said house of correction for the space of six calendar months, unless such sureties shall be sooner found."

Pashley moved for their discharge, on the following among other objections to the commitment. The commitment directs the defendants to be imprisoned for three months; and that they shall, at the expiration of that period find sureties "that they shall not offend again." The statute 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1. only authorizes the Magistrates to require sureties that they shall not "so offend again;" as the recognizances required would be forfeited by any breach of the peace, this objection is fatal. The recognizances are also to be conditioned "that each of them shall not offend again." The defendants would thus become mutual sureties, and the sureties found by the one would become sureties for the conduct of the other. As it might be easy for a man to find sureties for his own conduct, who would not become sureties for that of his fellow prisoner, it is obvious that a longer term of imprisonment might thus be imposed. At all events, whether detrimental or not, the terms required by the statute are not pursued. The conviction, as recited, contains these defects, and, therefore, that is bad; and even if the commitment were good, that foundation for it fails.

Hall and Pickering, in support of the return.—The same strictness is not required in a commitment as in a conviction; and so long as it shews that a conviction has taken place before a competent authority, it will be supported. In Paley on Convictions, 234, 236, 3rd edit., the distinction between commitments in execution and commitments which, per se, operate as convictions, is pointed out; and it is there stated, that much greater latitude is allowed in the former than in the latter. The 78th section also provides, that no conviction or adjudication made on appeal shall be quashed for want of form; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same. Then, this commitment shews that it is founded on a conviction; and from The King v. Elwell (1) it appears, that it is incumbent on those who seek to impugn the conviction to bring it before the Court. In The King v. Taylor (2), too, it was held, that in the absence of the conviction, the Court will assume it to be good, though it would appear, from the recital in the commitment, to be bad. The proper mode by which the defendants ought to have raised the objection, if it existed in the conviction, was by bringing up a verified copy, as was done in The King v. Mellor (3). The stat. 3 Geo. 4. c. 23. s. 3. also enacts, that where the conviction shews that the defendant has appeared and pleaded, and the merits have been tried, and if an appeal is allowed, it has been affirmed upon appeal, such conviction shall not be afterwards vacated, in consequence of any defect of form, but the construction shall be such a fair and liberal one as shall be agreeable to the justice of the case. Every intendment is, therefore, to be made in favour of this conviction.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—No doubt there may be defects in a commitment which may not be fatal, but which would be so if they occurred in a conviction, but the difficulty is this: here it is from the warrant that the gaoler has authority to detain the prisoners, and it is necessary to see the precise terms on which he is to hold them: looking to the commitment, I find, that he is to do so until they find sureties not to offend again, generally; now suppose they should be prepared with recognizances not to offend again in the particular manner pointed out by this clause, but should not be prepared with recognizances in the terms of the warrant. It strikes me this is a defect of substance.]

The latter part of the conviction, which directs what is to be done in case the prisoners fail to find sureties, may be rejected. The Magistrates are merely required by the statute to fix the punishment for the offence, and what is to be done at the expiration of the period of the imprisonment is to be done by the gaoler.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—That does not agree with the averment, that the Justices do adjudge them to be further imprisoned until they find sureties.]

That is surplusage, for their duty did not require them to give any direction beyond the imprisonment for the three months.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—The only difficulty I feel, arises from the 78th section, which expressly declares, that no commitment shall be void by reason of any defect therein, if it be alleged that the party has been convicted,

(1) 2 Stra. 794.

(2) 7 Dow. & Ryl. 622.

(3) 2 Dowl. P.C. 174.

and there be a good and valid conviction to support it.]

Pashley.—If there were such a conviction, it was the duty of the prosecutor from whom the certiorari is not taken away, to have produced it—The Queen v. Chaney (4). Unless that be done, the Court will conclude that the recital of it contained in the commitment is accurate. The decision in The Queen v. Chaney was recognized and acted upon in The Queen v. Fletcher (5), and The Queen v. King (6).

[WIGHTMAN, J.—In The Queen v. Fletcher my Brother Patteson observes, that the gaoler ought to be able to ascertain from the commitment itself, for what period he is to detain the party, and that a defect in this respect is a defect in the warrant, and such as no conviction, however good, could cure. The same difficulty occurs here as to the time the gaoler is to keep the defendant; there it was uncertain by reason of the blank for the date, how long the imprisonment was to last, and here the parties are ordered to be detained till they find sureties not to offend again.]

Pickering.—The proper construction to be put upon those words is, that they shall not offend again in the same manner, or not to repeat the offence of which they have been convicted. That is the obvious meaning of the language used.

WIGHTMAN, J.—It appears to me, that the recognizances should have been, that the parties should not offend again in a particular manner, and not generally; the defect therefore appearing on this commitment is one of substance, and not simply of form. Then the statute which has been cited merely applies to formal defects, and does not remedy such defects as this. It may indeed, be argued, that the expression “not to offend again,” may mean not to offend again under this act; but even if that were the true construction, it would be met by another difficulty, namely, that several offences are created by the act, and the recognizances ought to be confined to this particular offence. Therefore the conviction being in this form, it is bad; and, I think, that primâ facie, I must assume that the commitment correctly recites the conviction. It is for those who assert it to be in a different form to bring it before the Court. Independently, however, of the conviction, I think the commitment is bad in itself. The statute directs the condition of the recognizances to be, that the defendant shall not offend again in the same manner, and not that they shall not offend generally, and the gaoler is directed under the warrant to require recognizances for something more than he would be authorized by the act to demand. That might subject them to a longer term of imprisonment than the act warrants. The prisoners must therefore be discharged.

Felony, Committals for — Depositions, Copies of—Justice of the Peace.

Under section 3. of stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 114, persons committed to prison for re-examination, on charges of felony, are not entitled to demand copies of the depositions.

The right to copies does not attach, until the prisoner is held to bail, or committed to prison for trial.

It is the duty of the Magistrate to complete and sign the depositions as soon as they are taken.

This was a rule (Jan. 22), calling upon the Right Honourable William Magnay, the Lord Mayor of the city of London, and one of the keepers of the peace and Justices of the city, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to him, commanding him to deliver to Joshua Fletcher, or to his attorney, copies of the examinations of the witnesses respectively, upon whose depositions Fletcher had been from time to time and then stood committed to prison to the custody of the keeper of the Giltspur Street Prison.

From the affidavits upon which the rule was obtained, it appeared that Fletcher, having appeared as a witness for a person charged with forgery before the Lord Mayor, upon the 9th of December was himself charged as a party to the same offence, and committed to prison, to be again brought up for further examination; that on the 16th of December he was again brought before the Lord Mayor, when further examinations were taken against him, and he was again committed, and ordered to be further brought up on the 28th of December; that he was brought up again on the 28th, and committed again till the 9th of January; and that on the 9th he was brought up, and again committed till the 22nd for further examination. The affidavits then stated the depositions to be in the lawful custody of the Lord Mayor or his officers. The warrant of commitment was in these words: "To all and every the constables of the police force of the city of London, and the liberties thereof, and to the keeper of the Giltspur Street Prison. London, to wit.—These are in Her Majesty's name to command you, and every of you, forthwith safely to convey and deliver into the custody of the said keeper, the bodies of W. H. B. and Joshua Fletcher, they being charged before me, one of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the said city and liberties, by the oath of A. S. and others, with feloniously forging and uttering a certain testamentary writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of the said A. S., with intent to defraud our Lady the Queen, against the statute and peace, whom you the said keeper are hereby required to receive, and them in your custody safely keep, until Monday the 22nd instant, and then to be brought before me, or such other of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, as shall be then sitting at the Justice Room, Mansion House, in the said city, for further examination: and for your so doing this shall be to you and each of you a sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal this 9th day of January 1844. W. Magnay, Mayor." The affidavits also shewed a demand of the depositions. It was admitted, that at the time of moving the rule Fletcher was remanded for re-examination, and not committed for trial. The affidavits, in answer, stated, that the depositions were not completed, and had not been read over to, and signed by the witnesses, or signed by the Lord Mayor.

The Attorney General (Sir F. Pollock) and Richards shewed cause.—This question turns upon the construction to be put upon the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 114, which enables persons indicted of felony to make their defence by counsel or attorney; and it will be contended, that prisoners who are committed from time to time, or remanded for further examination under charge of a felony, are entitled to copies of the depositions, as soon as they are taken against them in the course of the inquiry, and before the inquiry has terminated. Section 3. (1) contains the provisions applicable to this matter, but neither the words of that section, nor the general principle or object of the act, contemplate the granting a copy of the depositions pending the inquiry, and before commitment for trial. Those only who are held to bail, or committed to prison "for any offence," are entitled to copies of the depositions. Here, there has been no commitment for any offence, but only a commitment for further examination, upon the charge of an offence. The result of the inquiry may be, that the prisoner will be discharged, and not committed to prison, or held to bail for any offence. The title of the act is, to enable persons indicted of felony to make their defence by counsel or attorney, and clearly has reference to the time of trial. The first section also relates to all persons "tried for felonies." This statute is to be read in connexion with 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 2, and it is submitted, that persons are not entitled to demand copies of the depositions until they are completed, and the examination is concluded by the prisoner being held to bail, or committed to trial for an offence.

(1) Sect. 3. "And be it further enacted, that all persons, who after the passing of this act shall be held to bail, or committed to prison for any offence against the law, shall be entitled to require and have on demand, (from the person who shall have the lawful custody thereof, and who is hereby required to deliver the same,) copies of the examinations of the witnesses respectively, upon whose depositions they have been so held to bail, or committed to prison, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding three halfpence for each folio of ninety words: Provided always, that if such demand shall not be made before the day appointed for the commencement of the assize or sessions at which the trial of the person on whose behalf such demand shall be made is to take place, such person shall not be entitled to have any copy of such examination of witnesses, unless the Judge or other person to preside at such trial shall be of opinion that such copy may be made and delivered without delay or inconvenience to such trial; but it shall nevertheless be competent for such Judge, or other person so to preside at such trial, if he shall think fit, to postpone such trial, on account of such copy of the examination of witnesses not having been previously had by the party charged."

Kelly and Ballantine, contra.—If the language of the statute is doubtful in this respect, the largest construction will be put upon it in favour of prisoners. The preamble of the act is not limited to a full answer and defence at the time of trial. The word "trial" does not occur there (2). It recites that every person "accused" of offences against the law, should be enabled to make their full answer and defence to "all that is alleged against him." That is equally applicable to an examination before the committing Magistrate, as after a bill has been found by a grand jury. Neither the statute 7 Geo. 4, nor this act, makes any distinction between a committal by way of remand, and an ultimate committal. There can be no committal, in fact, whether for further examination, or for trial, except upon suspicion; and in either case the committal is equally upon charge only of an offence, as the guilt is not proved or disproved before the Magistrate. What then is the meaning of the words "committed to prison" in section 3? A person committed to prison for a week, when he is to be again brought up for further examination, is not less "committed," than where the commitment is until the next sessions or assizes. Upon the words of this section, there would be equal room for contending, that copies of the depositions could only be given on commitments for re-examination, and not upon commitments for trial. The word "commit" is properly used upon a commitment for re-examination only—Davis v. Capper (3), 2 Hale's P.C. cap. 14. p. 120. It is no answer to state that the depositions have not been signed, as it is the duty of a Magistrate to complete, and put his signature to them, as they are taken. As therefore there is no ground for restricting the words "committed to prison" to a committal for trial only, copies of the depositions will be ordered to be given.

(2) Sect. 1. "Whereas it is just and reasonable that persons accused of offences against the law, should be enabled to make their full answer and defence to all that is alleged against them: be it therefore enacted, &c., that from and after the 1st day of October next, all persons tried for felonies shall be admitted, after the close of the case for the prosecution, to make full answer and defence thereto, by counsel learned in the law, or by attorney in courts where attorneys practise as counsel," &c.

(3) 10 B. & C. 32; s. c. 8 Law J. Rep. M.C. 67.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This rule must be discharged. The preamble of the act relates to making a full answer and defence upon the trial, to which the enactment of sect. 1. also refers; and it was not intended that the committing Magistrate should try the case, and see how far the guilt of the party was established or disproved. It would have been mischievous if the act had conferred such a power. The words which at first raised some doubt in my mind, are those in section 3, relating to the person having the custody of the depositions. I had some doubt, whether the words "on demand," coupled with a commitment, did not bring the case within the act. Here a demand has been made, and there has been a commitment, but not "for any offence." The distinction is well understood between a committal for an offence upon a conviction that the party ought to be put upon his trial and a committal by way of remand, until more information is brought before the Magistrate, so that he may determine whether he should commit for trial, or discharge the prisoner. It is necessary, for the due execution of criminal justice, that the Magistrate should have the power to refuse a copy of the depositions, where there is not enough before him to enable him to commit for trial, though there is sufficient to justify a detainer for further inquiry.

PATTESON, J.—I am of the same opinion. It appears to me, that the argument from the preamble is directly against those who support this application. It is true that it does not contain the word "trial," but, looking at the whole language, it is plain that the full answer and defence by counsel, applies to the trial. My judgment, however, is founded upon this, that the party is not committed "for the offence" until the Magistrate determines to send the case to trial: before that time he is only committed for re-examination and inquiry, which was the case here.

COLERIDGE, J.—The point is an important one, as if cases in this stage are within the act, the Magistrate will have no discretion in granting the depositions, but will be bound to do so, whatever the state of the case or situation of the parties charged may be, and although some are in custody, and some are not. The third section would rather appear to have been an after-thought. The preamble of the first section is more applicable to the first two sections. The words "full answer and defence" occur both in the preamble and the enacting part; and it is most probable that they are used technically with reference to the trial. [His Lordship read the preamble and enactment.] But the question really turns upon section 3, and is, whether the party making the application is now "committed to prison for any offence." I am of opinion that he is not. A person committed for any offence may have a copy of the depositions "on demand." The words "such demand" occur afterwards, and refer to the preceding demand. What therefore is provided as to "such demand," applies also to the demand previously spoken of. [His Lordship read this part of the section.] There is no doubt that the words "such demand" relate to the trial. If the other construction is to prevail, it is immaterial whether the party is ultimately committed for trial, held to bail, or discharged. It could not have been intended, that a copy of the depositions should be given, where a prisoner may ultimately be discharged.

WIGHTMAN, J.—When the rule was moved before me, I considered the matter important, but entertained the same opinion as I do now, which is, that section 3. is not applicable where a party is committed for re-examination. [His Lordship referred to the preamble.] The third section goes beyond the preamble, and is not in terms confined to cases where there has been a committal for trial; but taking the whole of the provisions together, I am of opinion with the rest of the Court, that they do not apply to cases where the committal is for re-examination. That is not properly a committal for any offence, but a committal only upon the charge of an offence.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I wish to add, that we do not at all proceed upon the want of signature to the depositions by the Magistrate. It is the Magistrate's duty when the deposition has been made and signed by the witness, to put his signature to it, and to do so as each deposition is made.

THE QUEEN v. SCOTT.

Loan Societies—Friendly Societies—Statute 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40—3 & 4 Vict. c. 110.

A society established for the purpose of lending the money raised by the contributions of its members to the members themselves, is not a friendly society within the statutes 10 Geo. 4. c. 56. and 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40.

A rule had been obtained in this case, calling on R. Shortbridge and J. W. Roxby, two of the Justices of the Peace for the county of Durham, to shew cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding them to hear and determine the complaint of the South Shields Friendly Loan Society against John Scott, pursuant to the statutes 10 Geo. 4. c. 56. and 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40. The affidavits, on which it had been obtained, stated, that "the Investment Friendly Loan Society," held at South Shields, had been established in 1841, and its rules and regulations had been in that year certified by John Tidd Pratt, and allowed and confirmed at the Quarter Sessions, pursuant to those acts; that those rules, among other things, provided, that members should be ballotted for, and admitted at any time, upon paying subscriptions from the commencement, and the accumulated profits realized on each share; that the affairs should be conducted by a president, two trustees, a clerk, and two stewards; that each member should, every month, pay the sum of 10s. for each share, and 5s. for each half share, under a penalty; that the members should be entitled to 7l. 10s. on each half-share, and 15l. on each whole share, and that the privilege of receiving the same should be by drawing lots, or any other manner the committee might appoint; and that, if a share was not taken, it should be ballotted for, and the member to whom it should fall should be compelled to take it; that none but members should be entitled to shares, and no member should be indebted for more than 15l.; that members drawing their money should produce bondsmen, who should be members, for the payment of the subscriptions, interest, fines, and forfeitures accruing upon the same; that the shares should be transferable; and at the first meeting after the inrolment of the rules, five arbitrators should be named and elected, to three of whom, chosen by lot out of the whole, all differences should be referred, pursuant to 9 Geo. 4. c. 56. s. 27. The affidavits then stated, that three persons were duly elected arbitrators at the first meeting, and J. L. Robertson and G. Gibson appointed trustees; that John Scott, being a member, afterwards obtained a share, value 15*l.*, and gave the following note as security:

"South Shields, Nov. 30, 1841.

"On demand, we jointly and severally promise to pay J. Robertson and G. Gibson, trustees for the time being of the Investment Friendly Loan Society, the sum of 15*l.*, value received. (Signed,) J. Scott, J. Greaves, W. Davies."

On the 19th of April 1843, J. Scott being in arrear for his contributions to the amount of 4*l.* 14*s.*, refused payment, whereupon a notice of the intention of the arbitrators to determine the dispute between him and the society was duly served, and they, on the 16th of May 1843, awarded him to pay those arrears. Notice of this award was given to him, the amount demanded, and payment refused, whereupon he was summoned before the two Magistrates, who, having heard the facts, refused to adjudicate upon them. From the affidavits, in answer, it appeared that the mode of conducting the business of the society was as follows: that whenever there were any surplus funds, a share, nominally 15*l.*, was put up for sale to the highest bidder, by giving three slips of paper to each member present, and on one of them the member wrote the amount of premium he was willing to give for the preference of having the loan, and handed it to the president, who then announced the highest sum bid, without mentioning the name of the bidder, and this course was gone through a second and third time, after which the name of the highest bidder was announced, and he became entitled to the loan. By these means large premiums were procured for the loan, sometimes 6*l.* or 7*l.*, in the case of Scott, a premium of 6*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* The amount of the difference only between the 15*l.* and the premium was paid to the purchaser of the share, and he, with two sureties, gave a promissory note to the trustees for 15*l.* and interest on that sum, although he had in fact, if the premium were, say 6*l.*, only received 9*l.* It further appeared, that Scott had, by his subscriptions and otherwise, paid the whole amount he had actually received, with the exception of 4*s.* 6*d.*, and that many of the members speculated on the society as the means of realizing a large amount of profit, by forcing large bonuses from the members who were in great need of money, and then transferring their shares at a proportionate premium.

Knowles and Atherton, on behalf of Scott, and—

Sir J. Bayley, on behalf of the Magistrates, shewed cause.—This society cannot avail itself of the provisions of the statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 110, inasmuch as the note is not given to the treasurer, as required by section 16; and section 24. also contains an express provision, that the society shall forfeit its protection if the loans are made dependent upon any chance, lot, or other gambling device. Independently of all other objections, these are fatal obstacles to any attempt to enforce payment under that act; and the only remaining question is, whether this can be deemed a friendly society within 10 Geo. 4. c. 56, and 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40. Now, the 10 Geo. 4. c. 56. is confined to societies for the mutual relief and maintenance of all and every the members thereof, their wives or children, or other relations, in sickness, infancy, advanced age, widowhood, or any other natural state or contingency, whereof the occurrence is susceptible of calculation by way of average. It is obvious, that the want of pecuniary means arising from any cause whatever, is not such a state or contingency whereof the occurrence is capable of calculation, and this society cannot be deemed to be included in that act, even were the objects confined to such a state of necessity alone. The later statute, however, uses a larger language, and in section 2, after reciting that it is expedient to extend the object or purpose for which societies regulated by it may be established, enables persons to form themselves into a society for the relief and maintenance of all and every the members thereof, their wives, children, relations, or nominees, in sickness, infancy, advanced age, widowhood, or any other natural state or contingency, whereof the occurrence is susceptible of calculation by way of average, or for any other purpose which is not illegal." These latter words, if they stood alone, would certainly comprise the society in question, but following as it does an enumeration of particular societies, it must, according to the well established rule be restricted to societies ejusdem generis. Now this society bears no resemblance to them, for it does not include contingencies which are in any way susceptible of calculation by way of average; neither does it provide relief against sickness, infancy, advanced age, or widowhood, or any calamity or misfortune resembling them. The loan may be to the most robust, for it depends entirely upon the highest bidding; neither is it confined to a state of necessity or want, for the most wealthy may bid, and if there be no bidder then the most prosperous man may be compelled to take the loan. If this society falls within any act, it comes within the Loan Societies Acts, for its very title, "The Investment Friendly Society," shews what its objects are; and it can hardly be contended that the legislature contemplated loan societies as coming under the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40; for had they been included, the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 23, passed in the immediately succeeding session, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 110, expressly regulating such societies, would have been unnecessary. Those two latter statutes treat them as perfectly distinct. If such an association as this were deemed to be included in the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40, every mutual insurance society would come under it. There are, however, fatal objections distinct from this: in the first place, the rules have not been strictly complied with, and the full number of arbitrators has never been chosen, and the adjudication of the only three appointed is void. At all events, the question cannot be deemed so free from doubt as to warrant the Court in compelling the Magistrates, by mandamus, to act, and the Court also will not issue the writ, where it is clear the inquiry could have no result—The Queen v. the Trustees of Northwich Savings Bank (1).

Temple, in support of the rule.—It may be admitted, that the society cannot insist upon the provisions of the statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 110. This, however, is a society for other purposes, not illegal within 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40. There is a vast number of similar societies in the north, and they have always been considered as coming within the purview of that act. It is not a loan society, for a loan society in its legal sense must deal with persons who are not members, though it may advance money to its members also; the operations of this society are confined to the members alone. In Silver v. Barnes (2) it was held, that advancing money precisely in the same manner as this, to a member of a like society, was not a loan, and, consequently, that the taking of more than 5l. per cent. was not usurious. It was considered to be an advance out of the partnership funds, and not to be a loan. The purpose for which this society is established, is of a similar character to those mentioned in the previous recapitulation in 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40; it is for the mutual support and advancement of the members in business. The facts stated in the affidavits in reply may form an answer, but these ought to be shewn before the Magistrates, when the applicants would have the means of disputing them.

WIGHTMAN, J.—It appears to me that this is not a society within the meaning of the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40. s. 2, as the words "other purpose which is not illegal," I think must be deemed to have reference to the particular purposes which are before specified, and such as may in some sort form the subject of calculation. If it were not so, it would involve this difficulty, that there would be no limit, and that those terms would include insurance and numerous other societies. There are two other circumstances also which influence my judgment, and induce me to think that this is not a society within that statute. There are distinct acts which regulate loan societies, and the 2nd section of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 23. actually recognizes them as differing from friendly societies, and those acts would certainly include the society in question. It is indeed true, that it does not grant loans to persons who are not members, but it is merely one of its rules which prevents it from doing so, and a fresh rule may at once grant this power. The object of almost every loan society is to afford assistance to its members principally; its benefit is generally most felt by them, and it is quite optional whether they will restrict its operation to that class of persons alone. It seems to me that this society does not come within the act, and therefore that this rule must be discharged.

Master and Servant—Statute 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 3.—Designer.

A designer who invents and draws patterns, to be afterwards engraved on rollers, to be used in calico-printing, is liable under 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 3, for misconduct in the execution of his contract of service.

The defendant had been committed to the house of correction, at Preston, under the warrant of two Magistrates, dated 21st of December 1843, which stated him to have been charged upon the oath of Robert Hargreaves, of &c., calico-printer, for that he, the said Eli Ormerod, did, on the 15th of September 1842, at New Accrington aforesaid, contract with the said R. Hargreaves, John Hargreaves the younger, J. Hargreaves, and J. Hargreaves the elder, his partners, to serve them as a designer for the term of five years, from the 2nd day of September 1842, and that the said Eli Ormerod having entered upon such service accordingly, afterwards, and whilst he was in such service, to wit, on the 19th of December inst., at New Accrington aforesaid, and on other days and times, was, in the execution of the said contract, and otherwise respecting the same, guilty of divers miscarriages, misdemeanours, misconduct, and ill-behaviour, and particularly was then and there guilty of certain misconduct, by then and there unlawfully copying and embezzling certain patterns used in calico-printing, and burning or otherwise destroying certain other patterns of the description aforesaid, the property of his said masters. The warrant then proceeded to adjudge the complaint to be true, and to sentence the defendant to imprisonment.

Wigham moved for a habeas corpus, upon an affidavit, which stated that a designer was not a servant within the purview of the statute 4 Geo. 4. c. 34, and that his business was that of an artist, and that he was required by his employers to form designs and plans and ideas for the producing of patterns to be afterwards engraved upon copper rollers, and that he did not at any time do anything connected with calico-printing. The affidavit also negatived his being a servant of the classes mentioned in the statute, or his being a person of the like description. A pattern designer is a mere artist, and does not fall within the meaning of either of the statutes, 20 Geo. 2. c. 19. or 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 3. The only terms contained in either of them, within which it could even be contended that he was included, are "artificer or other person," but he is no more an artificer than the architect who draws the plan of a house. He is not engaged in the manual occupation of any trade, but simply invents patterns, and commits them to paper.

The words "other person" follow after the words "servant in husbandry, or any artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, and labourer," in s. 3. of 4 Geo. 4. c. 34; and they must, therefore, be confined to persons pursuing similar occupations to those enumerated; but the employment of a pattern designer is very different from them; and if those words would not include it, clearly the terms "other labourers," in the earlier statute, would not. If some restriction were not put upon those terms by the prior enumeration, every person employed in the capacity of a servant would be included; but it has been held, that menial servants, and also that a person employed to keep possession of goods seized under a fi. fa.—Bramwell v. Penneck (2)—are not within its provisions. The pattern designer is of a higher grade; he is really an artist, receiving in many instances a very large salary, and not at all of the humble character of the persons enumerated. The warrant of commitment is also defective, inasmuch as it does not shew that the defendant is within the purview of the statute; it merely describes him as a designer; it does not say of what; it ought to have shewn that his duties were of a nature to bring him within the language of the act, as an "other person," or it should have followed the words, and called him an artificer. The warrant must shew that the defendant was a person over whom the Magistrates had jurisdiction—Ex parte Johnson (3).

WILLIAMS, J.—I entertain the same impression in this case as I originally did, for I cannot conceive that the term “artificer,” used in the statute, is confined to those instances only in which great manual labour is required. If it were so, then only those persons would be liable under it who are engaged in the most laborious processes. The person in question plays a very important part in the particular branch of the manufacture of cotton, in which he is engaged; he sets the whole proceedings in motion, and certainly falls within the purview of the act. Then, although there are none of the words mentioned in the act itself contained in the warrant, yet it sets out the nature of the employment sufficiently to bring him within it. I am quite aware that where an act of parliament contains a general description following a prior particular designation, the former is to a certain extent controlled by the latter, and must be considered to mean persons of a similar class; but even then I am not prepared to say, that the occupation of the party here was so different from the employment of the persons specified, as not to bring him within the words “or other person,” mentioned in the act.

Examination—Chargeability, Evidence of.

The pauper in her examination before the Magistrate, stated, “I and my children are inhabitants of the parish of A, and are chargeable to the said parish of A.” The relieving officer stated, “I am one of the relieving officers of the Barnstaple Union, and administer the relief ordered for the paupers of the said parish of A. The said A. F. (the pauper) and her four children (naming them) are now chargeable to the said parish of A”:—Held, not sufficient evidence of chargeability.

Upon appeal against an order of two Magistrates of the county of Devon, dated August 5, 1843, for the removal of Ann Ford and her four children from Atherington to High Bickington; the Sessions confirmed the order, subject to a case, of which the following are the material parts:—

The pauper, Ann Ford, in her examination before the removing Magistrates, stated, “I and my said children are inhabitants of the said parish of Atherington, and are chargeable to the said parish of Atherington.” John Penson, relieving officer, said, “I am one of the relieving officers of the Barnstaple Union, and administer the relief ordered for the paupers of the said parish of Atherington. The said Ann Ford, and her said four children, namely, Thomas, Mary Ann, Tryphena, and John, are now chargeable to the said parish of Atherington.” Both these examinations bore the same date with the order. The grounds of appeal were, first, that the order of removal, the examinations on which it was made, and the notice of chargeability sent to us thereupon, are respectively bad on the faces thereof. Secondly, that the said examinations contain no legal evidence that the said Ann Ford and her said four children, or any of them, were chargeable to the said parish of Atherington at the time of the applications for making the said order of removal. The Court of Quarter Sessions considered that there was sufficient evidence of chargeability, and confirmed the order.

The question for this Court was, whether there was sufficient evidence of the chargeability of the paupers to Atherington, at the time of their removal, before the removing Magistrates; the order of Sessions to be quashed or confirmed accordingly (1).

Rowe and Bevan, in support of the order of Sessions.—By statute 35 Geo. 3. c. 101. s. 1, persons actually chargeable are removeable, and it is not sufficient that they are likely to be chargeable. The examination of the pauper and the overseer both disclose sufficient chargeability. In each of them it is distinctly stated, that the pauper and her children are chargeable; the statement has reference to that time when the parties were before the Magistrates, and the case states that the order was made upon the same day upon which the examinations were taken. They were then a bur-

(1) Another question for the consideration of this Court was, whether the examinations were insufficient, as there was nothing in the heading of them, or any of them, to shew that the Justices before whom they were taken, were Justices for the county of Devon. No judgment was given upon that point.

then to the applying parish, and therefore removeable. The Court will not weigh the amount of legal evidence. The examination is sufficient, if it discloses any—The Queen v. Ecclesall Bierlow (2), The Queen v. Lydeard St. Lawrence (3). The certificate of chargeability created by the statute 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57. s. 17, has not superseded the usual proof of chargeability, but only provided what shall be "sufficient proof," where it is proposed to prove chargeability by means of a certificate.

Merivale, contra, was not called upon.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion that this statement of chargeability is not sufficient. The words made use of in the examination, are a conclusion of law, and the appellants are entitled to ask for evidence, that in point of fact the parties have been relieved.

PATTESON, J.—The relieving officer may just as well use words which will put the matter beyond doubt, and say that he has relieved the paupers.

Order of Removal—Complaint by Overseers, Sufficiency of—Grounds of Appeal.

The complaint to be made by the churchwardens and overseers, under the statute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12, prior to an order of removal, is not required to be in writing.

Where, therefore, there was a complaint, in writing, by one overseer only, but the order was made upon "complaint by the overseers," and it was also admitted, at the sessions, that it had been made "on behalf of the parish officers, and with their consent," the complaint was held sufficient.

An examination set out a settlement by hiring and service, and also several instances of relief given by the appellant parish to the pauper and his family, while residing in the respondent parish. There were several grounds of appeal to the settlement, and amongst others, that the pauper never acquired a settlement in the said parish of E. (the appellant parish) either by hiring and service with the said J. S. (the master) or by any other means. Upon the hearing of the appeal the respondents gave no evidence of the actual settlement, but proved the instances of relief set out in their examination:—Held, that under the above ground of appeal the appellants were at liberty to shew that they had given the relief under a mistake.

This was an order of two Justices of the county of Norfolk, for the removal of Peter Quantril, his wife, and six children, from the parish of Bedingham to the parish of Earsham, both in Norfolk. At the Quarter Sessions, holden at Norwich, in March 1843, the Court quashed the order, subject to a case, which raised the questions of the sufficiency of the information or complaint, and of the grounds of appeal. The information was as follows:—"Norfolk, to wit. The information and complaint of John Smith, of the parish of, &c., in the said county of, &c., taken upon oath, this 25th day of January 1843, before two of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, acting in and for the said county of Norfolk, who saith, I am one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of Bedingham, in the said county of Norfolk. Peter Quantril, aged, &c., (then followed the names of the wife and the six children, and their ages) have come to inhabit in the said parish of Bedingham, not having gained a legal settlement there, nor produced any certificate, acknowledging them to be settled elsewhere; and they are now actually become chargeable to the same parish. Wherefore I pray that the said Peter Quantril, may be examined, &c. Signed, John Smith." The recital of the order (after the usual heading) was as follows:—"Whereas complaint has been made unto us, &c., by the overseers of the poor of the said parish of Bedingham:" and it then proceeded and concluded in the common form. The examination of Peter Quantril, which formed part of the case, stated a hiring with a Mr. John Spilling, at Earsham, and a service under it; and after stating his marriage, and the births of the children, &c., concluded thus: "In several of my wife's confinements, on the birth of the above children, and whilst residing in the parish of Bedingham, I have been allowed, by the overseers of the parish of Earsham, at the expense of that parish, a surgeon to attend my wife; and whilst residing in Bedingham, I have been repeatedly relieved, by the overseers of Earsham, with money. From the second year of my marriage, down to about five years ago, I have received from the overseers of Earsham, though living in Bedingham all that time, some money,—distributed from a parish charity of Earsham, to persons belonging to Earsham. I and my said wife and six children are residing in the parish of Bedingham, and chargeable to that parish." The first ground of appeal was, that the said order was not, and does not purport to have been made upon the complaint of the overseers of the poor of Bedingham, but of John Smith only, described as being one of such overseers; and that it does not appear on the face of his information, on which the said order was founded, that he was authorized by the churchwardens and overseers, or by the overseers or guardians of Bedingham, to make such complaint and information, on his own and their behalf. (The four next grounds of appeal raised questions upon statements in the pauper's examination as to his hiring and service with Mr. John Spilling, and are not material). The sixth ground was, that if the said Peter Quantril was hired by the said John Spilling, for a year, such hiring was dissolved, before the expiration of the year; and that the said Peter Quantril never acquired a settlement in the said parish of Earsham, either by hiring and service with the said John Spilling, or by any other means." There were also other grounds of appeal, which are not material. The case then stated, that, upon the trial, as to the first ground of appeal it was admitted that the application was made on behalf of the parish officers, and with their consent; and the Court decided, upon that point, in favour of the respondents. Evidence was then given, by the respondents, of relief given by the appellant parish, out of the poor-rate of that parish, to the pauper, occasionally, for a period of twenty years, whilst he was residing in the respondent parish. The appellants then called on the Court to allow them to shew that such relief had been given, under the mistaken belief that the pauper had gained a settlement in their parish, by his hire with Mr. Spilling, as stated in the examination. To this the respondents objected, on the ground that the notice did not state this as one of the grounds of appeal. The Court then permitted the appellants to call the paupers, with reference to this point (1), who, on examination, also admitted that seven or eight years previous to the present order, he was examined before Magistrates, at a petty sessions, respecting his settlement, on the application of, and whilst he was residing in, the respondent parish; and that the Magistrates refused to make an order, since which he had been relieved several times by the respondent parish, whilst resident in it. The Court of Quarter Sessions quashed the order of removal, and submitted two questions for the consideration of this Court:—First, Whether there had been a sufficient complaint, to give the Magistrates jurisdiction to make the order, and whether the examinations, upon which the said order was made, are sufficient, in law, to support it. Secondly, whether the Court ought to have admitted the appellants to give the evidence objected to.

B. Andrews and Gunning, in support of the order of Sessions.—The information and complaint, being by one overseer only, was insufficient. The statute 13 & 14 Car. 2. c. 12. enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful, upon complaint made by the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of any parish, to any Justice of the Peace, within forty days after any such person or persons coming so to settle as aforesaid," for any two Justices to remove—The Queen v. the Justices of Cambridge-shire (2), The King v. Harely (3), Weston Rivers v. St. Peters (4), The King v. Beeston (5), The King v. the Justices of Lancashire (6). The other overseers may dissent from the application, and yet, if the complaint may be made by one, the whole parish would be affected by the expenses. Secondly, the sixth ground of appeal was sufficient to let in the appellants to prove that the relief had been given by their parish, under a mistaken idea that the pauper was settled with them. The respondents do not attempt to prove the actual settlement by hiring and service with Mr. Spilling, but rely upon the relief, which is only evidence of a settlement. The ground of appeal amounts to an admission that relief was given, but under such circumstances as to give no settlement, and the evidence received manifestly shews that the relief, in this case, did not confer a settlement. The ground of appeal could not have correctly stated, that no settlement was gained by relief, as there is no head of settlement by relief, nor does the examination allege a settlement by relief.

Archbold and Palmer, contra.—As to the first point, the statute does not require the complaint of the churchwardens or overseers to be in writing; and though it is conceded that the majority of the officers must concur in the complaint, it is admitted that they did so in this case; and the order also recites a complaint, "by the overseers of the poor of the said parish of Bedingham." The cases that have been cited, therefore, are inapplicable. Secondly, instances of relief given are a good ground of removal alone, and if a settlement by hiring and service be defectively stated in the examination, which also contains evidence of settlement by relief, the hiring and service may be abandoned, and the relief only relied upon—The Queen v. the Justices of Caernarvonshire (7), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Camrose (8). But here there was no ground of appeal which would admit the appellants to contest either the fact of relief, or its effect. The grounds of appeal should either deny the statements in the examination, or confess and avoid them; but neither is done here. The respondents cannot, in proof, go beyond "their grounds of removal," nor the appellants beyond their statement of appeal. The sixth ground of appeal does not say that relief was not given, nor allege that it was given under a mistake. The respondents receive no information from this ground of appeal, that the appellants intend to say that they were deceived when they gave this relief.

[PATTESON, J.—Suppose the examination had set out instances of relief only, and the appellants in the grounds of appeal had said, "it is true relief was given, but the party gained no settlement;" although the removing parish might not be called upon to prove the relief, it by no means follows that the appellants might not dispute the effect of it.]

That the party did not gain a settlement "by any other means" is too general.

LORD DENMAN, C. J.—I am of opinion that the Sessions were right in quashing the order. They did so subject to our opinion upon the two questions they have asked. Upon the first, there was a sufficient complaint to give jurisdiction to make the order. The written complaint is at the instance of one officer only, but the order itself recites the complaint of all; and more than that, the case finds as a fact that the complaint was made "on behalf of the parish officers, and with their consent." Upon the second question, the Court were right in allowing the appellants to give the evidence they did. The examination first discloses an alleged settlement by hiring and service, and then states relief given under particular circumstances as evidence of a settlement. As it has been put by my Brother Patteson, the relief alone would be sufficient ground for removal, and the appellants would be at liberty to shew that it had been given by mistake. But the case is still stronger where the respondents proceed in the first instance to set out the settlement, which was subsequently acknowledged by relief, as although the settlement itself be so defectively stated, that the respondents cannot be let in to prove it, yet the subsequent relief strengthens the supposition that there was a settlement. The appellants by their grounds of appeal in effect say, that though relief was given, no settlement was ever gained. They were perfectly at liberty to shew this, and appear to have done so effectually.

PATTESON, J.—I am also of opinion that the Sessions were right. As to the insufficiency of the complaint, the answer that has been given by reference to the statute, which does not require to be in writing, has removed that difficulty. The complaint had the concurrence of the other officers, as was admitted at the sessions. The suggestion, therefore, that the complaint might be made by one officer, while the others were averse to it, has no bearing here. The Magistrates, also, make the order on the complaint of all. Next, as to the examination and the grounds of appeal. It is said that the appellants must deny, or confess and avoid. I am of opinion that the sixth ground is tantamount to saying, We gave the relief in error. It is not a denial that relief was given, but that any settlement was gained from such relief.

(7) 11 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 3.

(8) 2 Q.B. Rep. 330.

WILLIAMS, J.—The case raises two questions. Upon the first, Mr. Archbold has given an answer to the cases cited by Mr. Andrews. This is neither the complaint of a stranger, or one officer, but made by one, with the authority of all. The Sessions on the second point were also right in allowing the appellants to shew that the relief was given by mistake. The respondents abandon proof of the actual settlement, and rely upon proof of evidence of a settlement, which the other side should be allowed to meet.

WIGHTMAN, J.—On the first point, the statute does not require the complaint to be in writing; and the order shews the complaint was by all. As to the other point, relief is only evidence of some settlement. It is said that the appellants should deny, or confess and avoid, the statements in the examination. They admit relief was given, but say that it was given under such circumstances that it amounts to no acknowledgment of a settlement. They could not deny any specific settlement supposed to have been acknowledged by relief, as none was stated in the examination.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. THE JUSTICES
April 25. } OF KESTEVEN.

Mandamus—Examination, Sufficiency of—Grounds of Appeal—Sessions—Case.

Where the Quarter Sessions have dismissed an appeal against an order of removal, and have granted a case, which the applicants for the case have not brought up, the Court will not, at their instance, unless under special circumstances, grant a mandamus to the Court of Quarter Sessions, to enter continu-ances and hear the appeal.

*The question, whether the statement of grounds of appeal contains sufficient particularity, is for the Sessions to determine; and where they have decided it to be insufficient to let the appellants into their case, this Court will not grant a mandamus to the Court of Quarter Sessions to enter continuances and hear the appeal; overruling The Queen v.
the Justices of Carnarvonshire, 2 Q.B. Rep.
325; and The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding, ibid. 331.*

If, upon an objection to the examination, or grounds of appeal, that they are not sufficiently particular to enable the parties respectively to go into their case, the Justices consider the matter so doubtful as to grant a case upon the point, they should, nevertheless, proceed to hear the evidence, and decide upon the appeal, subject to a case; but if they entertain no doubt that the objection is a valid one, and therefore decide that the party cannot be admitted to prove his examination, or grounds of appeal (whichever it may be), no case should be granted.

A rule nisi had been obtained, calling upon the Justices of the Peace for the parts of Kesteven, in Lincolnshire, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, to command them to cause continuances, at their next General Quarter Sessions, to be entered upon the appeal of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Great Ponton, against an order of two Justices, for the removal of Miriam, the wife of William Welbourne, and her four children, from the township of Spittlegate, to the parish of Great Ponton, and to hear and determine the merits of the appeal. It appeared by the affidavits that the order was made in September 1843, upon examinations setting out a settlement by an apprenticeship, in 1828, for six years, of Wm. Welbourne, to one John Green, in the parish of Great Ponton, and a statement of his sleeping the last night of the apprenticeship in Great Ponton. Amongst other grounds of appeal, the second ground stated, that Wm. Welbourne, after his service with John Green for part of the term of the apprenticeship, with the consent of his master, to wit, from May or June 1833, to the end of the same term, served one Samuel Nowell, of Grosvenor Wharf, Pimlico, in the county of Middlesex, builder, under the said indenture, in the said examinations respectively mentioned, in the parish of Harlaxton, in the said parts of Kesteven, in the said county of Lincoln, and inhabited and resided therein more than forty days during such service, being then single and unmarried, and without child or children. At the hearing of the appeal, at the October Sessions 1843, the respondents proceeded to prove their case; and after stating that a forty days' residence in the appellant parish was admitted by the appellants, and therefore a prima facie case for the respondents was shewn, which it was for the appellants to get rid of, then objected that the appellants were not entitled to be heard upon the above ground of appeal, and to shew that the settlement under the indenture was in Harlaxton, because the statement of the grounds of appeal did not set forth the particular house in Harlaxton in which Wm. Welbourne resided, during the time he served under the indenture in the parish of Harlaxton, and did not specify or particularize the house by the name of the landlord, or in any other manner. The Justices determined that the statement of the grounds of appeal was insufficient in particularity for the above reasons, and that they could not receive any evidence in support of such alleged settlement; and the Justices, therefore, confirmed the order of removal, subject to a case for the opinion of this Court, in manner following: that is to say, that if the Court should be of opinion that the statement of grounds of appeal was insufficient in particularity, then the order of removal to be confirmed; but if the Court should be of a contrary opinion, then that continuances should be entered, and the Justices should proceed to hear the appeal. The affidavit further stated, that the appellants had witnesses in support of their statement, whom they were prepared to call, and should have called, if they had been allowed to do so by the Justices. The affidavit then went on to state that the deponent (the attorney for the appellant,) had been informed that this Court had lately declared an intention not to enter upon or decide cases sent from the Courts of Quarter Sessions, upon appeals against the removal of paupers, where the opinion of this Court would not be conclusive of the appeal, upon the hearing of which the points had arisen; and that if that intention should be adhered to, from the mode in which the opinion of the Court was asked in this case, such case would not be entertained if brought up, and the appellants would be without remedy, unless the Court would grant a writ of mandamus to the Justices to enter continuances and hear the appeal.

Mellor now shewed cause, and contended, first, that, as the appellants had applied at the Sessions for a case, which had been granted to them, and which they had not brought up, they were not at liberty to apply to this Court for a writ of mandamus. He cited upon this point, The King v. the Justices of the West Riding (1), The Queen v. the Justices of Suffolk (2), The King v. the Justices of Northamptonshire (3).

Whitehurst, contra.—The affidavit explains this application for a mandamus, and the reasons for not proceeding with the case that was granted. Those reasons will distinguish this from the cases cited. It is clear from several late authorities, which had not at the time this case was granted become generally known, that, if upon the statement of a case for this Court, it is, in certain events, to go back to the Sessions to be re-heard, this Court will not entertain it. The Court requires that their decision should put an end to the appeal one way or the other, and that the Sessions, under these circumstances, should proceed to hear, subject to the objection, and a case ultimately upon it, if necessary—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Wistow (4). The appellants applied to have their evidence heard.

[PATTESON, J.—It does not appear that you objected to a case in this form.]

Probably the parties were not aware of the decisions.

Per Curiam.—This case may be proceeded with.

Mellor.—There are, then, two conclusive answers to this application. First, the Court of Quarter Sessions have heard and decided the matter. They have not declined jurisdiction, and a question of sufficient particularity in grounds of appeal, is peculiarly a matter for that Court. They have entertained the question, and disposed of it; and therefore, at all events, no writ of mandamus can be directed to them. This Court has no means of judging of sufficient particularity. It is a mistake to call this a preliminary point. It is a hearing, and upon the merits—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Charlbury and Walcott (5), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Kingsclere (6). This is in effect an application to compel the Justices to come to a particular conclusion, which will not be granted—The King v. the Justices of Middlesex (7), The King v. the Inhabitants of Frieston (8), In re Pratt (9). Reliance, by the other side, will be placed upon The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire (10); but that case does not appear to have been sufficiently considered, and is at variance both with later and earlier authorities. Secondly, the Court of Quarter Sessions decided rightly, that the statement of the grounds of appeal was insufficient—The King v. the Justices of Derbyshire (11), The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Pontefract (12), The Queen v. the Justices of Sussex (13).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It is inconsistent with your former argument to enter into this.]

Whitehurst, contra.—The decision here having been upon a preliminary objection, and the appellants not having been heard, the Court will grant a mandamus. There are two cases precisely in point—The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire, and The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding (14). No attempt has been made to distinguish those cases from the present, and it is clear here that the merits have not been inquired into.—(He was then proceeding to discuss the sufficiency of the grounds of appeal, but the Court intimated that their decision would not be affected by this consideration.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This discussion furnishes one ground for satisfaction, which is, that it must now be taken to be generally known, that the Court of Queen's Bench will not entertain a case in such a stage of it, as that their decision may merely operate to put the Court below in motion. That Court is first to decide upon the case in one way or another, and upon that adjudication, where our opinion is required, we are willing to say which way, upon the whole matter, the final decision should be; but this discussion also obliges us to come to conclusions not so satisfactory; as it compels us to overrule two decided cases, namely, The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire, and The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding. In the first, it was certainly contended that a writ of mandamus could not issue under such circumstances as the present; but in the second, though the writ issued, the Court might have been partly misled, by the way in which it seemed to have been agreed that the matter should come before the Court. In those cases the Court took upon themselves to say, not that the Sessions had done wrong in not giving due consideration to the evidence, but that they had come to a wrong conclusion upon it. The language used by the Court in the Carnarvonshire case shews how the mistake was made, viz. that as the Sessions, upon a preliminary objection, had refused to hear the appeal, a writ of mandamus should go. But if their decision proceeded upon a matter of fact, over which they had cognizance, we are bound by their decision as regards a writ of mandamus. If the question be a matter of practice of the Sessions, involving a point of law, the Court may interfere in this way, and see if the Sessions have fettered themselves improperly, but upon a matter of fact we are bound by their decision. This is a matter of fact. I wish to abide by several decisions, that the Sessions are to decide upon the sufficiency of grounds of appeal, as to their particularity; such sufficiency depends upon many circumstances, of which the Sessions alone can judge. We are not now laying down this rule for the first time; as, therefore, we are of opinion that the cases referred to were not rightly decided, we are bound so to say, and discharge this rule.

PATTERSON, J.—I am of the same opinion. A question arises at the Sessions, whether the grounds of appeal are sufficient; and if that Court entertains so much doubt upon the subject that they are willing to grant a case, they should proceed to hear the appeal out, and decide it, subject to a case upon that question; but if they entertain no doubt, but are so satisfied that the grounds are insufficient that they do not go on to hear the appeal, then no case should be granted. That is to be understood for the future. It is very doubtful, I think, here, whether Mr. Whitehurst is entitled to say that he did not take the case that was granted, and that, therefore, he is not precluded from this application for a mandamus, as the party asking for the case should have stated to the Court below that a case granted in that way would be of no use, and have endeavoured to obtain it in that form in which it would be received by this Court. This probably arose, however, from the parties not being aware of the late decisions of the Court in that respect. With regard to the two cases we are about to overrule, I may observe, that I was present upon the second occasion, and fully concurred in the decision, though I was not upon the first; but for the future it must be understood that where the question is, whether there is enough in the grounds of appeal to entitle the appellants to go into their case, that matter is for the Quarter Sessions, and they are to determine it.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of the same opinion. In The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire, the decision proceeded upon what was improperly called a preliminary point. In this case it is not correct to say that the matter was not heard. If this was not a hearing, the same might be said, if only one witness had been called out of four or five.

NEW SERIES, XIII.—MAG. CAS.

The case came on; the point arose, and there was a decision upon it, by a Court having competent jurisdiction. The two cases that have been mentioned cannot be supported.

WIGHTMAN, J.—The decision in the Carnarvonshire case proceeded upon an erroneous view of what was a preliminary objection. In this case the Court decided upon a matter, which must be taken as a matter of fact, and touching the merits of the case.

Rule discharged.

Overseers' Accounts—Audit of, by the Auditor appointed under 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76—Allowance by Justices.

The Poor Law Amendment Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, does not take away the power of two Justices to allow overseers' accounts under the stat. 50 Geo. 3. c. 49.

Therefore, where a sum had been disallowed at a quarterly audit of the overseers' accounts, by an auditor appointed by the Poor Law Commissioners, and subsequently introduced again into the accounts, and allowed by the Justices in the annual account, with full notice of the disallowance by the auditor, the Court refused a mandamus to the Justices to order the overseers to pay over the sum so disallowed by the auditor to their successors.

Sir F. Pollock (Attorney General) had obtained a rule calling on two of the Justices of the Peace of the county of Stafford to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to them, commanding them to make an order for the payment, by Charles Stokes, William Cooksey, William Williams, and Isaac Bunn, late overseers of the poor of the parish of West Bromwich, in the said county, of the sum of 103*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*, to Archibald Kendrick and William Salter, the present overseers of the poor of the said parish, and, if necessary, to issue a warrant under their hands for levying the said sum by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said C. Stokes, W. Cooksey, W. Williams, and I. Bunn. It appeared from the affidavits that Stokes, Cooksey, Williams, and Bunn, mentioned in this rule, were the overseers of the poor of the parish of West Bromwich (which parish is in the West Bromwich Union) from Lady-day 1842, to Lady-day 1843. According to the provisions of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 47, the overseers were in the habit of having their accounts audited every quarter by the auditor appointed under that act, and on the 30th of January 1843, such accounts were submitted to T. S. Simkiss, the auditor for that purpose, and on that occasion the said Simkiss disallowed certain items amounting to 82*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*, and entered his disallowance in writing in the accounts, and signed the same as auditor. About Lady-day, 1843, Salter and Kendrick were appointed overseers in the room of the four previously mentioned, and on the 1st of April 1843, Stokes, one of the four who had so gone out of office, submitted the accounts to two Justices of the Peace for the county of Stafford. On that occasion Simkiss attended and discovered, as he stated in his affidavit, that the items disallowed by him had been again inserted as payments in March 1843; he informed the Justices of his disallowance, but they, nevertheless, allowed the accounts, and passed them in the usual form, and after such allowance there was a balance of 48*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.* due from the said four overseers. On the 24th of April the accounts were again submitted to Simkiss by Cooksey, &c.; Simkiss then audited them, and wrote at the foot of such accounts the following memorandum:

I have this day examined the foregoing accounts, and I disallow the following sums, namely:—

T. S. SIMKISS, Auditor.

Salter and Kendrick, the two new overseers, having received the sum of 48*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.*

from their predecessors, procured a summons, calling on the four first-named overseers to appear before such of her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Stafford as should be present at the Scott's Arms, Handsworth, on the 5th day of August 1843, to answer the complaint of the said W. Salter and A. Kendrick, and to shew cause why they should not pay to them the sum of 103*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*, the balance of accounts due to them as the present overseers. In the meantime an appeal against the allowance of the Justices of the 1st of April was entered at the Staffordshire Quarter Sessions, held on the 27th of June, by one Stanton, an inhabitant and ratepayer of the said parish, but such appeal, owing to the preliminary objection to the notice of appeal, was dismissed and the allowance confirmed. The parties and their attorney afterwards attended, in pursuance of the before-mentioned summons, and the Magistrates, after hearing the case and referring to the 47th, 89th, and 99th sections of the Poor Law Act, refused to make any order. It appeared that the 82*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*, originally disallowed by the auditor, was incurred for repairs done to some workhouses.

Whateley and Gray now shewed cause.—

The 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 47. does not take away the jurisdiction of the Magistrates; it only directs that, "in addition to the annual account then by law required," the overseer shall, once in every quarter, render an account to the auditor (if there is one) appointed under that act. That is not inconsistent with the power given to the Justice by statute 30 Geo. 3. c. 49. s. 1.

[PATTERSON, J.—The auditor is not mentioned before the 47th section, and nothing is there said as to his office or character; nor does it appear in this case what the form of his appointment is.]

[Whitmore (on the other side) stated, that he was appointed according to one of the orders and regulations of the Poor Law Commission, which direct that an auditor shall be appointed by the guardians to "examine, audit, allow, and disallow the accounts of the Union, and of the several parishes comprised therein."]

The 89th section of the act requires the Justices to disallow, as illegal, all payments made contrary to the provision of that act. That section contains no power of appeal, though 50 Geo. 3. c. 49. ss. 2. & 3. give a power of appeal against the allowance of the Justices.

[COLERIDGE, J.—Then if a sum were struck out by the Justice, might not the auditor insert it again?]

If the 50 Geo. 3. c. 49. is kept alive, and it is not repealed by the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, there is nothing to shew that the Magistrates have not a superintending power over the accounts; and if a doubt exist, the Court will not make this rule absolute. The 101st section cannot be relied on, as the Magistrates have heard and determined this matter. Then the allowance of the Justices was confirmed on appeal; and it is not contended that the sum disallowed was not expended in a lawful manner. The disallowance by the auditor is not final; if it were, it effectually takes away the right of appeal.

[PATTERSON, J.—I do not see what effect the disallowance of the auditor has.]

Sir F. Pollock (Attorney General) and Whitmore, contra.—The question is, whether the Justices can allow such sums which the auditor has disallowed. It may be that they have the power of disallowing what the auditor has allowed. The question is one of difficulty, and the Court will therefore grant a mandamus, in order that a return may be made. Parties obeying a mandamus since the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67. are not exposed to an action, and they can raise any matter of fact or law, on which their doubt arises, and on which the case may be taken, if necessary, to a court of error. The balance in question becomes, under sections 47. and 99, a penalty, recoverable under the act, having been improperly introduced into the accounts after disallowance by the auditor.

[COLERIDGE, J.—But in that case should you not pursue the mode directed by the 101st section? and the Magistrates have heard the matter of complaint under that section, and come to a decision upon it.]

[PATTERSON, J.—If we grant a mandamus as prayed, the Justices will perhaps obey it: we cannot oblige them to make a return.]

With respect to the appointment of auditor, it appears, by the 42nd section, that the rules of the commissioners shall be valid and binding, and "shall be obeyed and observed as if the same were specifically made by and embodied in the act of parliament." The auditor is appointed under one of the rules (rule 27); some effect must be given to the first disallowance of the auditor; and how can that be if the sums struck out by him may be again introduced?

[PATTERSON, J.—The question is, whether the auditor is to be absolute. According to your argument the rules of the commissioners repeal the power of the Justices altogether, though the 47th section of the act itself treats the account submitted to the auditor as something additional only to that which they were previously by law required to lay before the Justices.]

On the other hand, if the argument on the other side be correct, the Justices may abrogate altogether the power of the auditor. It may be admitted, that, taking the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. in connexion with the 50 Geo. 3. c. 49, there is no power of appeal against any of the three first allowances by the auditor of the accounts of any particular set of overseers. The appeal to the Sessions in this case was a mere nullity, as it went off on a matter of form.

Cur. adv. vult.

The judgment of the Court was now delivered by LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This was an application for a writ of mandamus to two Justices, to order the overseers of West Bromwich to pay over to the present overseers the sum of 100*l.* and upwards, or, if necessary, to issue a distress warrant, and levy the same. It first seemed as if this application had been founded on the 50 Geo. 3. c. 49. s. 1, by which the churchwardens and overseers are directed, within fourteen days after the expiration of their year of office, to submit their accounts to two Justices, at special sessions, who are to examine, and allow or disallow the various charges and payments. It is then provided, "and in case such churchwardens and overseers shall neglect to pay to their successors, within fourteen days from the signing and attesting such account, any sum or sums of money, or arrears, which, on the examination and allowance of such account, in manner aforesaid, shall appear or be found to be due and owing from such churchwardens or overseers, or any of them, or remaining in their hands, it shall and may be lawful for the subsequent churchwardens and overseers, by warrant from any two or more Justices of the Peace, to levy all such sum and sums of money, by distress and sale of the offender's goods." It is plain, from this section, that the Justices are only to issue their warrant for such sum as is found to be due on the examination and allowance of the overseers' accounts by two or more Justices at special sessions, within fourteen days of such overseers going out of office. It appears, by the affidavits in this case, that the sum in question has not been found so to be due and owing; on the contrary, it appears that the amount was allowed by the Justices, on their examination, as it is said, improperly; but at all events the accounts were allowed, and no such sum was found to be due and owing; therefore the Justices have no power to issue their warrant under the 50 Geo. 3; and so, of course, this Court cannot command them to do that which, by law, they have no power to do. There is no other act previous to the Poor Law Amendment Act, the 4 & 5 of Will. 4. that authorizes them to issue such warrant. The 43 Eliz. c. 2. s. 2. directs the overseers, within four days after their going out of office, to make and yield up an account to two Justices, and to pay over the balance to their successors. But that act gives no remedy by distress, but applies only to the balance appearing in their account. The 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. s. 1. directs the churchwardens and overseers to deliver an account to their successors verified on oath; and section 2. enables the incoming overseers to apply for the balance due; but the act gives no remedy by distress, but applies only to the balance appearing in the overseers' account. The next act is the 50 Geo. 3; and the last act, the 4 & 5 Will. 4, directs the overseers to deliver, in addition to their annual account, then by law required, accounts quarterly, and the auditor appointed under the rule and regulation of the Poor Law Commissioners is to examine, audit, allow or disallow such accounts, and provides that all balances due from any overseer may be recovered in the same manner as any penalties and forfeitures under that act. By the 99th section the penalties and forfeitures under the act are to be levied by warrant of distress, and sale of the goods; and, by the 101st section, power is given to summon the parties. It would seem that the auditor mentioned was appointed by the commissioners, and that the quarterly accounts were rendered to him, and he disallowed the charges in question, to the amount of 103*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.* in January 1843. He considered them to be contrary to the provisions of that act, and totally at variance with the rules, orders, and regulations of the commissioners; and if so, no doubt they ought also to have been disallowed by the Justices, when the annual accounts were rendered to them; for the 89th section of the 4 & 5 Will. 4. expressly provides that the Justices shall disallow such items. The Justices, however, considered the charges not contrary to the provisions of the act, nor to the rules, orders, and regulations of the commissioners, and allowed them, as I have before observed. Against this allowance there was an appeal to the Quarter Sessions, and that seems to be given by the 2nd and 8rd sections of the 50 Geo. 3. and the 17 Geo. 2. c. 38. s. 4, and on that appeal the allowance was confirmed. Notwithstanding this, the auditor summoned the overseers before two Justices, under the 101st section of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, to compel them to pay over the sum which he had so disallowed, and which the Justices at Quarter Sessions had so allowed. The Justices refused to make the order, and we are now asked to issue a writ of mandamus, commanding them to make such order, and, if necessary, to issue their warrant under the 99th section: this we cannot do, unless we are prepared to say, the power of two Justices, under the 50 Geo. 3. to allow the overseers' accounts, subject to the appeal to the Quarter Sessions, is wholly taken away, and rendered wholly inoperative, by the 47th section of the 4 & 5 Will. 4. and transferred, absolutely, to the auditors appointed by the Poor Law Commissioners. The late Attorney General, in the course of his argument, contended that the Justices have no power to allow, in the annual account, any items that had been disallowed by the auditor, in the quarterly account, although they might have a power, perhaps, to disallow what the auditors had allowed. The 47th section does not in terms authorize the auditor to disallow any item in the overseers' accounts, but it appears a rule of the Poor Law Commissioners does, which, under the 42nd section, has the authority of an act of parliament. Here there are, apparently, concurrent authorities; and, in the case of a conflict between them, as in this case, it is difficult to say which was intended by the legislature to prevail. The former power of the Justices must be taken to have been well known to the framers of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. The mode in which it is to be exercised is clearly laid down, and an appeal is given as well to overseers as to any other person who may be aggrieved. This authority is evidently intended to be preserved, as the 47th section directs the quarterly accounts to be rendered, in addition to the annual accounts, thereby preserving the annual account, and by consequence, preserving all that, by law, ought to be done, or might be done upon it. The 89th section further confirms the authority of the Justices, and directs them to disallow, not what the auditors had already disallowed, but all charges, contrary to the provisions of the act, or to the rules, orders, and regulations of the commissioners, leaving it to them to determine what charges are so contrary, not mentioning the authority of the auditors. And this section contains this remarkable proviso, "that no allowance by any Justice shall exonerate or discharge such overseer or guardian from any penalty or legal proceeding to which he may have rendered himself liable, by having acted contrary to the rules, orders, and regulations of the said Commissioners, or to the provisions of this act," as if the legislature had contemplated that the Justices, either from ignorance of the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Commissioners, or from a misinterpretation of them, might happen to allow improper charges, and intending to guard against the shielding the overseers from a penalty, though the charges might stand good as items of their accounts, by reason of the allowance of the Justices. Seeing, then, that this authority in the Justices is evidently intended to be preserved, and no provision had been made by which their authority is made subordinate to that of the auditors; nor any provision by which the exercise of such authority as the commissioners may think fit to give the auditors, can be reviewed, by way of appeal, we are of opinion that, whatever effect was intended to be given to the examination of the overseers' accounts, by the auditors, ultimately the allowance or disallowance of them is still vested in the Justices, subject to an appeal to the Sessions. We are reminded of the statute 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67. s. 3, by which all persons are protected from actions in respect of anything done in obedience to a peremptory mandamus, and therefore we are asked to let this writ go, if there is any doubt, inasmuch as the Justices are bound to make a return; and that even if badly made, they would, under a peremptory mandamus, be protected from any action. We feel, however, no doubt in the case; nor does the act of parliament referred to, say that the Justices are to make a return to a mandamus, instead of obeying it, for the sake of protecting themselves under the act. Therefore the rule must be discharged.

Rule discharged.

Order of Maintenance—Certainty.

An order of maintenance, which directs an entire sum to be paid weekly and every week, for and towards the maintenance of three persons, for so long a time as such three persons shall be chargeable, is bad.

By an order of two Justices of the county of Derby, at petty sessions, after reciting that complaint had been made by the overseers of the poor of Chapel-in-le-Frith, in that county, that Mary Martin, an infant of the age of five years, Joseph Martin, an infant of the age of three years, and Sarah Jane Martin, an infant of the age of eight months, were then poor and unable to work so as to maintain or support themselves, and were then chargeable to the said parish, and that one Joseph Martin, dwelling at Coombs Edge, within the jurisdiction of the said Justices, was the grandfather of the said M. M., J. M., and S. J. M., and was of sufficient ability to relieve and maintain the said M. M., J. M., and S. J. M., his grandchildren, and that thereupon the said Joseph Martin was duly summoned to appear before the Justices, at a petty session to be holden, &c. to shew cause why an order should not be made, requiring him to pay such weekly sum for and towards the relief of the said M. M., J. M., and S. J. M., his grandchildren, as the said petty session should think fit, and that the said Joseph Martin having appeared by his attorney, did not shew any sufficient cause why such an order as aforesaid should not be made, and after adjudging in the usual form that the said M. M., J. M., and S. J. M., were poor and unable to work, so as to maintain themselves, and were actually chargeable to the said parish, and that the said Joseph Martin was the grandfather, and of sufficient ability to maintain them, and was then dwelling within the jurisdiction of the said Justices: it was ordered, that the said Joseph Martin should upon notice of that order pay to the overseers, &c. weekly, and every week from that present time, the sum of 6s. for and towards the relief and maintenance of the said Mary Martin, Joseph Martin, and Sarah Jane Martin, for and during so long a time as the said Mary Martin, Joseph Martin, and Sarah Jane Martin, should be chargeable to the said parish, or until he, the said Joseph Martin, should be lawfully ordered to the contrary.

Whitehurst moved for a certiorari, to bring up this order, for the purpose of quashing it. He contended, first, that there was not enough shewn on the face of the order to make the grandfather liable;—secondly, that the order was uncertain, in directing the party to pay a fixed sum, for so long a time as the children were all chargeable—some might remain chargeable, and some might become able to work.

Humfrey shewed cause, in the first instance.—The order is in the usual form, it shews that Joseph Martin is the grandfather; that the children are unable to work, and chargeable. The 59 Geo. 3. c. 12. s. 26. empowers the Justices at Petty Sessions to make such order.

[COLERIDGE, J.—The order fixes an entire sum of 6s. a week, so long as they are all chargeable.]

When they cease to be chargeable a new state of facts arises, and the order is at an end.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think, that the order should have fixed a precise amount of relief in respect of each child unable to work, and that the order fixing an entire sum, to be paid so long as all three children are chargeable, is bad.

Appeal, Signature of Grounds of—Guardian.

A statement of grounds of appeal was signed by W. R., T. G., and, for W. H., W. P. H., "churchwardens and overseers" of parish A. (which formed part of a union,) and "J. E. guardian":—Held, that such signature was insufficient, it not appearing that W. H. had given W. P. H. authority to sign for him; and that the signature of the guardian did not help the notice, a guardian under the Poor Law Amendment Act not having any authority for such a purpose.

An appeal by the parish of Allhallows the Great, in the city of London, against an order of removal from the parish of Wimbledon, in the county of Surrey, came on to be heard at the Surrey Quarter Sessions in July 1843, when it appeared that the following notice of grounds of appeal had been served on the overseers of the respondent parish.

"To the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Allhallows, in the county of Surrey.—Whereas the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Allhallows the Great, in the city of London, did in and by a certain paper writing, dated the 27th of February 1843, give you notice of their intention to appeal against a certain order of removal, dated the 4th of February 1843, by which Susannah Legge and her children (naming them) were ordered to be removed from your said parish of Wimbledon to our said parish, &c.; and whereas the churchwardens of our said parish did at the last General Quarter Sessions, &c. duly enter the said appeal against the said order, and the said appeal was then and there duly entered, and the hearing thereof respited until the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be holden, &c. Now, we, the undersigned churchwardens and overseers of the said parish, do hereby give you notice, that it is our intention to bring on our said appeal to be heard and determined at the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace to be holden, &c., and that the grounds of appeal are (here followed a statement of the grounds of appeal). Dated the 12th of June 1843." (Signed)

W. Ryde, T. Gooch; for W. Hammond, W. P. Hammond; churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Allhallows the Great. J. Elsdon, guardian.

It appeared that the parish of Allhallows the Great had two churchwardens and two overseers, and was one of the parishes forming the City of London Union, under the Poor Law Amendment Act, having one guardian appointed under that act; Ryde and Gooch, who signed the notice, were the overseers, and W. Hammond mentioned in it was one of the churchwardens, and W. P. Hammond, who signed it, was the son of the said W. Hammond. John Elsdon was the guardian appointed as before mentioned. There was no proof that the said W. Hammond had given his son any authority to sign the said notice.

It was objected, that the notice not having been signed by a majority of the parish officers, was insufficient, and the Court of Quarter Sessions, being of that opinion, dismissed the appeal. A rule nisi having been obtained for a mandamus to the Justices to enter continuances and hear the appeal,—

Wallinger and Corner now shewed cause (April 15).—First, the notice was not sufficiently signed by the churchwardens and overseers of the appellant parish, within the 81st section of the 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. It is only a signing by two out of the four. The signature of W. P. Hammond for W. Hammond amounts to nothing—The Queen v. the Justices of Worcestershire (1). There is, therefore, not a signature by a majority of the churchwardens and overseers—The King v. the Justices of Warwickshire (2). Then, secondly, the signature of the person signing as guardian does not assist the notice. A guardian, as an individual, can do no valid act to bind the parish. It is the board of guardians who administer the affairs of the parish, under 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 38. This is not the case of a parish incorporated under Gilbert's Act, 22 Geo. 3. c. 28; had that been so, the notice could only have been given by the guardian—The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding, (Harnley v. Rothwell) (3).

Charnock and Arnold, contra.—First, the signature of the parties, purporting to be churchwardens and overseers, is sufficient. Two actually sign, and there is a signature of a party for a third parish officer. It is not necessary that each party signing should append to his signature the exact character in which he signs: an overseer may be unable to write, or have met with an accident so as to make it necessary that some one should sign for him. Then, as to the guardian, a guardian may be considered a parish officer.

[PATTESON, J.—Has the guardian appointed, under the New Poor Law Act, any authority at all, except at a board of guardians? He cannot be considered a guardian of the parish, but he is appointed by the parish to act at the board.]

[PATTESON, J.—Where there are guardians for a single parish, under the Poor Law Act, they act as a board, by the 39th section.]

On reference to the interpretation clause, section 109, it will be seen that the term "guardian" is to be construed to mean any parish officer.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me, that the Justices at sessions were right in refusing to hear the appeal. To decide that a notice of appeal is not to be received, is certainly not an agreeable act, but when a duty is imposed on parishes by an act of parliament, the Court is bound to see that that duty is properly performed. Now, first, with respect to the signature by Hammond, it is clear that the signing by one party for another does not make such signing the act of that other. And, on the second question, it is also clear, that a guardian is not necessarily a parish officer; there is nothing in the act which says, that he is to be considered a parish officer in any other sense than that which is clearly pointed out in the 38th section.

PATTESON, J.—It is to be observed, that the 81st section of the Poor Law Amendment Act does not say that a notice of appeal is to be signed by a majority of the parish officers, and there are no such persons as guardians of a parish under the New Poor Law Act in the sense contended for; at least, I cannot find in the Poor Law Amendment Act anything to shew that the guardians appointed for a union under that act can act as parish officers. The word "guarddian," in the 81st section, cannot apply therefore to any guardian appointed under it, unless it applies to those appointed under section 39.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion. —As to the first question, in order to make the signature of the agent the signature of the party, it should appear that the signature was by such party's authority. In this case there was no evidence of such affirmation. But, secondly, it is said, that the signature of the guardian will render the number of parish officers complete, for the purpose of making the signature of the document sufficient; on referring, however, to the 38th section, it will be seen that it contains an express exclusion of the guardian's having any authority in virtue of his office for any purpose (except such as are there mentioned) except as a member, and at a meeting, of the board.

Settlement—Tenement—Examination, Sufficiency of.

An examination which shews that the pauper took a house for a year, at a rent exceeding 10l., and resided in it for more than a year, and "paid rent for the whole term of his tenancy," does not shew sufficient to support a settlement by renting a tenement.

This was an appeal against an order of two Justices for the removal of M. Redmayne, from the township of Preston to the township of Leeds. The material part of the examination of the pauper was as follows:—"In the month of May 1820, I became the tenant of a house in Kirkgate, in Leeds, in the West Riding of the county of York. I know not the name of the landlord of the house, and I do not believe I ever heard it, but the steward of the house, and from whom I took it, was a Mr. Wild. The house when I took it was No. 19, but it is now numbered 89. I took the house for a year, as I believe at 19l., but I am not certain whether it was a pound more or less. I entered into and resided in the house in the said month of May, and continued to reside upon it with my family until the month of October 1821, when I left it. I paid rent for the whole time of my tenancy. I have not since done any act to gain a settlement."

One of the grounds of appeal was, "that the examinations are bad and insufficient to support the said order, inasmuch as they do not state the house therein mentioned to have been a separate and distinct dwelling-house, bond fide hired at and for the sum of 10l. a year at the least; and inasmuch as they do not state that such house was held, and the rent for the same actually paid, for the time of one whole year at the least, by the said M. Redmayne, who is alleged to have been the person hiring the same."

At the trial of the appeal, the above objections were, amongst others, taken by the appellants, but overruled by the Court of Quarter Sessions, who confirmed the order, subject to the opinion of the Court on the objections.

Cowling, in support of the order of Sessions.—The examination must be read as the statement of the pauper, who is not to be supposed to give his evidence in the words of the act of parliament. The statement is, in substance, sufficient to shew such a renting and occupation as to confer a settlement: as to the payment of rent, the Justices have found it sufficiently particular, and the Court will not intend that any other rent was meant.

R. Hall, Pashley, and Wigham, contra.—The examinations should shew a compliance, in substance, with the statutory ingredients necessary to complete a settlement under 59 Geo. 3. c. 50. This statement is deficient in not shewing that the rent was paid for the house for one whole year. It does not state that the tenant paid the rent, or the whole rent; it might have been a very small portion. If he paid the whole rent, why should he not say so? The examination in all material particulars should follow the statute—The Queen v. the Recorder of Pontefract (1).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I feel compelled to say, that I cannot find a settlement stated on the face of this examination. It is unfortunate that the omission of a word should make all the difference, but such is the case.

Settlement—Acknowledgment—Relief—Workhouse.

A pauper being chargeable to parish A, was placed by the overseers of that parish at an establishment of a contractor for the maintenance of paupers, which was locally situate in parish B, and there maintained at the expense of parish A:—Held, that this could not be considered as relief by parish A. out of the parish; and therefore that such relief, however long continued or often repeated, did not amount to any evidence of an admission by parish A. that the pauper was settled in that parish.

Upon an appeal against an order of two Justices, for the removal of W. Conqueror, his wife, and two children, from the parish of Ashton-under-Lyne to the parish of St. Giles in the Fields, the Sessions confirmed the order, subject to a case stated by the chairman, which was in substance as follows:—In the year 1828, W. Conqueror, being a pauper in the parish of St. Giles, was sent at the expense of that parish to Cresbrook, in Derbyshire, where he remained till July 1829, when, being out of work and in a state of destitution, he went direct from Cresbrook to the said parish of St. Giles to obtain relief. He was then, and on several other occasions whilst living in St. Giles's parish, relieved by that parish, by receiving 1s. at a time; and in the ensuing winter, being again chargeable to the said parish of St. Giles, he was taken into the workhouse of that parish, which is situate within the limits thereof, and remained there some months, and until he was sent from thence with other paupers to Islington, out of the limits of the parish of St. Giles in the Fields, to the establishment of one Perry, a contractor for maintenance of paupers, on behalf of that and other parishes, where he was maintained for some time at the expense of the said parish of St. Giles in the Fields; and shortly after leaving that establishment, the pauper, being again chargeable to the appellant parish, whilst living therein, was admitted by order of the parish officers of St. Giles into the Surrey Asylum, which is a similar establishment, and locally situate out of the limits of the parish of St. Giles. Upon these facts, it was contended, on behalf of the appellants, that Perry's establishment at Islington, and the Surrey Asylum, though each locally situate in another parish, were to be considered, quoad all matters relating to the settlement of the pauper, as integral parts of the parish by which the maintenance was defrayed; and that there was no evidence of any such relief given to the pauper, whilst residing in another parish, as constituted an admission of his being settled in the appellant parish; but the Court of Quarter Sessions were of opinion, that on the whole there was such evidence upon the facts as above stated. The question for the opinion of this Court was, whether there was evidence of such relief as amounted to an acknowledgment of settlement by relief. If the Court should be of opinion that there was, then the order to be confirmed; if otherwise, then the order to be quashed.

Townsend, in support of the order of Sessions.—This was not relief to casual poor, and it was relief out of the parish. It is for the Sessions to draw their own conclusion from the facts proved. The case of The King v. St. Peter and St. Paul, Bath (1) was relied on by the appellants; but in that case the workhouse was built under the provisions of 9 Geo. 1. c. 7. s. 4; and Buller, J. put the case on the ground of the property in the workhouse having been acquired by the parish, under the provisions of that act. Here the parish officers merely contracted with strangers in a third parish, and the place where the pauper was maintained did not belong to them.

[PATTERSON, J.—If a man passing through a parish were to break his leg, and were sent by the overseers there to a doctor out of the parish, could it be said that the parish so sending him made him one of their own poor?]

The relief would then be to casual poor. In this case the relief extended over many months—The King v. Chatham (2).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—Relief operates as an acknowledgment; but in this case, to whom was the acknowledgment made? This is the case of a pauper in the parish at the time he is chargeable, and they remove him to a workhouse of their own.]

(1) 2 Nol. P.L. 377.

(2) 8 East, 501.

In The King v. Edwinstone (3), one instance of relief given out of the parish was held sufficient to warrant a finding that the pauper was settled in the relieving parish.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—In that case there was no evidence the other way.]

The Sessions have here found the fact. It was admitted in The King v. Trowbridge (4), that if the Sessions had then found that the effect of the evidence had been to shew a settlement in Chatham, the Court would have affirmed their decision. The King v. Yarwell (5) is also in point, to shew that the Court will not question the finding of the Sessions.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—In The King v. Coleorton (6) it was held, that relief given to a family residing in a parish for a long period was no evidence of a settlement, though there was in that case an apprenticing by the parish.]

The provisions of 59 Geo. 3. c. 12. s. 10, and 33 Geo. 3. c. 35. s. 39, and 54 Geo. 3. c. 170. s. 2, which expressly provide against birth settlements in the parishes in which the workhouses, &c., provided and established under those acts, are locally situated, would seem to shew that, in the contemplation of the legislature, the local situation would in such case govern the settlement. Here, the provisions of the acts relating to parish workhouses not having been complied with, the provision, with respect to settlements, would not apply.

Montagu Chambers, contra, was not called upon.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me that the Sessions have raised the real question for our decision on the facts stated, and that question is, whether there was sufficient evidence of such relief given to the pauper, whilst residing in another parish, as amounted to an admission of his being settled in the appellat parish. If they had shewn any evidence of such relief, we should not have felt warranted in departing from the conclusion drawn by them; but in this case I think there was no such evidence. The case then comes within the principle laid down in The King v. Chadderton (7), The King v. Chatham, and The King v. Coleorton, and the reason on which those decisions were founded is most important, as the overseers are bound to relieve casual poor; and it is highly necessary that they should not be prevented from exercising the duties of common humanity, by the fear of having the settlement of a pauper established against them. I think it is quite clear that the relief given in this case must be considered as relief given within the appellat parish; and with a view to this question, it is not material to consider whether the provision of the acts of parliament relating to parish workhouses situate out of the parish were complied with or not, as the house in which the pauper was lodged in each instance was, in fact, a parish house.

PATTESON, J., being a rated inhabitant of St. Giles, gave no opinion.

WILLIAMS, J.—The real question is, whether there was any evidence at all of such relief as would be an acknowledgment of a settlement. From the time of The King v. Chatham to the present time it has been uniformly held, that relief given to a pauper residing in a parish, is no evidence of his being settled there. It is said, however, that such relief may be repeated so often as to amount to evidence; but our so holding would give rise to the most perplexing questions in each case. If one instance of relief will not do, will two, or ten, or what number? Then, as to the question as to where the relief was given? The parish officers transfer the pauper to an establishment of their own, and it cannot make any difference whether it was locally situate within the parish or out of it.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion. The pauper in this case was in each instance sent by the appellat parish to a place which that parish had hired and used for parish purposes, and it is the same thing as if it were in the parish. If so, the case of The King v. Chatham and The King v. Coleorton are decisions that relief given in such place is no evidence whatever of a settlement.

1844. } THE QUEEN, on the prosecution
April 25. } of ROBERT BULLOCK, v. CLARK.

Highway—Indictment—Costs of Prosecution—Mandamus.

Upon proceedings taken against the inhabitants of a parish for non-repair of a highway, where an indictment is ordered, and tried under sections 94. and 95. of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, the latter section provides, "that the costs of such prosecution shall be directed by the Judge of the assize before whom the said indictment is tried, to be paid out of the rate made and levied in pursuance of that act, in the parish in which such highway shall be situate." At the March Assizes, 1842, an indictment was tried at the assizes, against the inhabitants of a parish, who were found guilty, and an order made, upon application to the Judge, for the costs of the prosecution in the following words: "It is ordered, &c., that the costs of this prosecution be paid out of the rate made and levied, or to be made and levied, in pursuance of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, in the said parish of," &c.—signed by the Judge. The amount of the costs was not ascertained during the assizes. At subsequent assizes for the same county, application was made to different Judges to ascertain the amount, and order the payment; an application was also made at chambers to the Judge who tried the indictment; but they declined to do so; and at the Summer Assizes in 1843, (judgment having been respited from time to time,) the Judge then presiding, upon proof that the road had been well repaired, passed a nominal fine upon the defendants, and discharged their recognizances to appear for judgment. In Hilary term, 1844, a rule nisi was obtained for a writ of mandamus to the surveyor of the highways of that parish, commanding him to pay to the prosecutor "the costs of the prosecution of the indictment," not mentioning any sum.

The Court refused to interfere, and discharged the rule.

A rule had been obtained, in last Hilary term, calling upon James Clark, surveyor of highways, within the parish of Chipping Barnet, in the county of Hertford, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to him, commanding him to pay to Robert Bullock, or to his attorney, the costs of the prosecution of an indictment against the inhabitants of the said parish.

It appeared, by the affidavits, that at a special sessions for the highways for the division of Chipping Barnet, in the liberty of St. Alban, in the county of Hertford, duly held, &c. on the 3rd of November 1840, an order was made by two Justices, upon information according to the statute, &c. (5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50.), and upon hearing the surveyor of the highways of the said parish, directing Robert Bullock, the prosecutor, to prefer a bill of indictment, and subpoena the necessary witnesses in support thereof, at the then next assizes, to be holden for the county of Hertford, against the inhabitants of the parish of Chipping Barnet, for permitting a highway to be out of repair; that at the then next assizes, in March 1841, the bill of indictment was preferred, and found a true bill; that it was tried at the assizes, holden in March 1842, before Gurney, B., and a verdict of guilty passed against the said inhabitants, whereupon the counsel for the prosecution requested the Judge to direct the costs of the prosecution to be paid out of the highway rate, made and levied in the parish of Chipping Barnet; that the learned Judge inquired for the surveyors who attended on behalf of the inhabitants, who were absent, when the learned Judge respited the judgment until the then next assizes, expressing a hope that the road would be repaired in the meantime, and the necessity of inflicting a fine prevented; and made an order as to the costs, of which the following minute was made by the clerk of the assize: "The inhabitants of the parish of Chipping Barnet. For non-repair of a road. It is ordered by Mr. Baron Gurney, that the costs of this prosecution be paid out of the rate, made and levied, or to be made and levied, in pursuance of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, in the said parish of Chipping Barnet. Signed, J. Gurney." The learned Judge also, at the same assizes, respited the recognizances of the inhabitants to the then next Summer Assizes, 1842, for the same county. That at the assizes in July 1842, the inhabitants applied to respite the judgment to the Spring Assizes, 1843, and the judgment was accordingly respited; that the costs of the prosecution, up to the time of the delivery of the verdict, amounted to 678*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, consisting of 420*l.* for disbursements, and the residue for the charges of the prosecution, which disbursements were necessary, and the charges fair and reasonable; that on the 29th of June 1842, a bill of such costs was sent to the attorney employed by the inhabitants, who made no communication respecting them, till after the Midsummer Assizes, 1842, when he returned the same, intimating that it would not be entertained by the parish; that application was made to the taxing masters of the Crown Office, and to the deputy clerk of assize for the home circuit, to tax the bill, who declined, upon the ground of having no authority; that the bill was ultimately taxed by certain attorneys (but it did not appear to have been done with the knowledge or consent of the attorney for the inhabitants), at 63*l.* 13*s.* 2*d.*; that in October 1842, after this amount was ascertained, application was made to Gurney, B. to ascertain the costs, and insert the amount in the above order, and direct the same to be paid out of the rate; that both parties attended, but the learned Judge refused to interfere, expressing his regret that he was unable to do so; that at the Spring Assizes for Hertford, 1843, the prosecutor, having given notice to the attorney of the defendants, appeared by counsel, and being satisfied that the road had been properly repaired, did not pray for judgment, but applied for the costs, when, after full argument by counsel on both sides, Patteson, J. decided, that he had no jurisdiction or power to grant the application, and again respited the judgment; that a further application was made to Gurney, B. for a summons, calling upon the defendants to appear before him, and shew cause why the amount of the costs should not be ascertained, and inserted in the above-mentioned order, but the learned Baron refused to grant a summons; that at the Summer Assizes for Hertford, 1843, the prosecutor again appeared, and moved the Court for judgment and costs in the said prosecution, and Parke, B. imposed a nominal fine on the defendants, and discharged their recognizances, and decided that he had no power to ascertain the costs of the prosecution. The affidavits then stated a service of the bill of costs upon Clark, and his refusal to pay the same, on the ground that he had no authority. It also appeared that Clark was the surveyor of the highways at the time the rule was moved, but was not so when the indictment was preferred or tried.

Platt and Godson shewed cause.—The amount of the costs should have been ascertained during the assizes at which the indictment was tried, and the amount made part of the order. There was no power under the statute to ascertain the amount subsequently. The question depends on sections 94. and 95. of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. Section 94. directs the summoning of the surveyor before Justices, and the mode of proceeding where the highway is out of repair; and section 95. the mode of proceeding if (as in this case) the obligation to repair is disputed (1). The costs are to be directed to be paid by the Judge before whom the indictment is tried. The order must specify the amount, without which it is no order at all. The affidavits state that the amount has been ascertained, but the defendants have neither had notice of, nor attended any taxation. It was easy for the attorney for the prosecution to have had his bill of costs ready at the assizes at which the indictment was tried, and it would have been necessary only to add the actual costs of trial. It may be that the learned Judge might have had power to ascertain and insert the amount during the continuance of that commission, but at its termination, at all events, all power to do so ceased—The Queen v. Long (2), Sellwood v. Mount (3).

(1) "And be it enacted, that if on the hearing of any such summons, respecting the repair of any highway, the duty or obligation of such repairs is denied by the surveyor on behalf of the inhabitants of the parish, or by any other party charged therewith, it shall then be lawful for such Justices, and they are hereby required, to direct a bill of indictment to be preferred, and the necessary witnesses in support thereof to be subpoenaed, at the next assizes to be holden in and for the said county, or at the next General Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the county, riding, division, or place, wherein such highway shall be, against the inhabitants of the parish, or the party to be named in such order for suffering and permitting the said highway to be out of repair; and the costs of such prosecution shall be directed by the Judge of assize before whom the said indictment is tried, or by the Justices at such quarter sessions, to be paid out of the rate to be made and levied in pursuance of this act, in the parish in which such highway shall be situate," &c.

(2) 1 Q.B. Rep. 740; s.c. 10 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) M.C. 124.

(3) Ibid. 726; s.c. 10 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) M.C. 121.

Nor does this rule state that any amount of costs has been yet ascertained, as it calls upon the surveyor to pay "the costs of the prosecution," but specifies no amount. The rule is defective also in calling upon the present surveyor to pay, and not the party in office when the indictment was tried; especially as by the rule it is not asked that he shall pay the costs out of the rates, but a personal liability is sought to be imposed.

Kelly and Bramwell, contra.—The question is, whether the Judge, who makes the order for costs, is bound, himself, before he makes it, to ascertain and fix the amount.

The Judge has only power to make an order in the terms of the statute, which does not require him to fix the amount, nor is there any appointed officer to ascertain them, as under the statute 7 Geo. 4. c. 64. s. 22, in cases of felony, or 1 Will. 4. c. 21, in cases of mandamus.

[PATTERSON, J.—In many acts enabling summary conviction, a power to give costs is included, which must be ascertained by the Court who grants them, though no express provision is made in that respect, and the amount must be stated in the conviction.]

In Sellwood v. Mount, the costs in question were under section 90. of the Highway Act, by which the Court is in terms required "to award" costs, as consequent upon a judgment. And again, section 82. of the Poor Law Amendment Act, under which The Queen v. Long was decided, requires the Court "to certify the amount" of the costs. The language of section 95. contains no such express provision, but merely empowers the Judge "to direct" the costs to be paid. Those cases, therefore, have no application. This is not in the nature of a judgment, or any part of a judgment, but only a collateral act by the person presiding at the trial. There is no necessity that the costs should be taxed till the party is called upon to pay—The King v. St. Katharine's Dock Company (4). There the sum was not ascertained.

[PATTERSON, J.—If the learned Judge did all that he had the power to do at the assizes, then there is a remedy by indictment for disobedience of his order—The King v. the Treasurer of Surrey (5).]

(4) 4 B. & Ad. 360.

(5) 4 Chit. Rep. 650.

It may be doubtful whether an indictment could be successfully preferred, as the order to pay is not made upon any person, but only for payment out of the rates. It is also said, that the application should have been made against the surveyor who was in office when the trial took place. But the application is against the present party, because he holds the rates; and it can very rarely happen, that the whole proceedings, from the laying of the information to the verdict, can take place while the same surveyor is in office.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The two clauses of the Highway Act, which have been referred to, certainly impose much trouble and difficulty. A bill was presented and found against the inhabitants of Chipping Barnet, at the Assizes, upon which they were subsequently tried and found guilty. In that state of things, the learned Judge who presided made a general order for the payment of the costs of the prosecution. The question is, whether the defendants were properly called upon to pay those costs, by such general order, under the 95th section.—[His Lordship read part of the section.]—We must hold the meaning of that provision to be, either, that the amount of the costs is to be ascertained by the Judge before he directs them to be paid, in which case the sum would be named, or if the direction is given in general terms, then that amount is to be ascertained in the usual way by the proper officer, and adopted by the Judge. There is a proper officer in the court for such a purpose. The Judge who tries is the person to give the direction, and ascertain the amount, by himself or the officer. In this case, an order was made in general terms only. The amount was not ascertained by the Judge, nor the officer directed to fix it. Then, at the end of two years, this Court is called upon to order the surveyor to pay, not the costs ordered by the Judge who tried the indictment, and then ascertained, but the costs generally, which would still have to be ascertained, if the writ of mandamus should go. We cannot call upon the surveyor to make this payment; nor is the Court in a situation to compel him to obey the law properly put in force against him. If the learned Judge, who tried the case, still has any power to interfere, he must be called upon to exercise it. He has thought that he has not the power, and if that be so, notwithstanding any hardship, the case must fall to the ground; but if the power still remains to him, then, as it is contended upon the part of the prosecutor that this is merely a collateral proceeding, there would seem to be nothing to prevent his exercising such power now. We cannot interfere.

PATTESON, J. — I am also of opinion that we cannot interfere. Even supposing a mandamus was the proper remedy, (which I am by no means clear it is, even if the amount had been ascertained,) we are asked, where the amount has not been ascertained, to direct a writ of mandamus to the surveyor to pay the costs—an indefinite unascertained sum; or else this Court must ascertain the sum, and direct the writ to go for such sum. It cannot be the proper course, that where the sum has not been ascertained, this Court is to be the taxing officer. The statute, in saying that "the costs of such prosecution shall be directed by the Judge of Assize, before whom the indictment is tried," must mean that the amount is to be ascertained by that Judge, either by himself or by his officer, at some time or another. They are to be ascertained under the direction of the Judge who tried. If that is so, we cannot possibly direct this writ to go, in this case at all events, where no amount has been so ascertained.

WILLIAMS, J. — It is clear, that these costs ought to be paid out of the rates; but we cannot in this case enforce their payment by writ of mandamus. It would seem that there has been some omission by the prosecutor, as after the order directing the costs to be paid was given, it does not appear that he made any application to the officer to ascertain and tax them, during the time the commission lasted. If such an application had been made to the officer, and he had refused, perhaps an application for a writ to him might have been as hopeful as the present one. But it also appears a decisive objection, that the writ of mandamus cannot go to pay an unascertained sum. The words "Judge of assize," mentioned in section 95, are only put in distinction to the case where the indictment is tried before the Justices at Quarter Sessions. It may be, that a complete order may yet be made by the learned Judge who tried the indictment; and if so, there would be a remedy by indictment, if such order was disobeyed.

WIGHTMAN, J. — I reluctantly come to the conclusion, that this rule must be discharged, as there is no doubt these costs ought to be paid out of the rates. This conclusion proceeds on the assumption, that if the writ of mandamus issued, it must go for the costs generally, and then if the amount is disputed, I do not see what is next to be done. Some mode, at all events, should have been first adopted to ascertain the true sum that is due. Until that has been done, the party can only be called upon to pay the costs; and the question still remains unanswered—what are they?

Rule discharged.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. THE GRAND

Poor-Rate—Railway.

A railway company, established under the provisions of various acts of parliament, exercised the trade of carriers on their own line, as well as on other lines of railroad connected therewith, and made profits by the fares and freights paid for the conveyance of passengers and goods. They also took tolls, as authorized by the acts of parliament, from other parties exercising the trade of carriers along their own line. Such carrying trade was exercised by such other parties, who provided themselves, independently of the company, with locomotive power, carriages, fuel, &c., and stations; they, like the company, making profits of their trade so carried on by them over the railway, and paying the tolls fixed by the company, under the acts of parliament. A third class of carriers over the railway hired from the company locomotive engines, and the use of stations, &c.; they likewise made profits, and paid the tolls, besides a compensation for the use of the power, stations, &c., provided for them:—Held, that the company were rateable at an amount which a tenant from year to year might reasonably be expected to pay for the railway, &c., exclusive of the stations, (which were rated separately,) assuming him to have the same power of using the railway as the company, and to have the same privileges, i.e. upon the nett annual value of the railway; and not upon an estimate of the gross produce of the land, which the company, if not carriers, or which a lessee of the tolls, rates and duties, of which account was directed to be kept by the acts of parliament, would in fact have received as lessee, howsoever or by whomsoever the carrying business of the railway was conducted.

Held, also, that the rateable value of such occupation was properly calculated, by deducting from the gross receipts of the company, first, a sum per cent. for interest of the capital actually invested by them in moveable carrying stock; secondly, for tenant's profits and risks; thirdly, for depreciation of stock; fourthly, for working expenses; fifthly, for the rent of stations; sixthly, a mileage for renewing and reproducing.

Held, also, that the question of amount was for the Sessions.

Held, lastly, that no deduction ought to be made in respect of good-will.

By a rate made for the relief of the poor of the parish of Seighford, in the county of Stafford, on the 6th of August 1843, the Grand Junction Railway Company were rated at the sum of 1,050*l.*, in respect of so much of the said railway as passed through the said parish and land adjoining.

Upon appeal against the said rate, the Quarter Sessions confirmed it, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following

CASE.

The appellants were incorporated, and the Grand Junction Railway formed, by and under an act, 3 Will. 4. c. xxxiv. (local, personal, and public), altered, amended, and extended by other acts of parliament, namely, 4 Will. 4. c. iv, 5 Will. 4. c. viii, 5 Will. 4. c. ix, 1 & 2 Vict. c. lix, and 3 Vict. c. xlix, which are to be taken to be part of this case.

Under these several acts, not only has the line of railway, as originally contemplated (from Warrington to Birmingham), been constructed and opened for public use, but other railways, made by other parties, from Warrington to Newton, and from Crewe to Chester, and long since opened, have been vested in and become the property of the appellants; and these, by the provisions of the said acts, or some of them, now form part of the Grand Junction Railway; and the whole is managed, as to accounts and otherwise, as one entire business.

Over all these railways, and also over the Liverpool and Manchester Railway, between Newton and Liverpool in the one direction, and Newton and Manchester in the other, the appellants themselves exercise the right of being carriers on their own account of passengers and goods, providing for themselves stations or stopping-places, locomotive power, carriages, coke, and watering-places, and all other things necessary and convenient for the conveyance of passengers and goods, and charging for such conveyance reasonable fares and freights, in addition (as regards the said Grand Junction Railway) to the tolls or tonnages which they are authorized by the said acts to take, and by this carrying trade, as well as by the toll, the appellants make profits.

Other parties also exercise the right of being carriers over various parts of the Grand Junction Railway, and, amongst others, over that part which is in the respondent parish, providing for themselves, without the consent or concurrence of the appellants, and independently of them, (subject, however, to the controul of the appellants, under the said acts of parliament, and also subject to the provisions of the several acts of parliament for the regulation of railways,) locomotive power, carriages, coke and watering places, and all other things necessary for conveyance of passengers and goods, and separate stations and stopping-places adjoining the railway, and the needful branches into or communications with the same; and they, like the appellants, make profits of their trade so carried on by them over the railway, and they pay to the appellants the tolls or tonnages duly fixed by the appellants, pursuant to the said acts, or some of them, and being the same tolls as form the basis of the calculations hereinafter mentioned as contended for by them, the appellants.

A third class of carriers over the Grand Junction Railway, hire from the Grand Junction Railway Company locomotive engines, and the use of stations, &c., but find their own carriages; and they likewise make profits over the railway. These also pay to the appellants the said tolls or tonnages, besides a compensation for the use of the power, stations, and the other accommodations provided for them.

The total length of so much of the Grand Junction Railway as lies between Birmingham and Newton is 84 miles, and from Crewe to Chester 21 miles, making together 105 miles; and the distance (along the Liverpool and Manchester Railway) from Newton to Liverpool is 15 miles, and from Newton to Manchester 16 miles; the length of railway within the respondent parish is 1 mile, and there is no station, stopping-place, or property of the appellants, other than the railway itself, in the said parish.

The appellants have duly caused toll boards or lists to be made and published, as required by sections 165. and 166. of the statute first above-mentioned. The appellants have also duly kept the accounts of tolls, as required by sections 19. and 20. of 1 & 2 Vict. c. lix, and section 27. of 3 Vict. c. xlix; and free access has been afforded to them, as required by those acts. The fares and charges for the conveyance of passengers, goods, parcels, &c., by the appellants as carriers, are regulated by the number of miles through which they are carried, as well as by weight, bulk, value, &c., and various other circumstances, in like manner as the fares and charges of other carriers. The gross sum received by the appellants as tolls, rates, or duties, including both what they receive from other companies of persons using the railway as carriers, and also the gross sum of the tolls, rates, or duties (of which an account is also kept as aforesaid), calculated upon all the passengers, goods, &c., carried by them for their own profit (added together), amount actually to the sum of 1,500*l.*, in respect of so much of the railway as lies in the respondent parish, for the current year of rating. And this is the gross produce of the land which the appellants, if not carriers, or which a lessee of the tolls, rates and duties would in fact have received as lessee, howsoever or by whomsoever the carrying business of the railway was conducted; and the appellants contended, that this sum of 1,500*l.*, so found, ought to form the basis of any rate upon them in respect of their rateable property in the respondent parish. The gross yearly receipts of the company, including as well the tolls actually received by them as the tolls, fares, freights, and profits of every kind derived by them as carriers upon and owners of the Grand Junction Railway and its appurtenances, in all the parishes between Birmingham and Newton, and Crewe and Chester (excluding their receipts over the Liverpool and Manchester, and other railways which do not belong to them, but for passing over which as carriers they pay toll in the same way as the independent carriers over the Grand Junction Railway), and including also the profits of their stock in trade and personal property used by them as carriers in connexion with and upon the entire Grand Junction Railway, and their working over and along it; and also the rents, profits, and value of all their stations and other conveniences at and between Birmingham and Newton, and Chester and Crewe, are agreed, for the purposes of this case, to amount to the sum of 440,366*l.* for the current year of rating, and adopting the principle of a mileage division thereof, that is to say, dividing the same by 105, (being the total length of the Grand Junction Railway), the amount is 4,193*l.* (and a fraction), in respect of so much thereof as lies in the respondent parish; and it is, for the purpose of the present case, admitted that that mileage principle of division is fair and equal as respects the respondent parish.

It was admitted and agreed (subject to the opinion of the Court as to the propriety and principle of each item of deduction), that if the 1,500*l.* (i. e. amount of tolls) is to be adopted as the basis of calculation, the full nett annual value of the appellants' rateable property within the respondent parish will be 712*l.* 10*s.*, being the 1,500*l.* minus the following deductions (which the Court of Quarter Sessions find to be reasonable in fact), viz. first, 20*l.* per cent. thereof, as for the tenants' profits and subsistence, regard being had in this case to the extensive amount of responsibility, risk, &c.; secondly, 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent. for collection of the tolls; thirdly, 350*l.* per mile for the maintenance of the railway, with the works and fences, and for gate-keepers, and also for engineering and police (as to so much of the two latter items as are fairly chargeable on the proprietors of the railway as such); fourthly, 70*l.* per mile for poor-rates, highway-rates, church-rates, and tithe commutation rent-charge; and fifthly, 30*l.* per mile as for renewing or reproducing those portions of the subject-matter of the rate which are of a perishable nature (such as rails, chairs, and sleepers, &c.), when rendered necessary by accident or decay.

The parish officers adopted, and the Court of Quarter Sessions sanctioned by their judgment, a different mode of arriving at the nett annual rateable value of the property of the appellants in the parish. They ascertained the gross yearly receipts of the company throughout the railway as above stated, viz. the sum of 440,366*l.*, and then made therefrom the following deductions (the propriety, principle, and completeness of such deductions, as well as the propriety and principle of the respondents' mode of arriving at the nett annual rateable value of the rateable property of the appellants in the parish, being referred to the opinion of this Court, and the Court of Quarter Sessions finding such deductions to be reasonable in fact): viz. 5*l.* per cent. for interest on 255,000*l.*, being the capital necessary for and actually invested by the appellants in the purchase of engines, carriages, and all the other moveable stock necessary for the business of the carriers, as conducted by them in manner aforesaid; secondly, 20*l.* per cent. on the same sum for the tenants' profits, and the fair profits of such a trade carried on by means of so large a capital and with such large risks; thirdly, 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the said last-mentioned sum, as the fair annual amount of the depreciation of such stock, considered to be in the hands of a tenant from year to year, beyond all needful and usual annual repairs and expenses; fourthly, 198,962*l.* per annum, being the appellants' reasonable annual actual cost of conducting their business during the same year, in which their earnings as aforesaid amounted to 4,190*l.* per mile, in Seighford, viz. (in the coaching department), wages of guards, conductors, porters, station-keepers, clerks, and policemen, repairs of carriages, trucks, and horse-boxes, horsing parcel-carts, oil, grease, &c. for carriages, and duty on passengers, &c., and (in the merchandise department) salaries and wages of agents, clerks, porters, &c., repairs of waggons and carriages for live stock, and expenses (in both departments), and generally locomotive power, enginemen's and firemen's wages, engineering, repairing, and cost of materials, including coke, maintenance of way, repairs of stations and buildings, office and general expenses, insurance and advertising, charge of direction, compensation account, rates and taxes, law expenses, and general petty disbursements attendant on the several businesses of railway owners and of railway carriers; fifthly, as the stations, offices, stores, and buildings, and repairing works and premises throughout the railway have been and are separately rated in the several parishes in which they are situated, although necessarily used and occupied for the purposes of and in connexion with it, and with the conduct of the traffic upon it), the respondents further deducted the fair annual value thereof, viz. 9,150*l.*; and sixthly, 30*l.* per mile, as for renewing or reproducing rails, chairs, sleepers, &c., as before.

The balance, amounting to the nett sum of 133,479*l.* was taken to be the nett annual value of the whole railway, independently of the stations and other buildings, &c. rated separately. And the Sessions found, as an inference from the above facts, that the railway and other corporeal hereditaments of the company in connexion with the railway, might reasonably be expected to let to a tenant from year to year, at the last-mentioned sum of 133,479*l.*, exclusive of the rent of the stations and other buildings rated separately, such tenant being assumed to have the power of using the railway and all its appurtenances, now the property of the company, under the same circumstances as the company, and with no other privileges and advantages than the company now possess.

The principle of mileage being agreed upon by both parties as fair, for the purposes of this rate, both as applied to the expenses and deductions, as well as receipts, the nett annual rateable value of so much of the railway as lies in the respondent parish is to be taken at 1,050*l.*, at least supposing the principle of rating adopted by the parish officers in this case, to be just and correct.

Of the total nett receipts of the company only about 30,000*l.* per annum are received in the shape of tolls from other parties using the railway on their own account. All the other rateable property in the respondent parish is rated upon an estimate of the nett annual value thereof, within the meaning of the Parochial Assessment Act, and without directly taking into account any receipts, expenses, or allowances, having reference to the amount of actual profits made thereon.

The appellants have not any stations or buildings in the respondent parish.

In various parishes along the line of railway the parties who (as before mentioned) use the railway as carriers, and have stations, with buildings, &c., with branches into the railway, and other conveniences connected with the railway, are not rated (in the particular parishes or elsewhere) upon or in respect of or with any reference to the Grand Junction Railway, but solely for their stations. The appellants derive no pecuniary profit whatever from their land in the respondent parish, except from the tonnages and tolls, and from their fares and other receipts, hereinbefore mentioned, and their trade as carriers, in common with other carriers over the same (if, indeed, these latter profits are to be considered as profits arising from the land, which the appellants contend they are not).

The appellants contend, that, even assuming the rate to be founded on a just principle and proper basis, the deductions allowed by the respondents do not include all the items necessary to bring out the nett annual value, that is to say, the rent at which, what the respondents contend is the appellants' rateable property, might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, amongst which omitted deductions, the appellants instance, by way of example, an annual allowance for good-will.

which gives the rateable value of the whole line of the railway, and upon which calculation it was admitted, that, adopting a mileage division, 1,050l. represented the rateable value of so much of the line as passed through Seighford parish.

The Court of Quarter Sessions adopted the principle of rating and the deductions contended for by the respondents, on furnishing the nett annual value of the appellants' rateable property, pursuant to the Parochial Assessment Act, and confirmed the rate accordingly; but, on the application of the appellants, granted a CASE for the opinion of the Court on the several questions hereinbefore raised and stated; the Court to have the power of amending or quashing or otherwise dealing with this rate as they might deem right.

And now (Nov. 15)

Kelly and Smirke were heard in support of the order of Sessions.—This case is not distinguishable in principle from The Queen v. the London and South Western Railway Company (1). The principle of rating there established is, that the rateable value is that sum which a tenant would pay to a landlord for the land, with all its advantages. It is true that in the case of the South Western Railway, it was found that no parties but the company exercised the trade of carriers on the railway; and it was stated in the judgment of the Court that it was not probable that those other parties would become such carriers; in other words, that any sums would be received in the shape of tolls. Such a state of facts, however, is distinctly found to exist in the present case. That, however, makes no difference in the principle upon which this rate is enforced; and, at all events, the only question that can be now raised must be raised on this 30,000*l.*, for there is no pretence for saying that any mode of rating which might be adopted with reference to that portion of the receipts would draw after it the mode of rating the whole. The Sessions, have, in fact, proceeded upon the principle laid down in the Southampton Railway case, and have found in express terms that a tenant would give 133,479*l.* for the railway, &c. (exclusive of the rent of the stations and other buildings, which are the subject of a distinct and separate rate). If the advantages derived from the stations, clerks, &c., and the business carried on by the company, were not taken into account, what would the rate be reduced to? The mere railway would be utterly valueless. The land then must either be valued as land to be used for agricultural purposes, or as land rendered valuable by the business attached to it, and by what is built and constructed on it. In the case of a house which is let for a particular purpose, and thereby become valuable, if the value were ascertained, there would be no dispute about the principle on which the rate should be assessed: why should there be any speculation as to value in this case, where it is distinctly found what the property would let for? It cannot be contended, that there is any difference in principle between the two cases; the only difficulty that exists is in its application, in consequence of the novelty of the institution of railroads. But it is contended, that a new state of facts has arisen in this case, and that the railroad is used as a high road by rival carriers, and that the company is in the receipt of tolls, on which, alone, it ought to be rated. The amount, however, of tolls is small in proportion to what the appellants earn by the beneficial occupation, and therefore rateable value, of the line. Competition, in the sense in which that term is used, with respect to a railroad or even a canal, cannot be said to exist. The company have their own stations, which must always give them the command of the railroad; the company likewise have peculiar privileges in regard to the conveyance of the mails under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 98, and the carriage of parcels under 500 lb. weight, by the local acts. Can it be contended that the advantages attendant on the whole railway establishment would not enhance the rent of the land?—The King v. the Liverpool Exchange (2), The King v. St. Nicholas, Gloucester (3), The King v. Bradford (4). That is the whole question. The company specify no means of estimating their actual profits: they complain that further deductions ought to have been made, but only specify one, namely, an allowance in respect of good-will. But there is no mode of estimating good-will, when no selling or letting is, in fact, contemplated; such a claim is inconsistent with the state of facts, and unintelligible; the tenancy is only assumed, with a view of ascertaining the value of the occupation.

Sir W. W. Follett (Solicitor General), contra.—The appellants admit that they are to be rated according to the value of the land, improved as it is by the construction of the railway; such value to be ascertained by what a tenant would give. The question is, what is such increased value, in this particular case? In the case of The Queen v. the London and South Western Railway Company, the Court expressed no intention of laying down a general rule, but confined their judgment to the particular case (p. 574). Again (in p. 579), it is observed, that “the case of a lessee, in exclusive perception of the tolls on a railway, practically open to rival carriers, is very different, in fact, from the case before us, and one not likely to occur.” In this particular case, however, the railway is opened to, and used by, the public, as carriers, on payment of tolls. Such user is recognized by the various clauses of the local acts, as well as by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, the general act for the regulation of railways. It is also stated in the case, that the appellants are carriers on their own account on other lines, in addition to their own, and on such other lines they have their own distinct establishments, stations, &c. There are, then, competing and rival carriers on the same line. Is the whole burden of the rate to be imposed upon one of them alone? It is true that the tolls are granted in consideration of the outlay in making the railway, &c. The toll is incident to the occupation of the railway, and, therefore, it may be said to increase its value, and is rateable; but what interest could the company demise to a tenant? They might demise the railway itself and the tolls, but the privilege of using the railway, as carriers, they could not demise, as the public has already that right under the act of parliament. The tolls are rateable on the same principle as the steelyard in The King v. St. Nicholas, Gloucester, or the canteen in The King v. Bradford, as being an incident to the property, rendering it valuable. The question is, in all cases, as to the improvement in the value of the land: what distinction can be drawn as to rateability between railroads and canals? Can it be said, that parties who set up a carrying trade are, in any case, to be rated in respect of profits they make as carriers? Certainly not, according to the judgment of Bayley, J. in The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater (5). It is true, that if the Court is not at liberty to reconsider the case of the South Western Railway, this part of the argument must be governed by it. Much stress was, however, laid in that case on the fact of the public not being able to use the railway as carriers, which, in this case, it is found they do. The case of The King v. the Liverpool Exchange, and other similar cases, were decided on the ground, that the act of parliament gave certain privileges which added to the value of the occupation; but here the result of the proposed rating will be to rate the profits of the carrying trade, which is not incident to the land or the occupation of it.

The case, by the direction of the Court, was set down for argument on a concilium; and was argued on a subsequent day, in Hilary term, (January 17) by

M. D. Hill, for the appellants.—The effect of the various acts of parliament, particularly 3 & 4 Vict. c. 97, is, to make a railroad a statutory highway, on which it is open to any one to establish a carrying trade. The principle of The Queen v. the London and South Western Railway Company need not be questioned, nor its application. The respondents rely on cases of exclusive occupation, such as The King v. Bradford. The thing to be determined is, what is the produce of the land? and that is to be ascertained by what he will receive who takes a demise of it. The appellants contend, that the toll measures the gross produce of the land, and that is to be taken as the foundation of the rate.

Kelly, contra.—The Court will affirm the decision in The Queen v. the London and South Western Railway Company, and this rate: there is no dispute about the principle that is laid down by the statute (6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 96. s. 1). What would a tenant give, by way of annual rent, he being put in the situation of the company? No real distinction is attempted to be made between that case and this. The provisions of the acts regulating both companies are the same. When the rate in the Southampton Railway case was made, the railway was altogether in the hands of the company, and they were the only carriers upon it. Does it make any difference that the company are carriers, and likewise receive fixed tolls from other persons who also carry on the line? In substance, the appellants now say, that the rate is to be calculated upon the tolls received, supposing the trade to be carried on entirely by other persons paying rates. The respondents, on the other hand, contend that an imaginary state of things must not be looked to, but the actual receipts. What are they in that case? It is found that the company take 30,000*l.* in the shape of tolls, and upwards of 400,000*l.* as carriers. The entire sum, therefore, must be the foundation of the rate. This is in accordance both with The Queen v. the London and South Western Railway Company, and The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater. In this view the profits of trade have not been rated at all. With regard to goodwill, that cannot be taken as matter of deduction, but would be considered in estimating the amount which a tenant could afford to give.

Hill, in reply.—In The King v. the Trustees of the Duke of Bridgewater, the Court laid down the true principle, "The profits of carrying goods is the profits of their trade; the tonnage is the profit arising from the land occupied; that is an intelligible principle, and not to be departed from." He also referred to The King v. Adames (7).

Curr. adv. vult.

The judgment of the Court was now (May 10th) delivered by—

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This was an appeal against a poor-rate, and was argued in Michaelmas term last, and again, on a concilium in Hilary term, and has been heard by all the members of the Court. Independently of the several questions of detail, which we will consider hereafter, the main arguments of the appellants were directed to shew that this case is distinguishable from the case of The Queen v. the London and South Western Railway, upon points which went to the principle of the judgment in that case, while the respondents contended that the two cases are in principle the same, and that that judgment must govern the Court in this case. It is necessary, therefore, in the first place, to compare the two cases: if they shall be found to be different in the material circumstances, the principles of that decision may lead to a contrary one in this case; at all events, on that supposition, that decision will not bind in the present case. If they shall be found to be substantially the same, it may be necessary to consider whether our own reflections, or anything urged in the argument, should induce the Court to depart from their former decision. In that case, the facts found (and it must never be forgotten that the propriety of a poor-rate can only be determined with reference to the facts found to be actually existing when it was made) were, that the company were in the sole and exclusive occupation of the railway warehouses, stations, and landing-places, and being so, were solely and exclusively carrying on a large business as carriers thereon; that although their act had, under certain limitations, made the railway a highway for all the liege subjects, and gave them a right to use it as such, either as carriers or for individual travelling, and in such cases provided for the payment of tolls to the company; yet that, in fact, no one having availed himself of this right, nor, as we think, having the power of doing so conveniently or effectually—no tolls were in fact earned. To this then existing state of facts we applied the established principle of rating, that the rate is to be upon the occupier in respect of the beneficial nature of his occupation; in estimating which, as to the amount, or to put it in other words, in ascertaining how much annual rent such an occupation may be expected to command, parish officers are to consider, not drily and only what would legally pass by the demise of it, but all the existing circumstances, whether permanent or temporary, wherever situated, however arising or secured, which would reasonably influence the parties to the negotiation for the tenancy as to the amount of the rent. We, therefore, thought it impossible in that case to separate the three or four miles of the railway within the respondent parish from the whole line running through many other parishes, or that whole line from the warehouses, stations, and landing-places, or those again from the consideration of the peculiar conveniences which the tenant would have for carrying on as occupier a lucrative business, if not the effective monopoly which the provisions of the act appear to give to the occupier for carrying on such a trade. What, under the act, was possible by law, what, in point of fact, might in future be, we thought immaterial as to the principle, although very fit to be taken into account when making the calculation as to the quantum. But in principle, the parish officers were to look at the actual state and value of the occupation. In the case now under consideration there are some facts entirely different from those which we have just mentioned; the case finds that other parties, as well as the appellants, exercise the right of being carriers over various parts of the railway, including therein that part of it which is within the respondent parish, providing for themselves, independent of the company, (subject, however, to its controul, under the acts of parliament) carriages and all things necessary and convenient for the conveyance of passengers and goods, separate stations, and independent branches into, and communications with the railway. These make profits of their carrying trade, as do the appellants, and pay them the tolls which they have fixed under the powers given them by their acts; besides these, another class of carriers hire from the appellants engines, and use the landing-places, &c., but find their own carriages; these also make profit of their carrying trade on the railway, and pay to the appellants both toll and a compensation for the use of the engines, stations, and other accommodations provided for them; and as the appellants receive tolls from these persons in respect of the goods and passengers conveyed by them on the railway, so they keep an account, as directed by their act, of the toll, which would be produced by them, for the conveyance of goods and passengers, not on their own account. This, added to the compensation above mentioned, forms the total produce of the whole land, which the company, if not a carrier, or a lessee of the railway, carrying on no trade upon it, would receive as the aggregate of the line, and is that upon which, alone, after due deductions, the company contend, the rate ought to be imposed. We understand them, although it is not precisely so stated, to admit the principle of considering the whole line as entire, and to arrive at the exact sum at which they contend the rate in the respondent parish should be fixed by a mileage division of the whole line—a principle very convenient in itself, and rightly adopted by consent. It is unnecessary, after this statement, to point out the difference, in fact, between the two cases; but we cannot see how this difference bears upon the principle on which the rate is to be imposed, or which governed the Court in the former decision, which proceeded entirely on the existing state of the facts. Each of the two companies must be rated in respect of the occupation of the land: one of them derives no benefit from that occupation, except by carrying goods and passengers, and the division of that profit into tolls and fares we think merely nominal; the other, in addition to this mode of profit, by occupying, also derives a profit from allowing others to carry goods and passengers on the line also, and this latter profit is properly called tolls; still in both cases the inquiry must be the same—what is the value of the occupation, from whatever source derived? In neither, can the profits of trade, as such, be brought into the rate, but if the ability to carry on a gainful trade on land adds to the value of the land, that value cannot be excluded, on the ground that it is referable to the trade. Suppose a house occupied by a private family to-day, which, having greater advantages of situation for the purpose of trade, should be turned into a shop to-morrow, and, in consequence, let for double or treble the former rent, would not the rate be properly increased in proportion? Could it be objected, that to do so is to rate the profits of trade? Again, suppose the occupier were to let out different rooms to other persons carrying on the same trade as himself: and this mode of occupying was said to increase the value of the house to let, would this at all vary the principle on which he was rated, although it would increase the quantum? Lastly, suppose, instead of this species of under-letting being at the option of the occupier, all persons using the same trade had the right by some statute, under certain restrictions, to carry it on in the different rooms of the same house, paying a large compensation to the occupier, would not the principle of the rate be still the same? would it be material to inquire how the occupation became more valuable, except for the purpose of making greater or less deductions, which the nature of the occupation would make just? We may all remember when the large premises in Soho Square, now used as a bazaar, were occupied as a private residence. The present mode of occupation, no doubt, increases the rent; but whether one man, being the tenant alone, carried on the various trades now exercised there, or sold goods himself at some of the stands and let out others, and so derived his profit in part directly from trade, in part from the rent paid him by the traders, or let out all the stands, and so earned no profit but from the rents paid him by the traders, the result would be, in either case, exactly the same; the overseers could only inquire what was the fair rateable value of the thing so occupied; nor, as we have said before, could the inquiry be at all affected if the occupier of the bazaar held it under some statutable licence which compelled him to let his stands to all persons paying certain rents, and submitting to certain regulations. But it is said, that in the case supposed, all is referable to the occupation under the supposed lease that conveys the exclusive dominion, and thence flow naturally the means of making profits. We have, in truth, already given the answer to this; but it will be plainer if we observe, that there is a fallacy in confounding that which the lease conveys the legal title to, with that which it gives the lessee the means of doing or obtaining. No two things can be more distinguishable; and it is the latter which regulates the rent the tenant will give, and not the former. Suppose two estates of equal size and in all respects of equal fertility, but one surrounded by excellent roads, a canal near to it, and a large market, and the other without these advantages; of course the rent and rateable value of the one would be larger than the other; yet a tenant would take no more by the lease of one than he would by the other: the lease would give him no legal title, which he had not before, to use the roads, canal, or market. Or suppose a more peculiar case:—A, the owner and occupier of Blackacre, and having the command of a stream of water which he can turn over Whiteacre, and on that account desires to rent it: to him it will be more valuable than to any other occupier, because he fertilizes at very little expense; he will, therefore, give a larger rent than any other person; yet, by the lease, he would take no more than any other person, although he ought undoubtedly to pay a higher rate. Apply the principle of this case to the railway of the appellants, and it is quite true that if they were to let it to a tenant, the lease would convey the land and railway only, and give a title to the tolls only; but the lessee would undoubtedly consider the facilities and advantages which the occupation as tenant would afford him for carrying on a lucrative trade as a carrier; and in whatever proportion that consideration would increase his rent, in the same, after due allowance, would his rate be raised also. The two propositions are equally true, that the rate is not to be imposed in respect of the profits of trade, and that it is to be imposed in respect of the value of the occupation; and two propositions that are true, and applicable to the same subject-matter, cannot be inconsistent; and we think the respondents in the present case, by the scheme they proposed, have shewn that they are not so. The gross yearly receipts of the company, as occupiers of and carriers on the railway, must include the proper subject-matter of the rate; they have therefore taken a sum agreed to represent them as the first point to start from; they then assume an amount of capital employed in the trade, and deduct from the former sum 5*l.* per cent. on the latter for the interest of this capital, and 20*l.* per cent. for the profits which ought to be made upon it; thirdly, for the depreciation of stock beyond the usual repairs and expenses; fourthly, they deduct from the gross receipts the annual cost of conducting the trade; fifthly, they deduct the annual value of all the lands occupied by stations, &c.; and, sixthly, a sum per mile for the reproduction of rails, chairs, sleepers, &c. These deductions, taken together, seem to us to include whatever is properly referable to the trade, as distinguished from the increased value which that trade gives to the land. We do not now speak of the amounts allowed under each item, and we are not competent to give any opinion on this point, which is properly for the Sessions; but if these are the proper heads of deduction, then the residue must represent the value of the occupation; and if so, this alone is brought into the rate, and the profits of the trade are excluded. Accordingly the Sessions have found, as an inference from the facts, that the residue is the sum which a tenant from year to year might reasonably be expected to give for the railway and corporeal hereditaments now occupied by the company in connexion with the railway, exclusive of the stations and other buildings, (which are rated separately,) such tenant being assumed to have the same and no other power of using the railway—the same and no other advantages and privileges than the company now possess. If the deductions exhaust that portion of receipts referable to trade, the inference of the Sessions is fair. If the advantages and privileges which the company possess are attributable to their occupation, and would pass with it, their assumption is well founded, and we agree with them in both. The appellants, however, contend, that even if the principle of the rate be fair, some reasonable deductions are omitted. We have used the sufficiency of the deductions made as a mode of trying the principle, but the objection of the appellants now to be considered is one of detail. The only instance which they specify and rely upon, is, that an allowance ought to be and is not made for good-will. We presume by this it is meant, that a person bargaining with the company to become their yearly tenant of the railroad, in the expectation of succeeding to their trade, as a probable consequence of succeeding to their occupation, would properly be called upon to pay them something for the good-will of that trade, and that this would be in the nature of an out-going and deduction from the profit. This objection appears capable of two answers: the first and the decisive one is, that the purchase of good-will implies that the trade is sold; that the company are to be bound to surrender their trade to the lessee, and no longer to be carriers on the line; but the calculation of the Sessions proceeds on no such supposition. All those special advantages, indeed, for carrying it on, which the occupation gives them, whatever they may be, they must necessarily surrender; but the moment they have leased the railway, they would become part of the public, and have the right of carrying on their trade, retaining all the good-will, with all those advantages which were carefully reserved to the public. Secondly, although the supposition is, that a tenancy is to be made, yet what the incidents of the tenancy must be, as to the actual terms of allowance, must be determined for the purpose of fixing the amount of the rate by the actual state of things; for this supposition of a tenancy is only a mode of ascertaining the existing value of the occupation to the existing occupier. Now, here, there is no tenancy in fact—no good-will is, in fact, paid for; and therefore no deduction ought, in fact, to be made on account of its price.

Again, it is contended, that the existing facts of this case shew the unreasonableness of the rate. The carrying trade of the company goes beyond their own line upon the railway of other sets of proprietors; but the receipts arising from this have been excluded from the rate: this, it is said, is inconsistent. How can the profit which the same engine earns by drawing goods over one mile be of a different character from that it would earn in the same employment over the next mile? So far from there being any inconsistency in this, it is necessarily involved in the principle on which the rate rests. That the distinction can be made, and has been made, is no slight proof of the soundness of that principle. The moment the engine leaves the railway of the company, what it earns ceases to have any connexion with their occupation of the railway. It may, and of course does, increase the value of the occupation of that other line in which it then works; and will, of course, in the shape of toll, proportionately increase the rate which the occupier will pay; but if it were allowed to swell the charge on the company, it could only do so in respect of the profits of the trade; and this our principle excludes. But it is said, lastly, that this principle works injustice between the company and the other corporations and individuals who carry upon the line; their engines and their trade, it is said, pay nothing to the poor-rate, nor their fares, and they pay indirectly only in respect of their tolls, which may be supposed to be calculated so as to bear their own rates; whereas the company pay both on their tolls and on their fares. Colour is given to this objection from the fact which might seem to explain it, that the company fill two characters, the other party one only; but the proper answer is a denial of the fact: the company do not pay directly or indirectly on their fares; they pay it only on the increased value of their occupation of the land, occasioned by whatever circumstances. If the trader should underlet to a lodger a room in his house, in which he drives the most profitable trade imaginable, such lodger would pay no poor-rate at all; but as the trader would proportion the rent at which he lets the lodging to the advantages which such lodger derives from them, the total rent which a trader would pay, and the rate which could be imposed on it, would be proportionably increased. But could he complain of any injustice, or say that he carried on his own trade in the rest of the house to disadvantage, because in his rate the value which the trade so carried on in the residue gave to the occupation, was also taken into account in fixing the quantum of the rate? Yet these parties who carry on a trade on the company's line are, in effect, but in the nature of lodgers, or parties enjoying a profitable easement on the line, and, by the consideration they pay, increase its general value.

In the examination which this case has compelled us to make, we have been necessarily led into a re-consideration of the principles on which the decision in the case of the South Western Railway Company proceeded: that decision was not directly impugned, but the distinction of facts relied on has appeared to us, on examination, so unsubstantial that it was necessary, in order to a decision against this rate, to examine the principles on which that was upheld; and in a matter of such vast importance, and such apparent novelty—where, too, the decision of this Court cannot be reviewed in a court of error—we were not unwilling again to examine the question. Upon the whole, we are satisfied with the decision of the Sessions; it appeared to us founded upon a just application of established principles, and in accordance with many decided cases, and conflicting with none.

Our judgment, therefore, will be for the respondents.

1844. } Ex parte THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.
May 7. }

Criminal Information—Magistrate, Words spoken of.

The Court refused to grant a rule for a criminal information for words spoken of a Magistrate, charging him with oppression in his office; they not being spoken at the time he was acting in his office, and not therefore amounting to an immediate obstruction of the administration of justice.

Thesiger (Solicitor General) applied to the Court on behalf of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, for leave to file a criminal information against Charles Humfrey, Esq.

It appeared from the affidavits upon which the motion was made, that in consequence of an approaching election for the borough of Woodstock, Mr. Humfrey had been invited to offer himself to the electors, as a candidate in opposition to the Marquis of Blandford, the son of the Duke of Marlborough. A meeting was held in the town hall upon the 22nd of April 1844, at which the Marquis and Mr. Humfrey were present, who were respectively proposed and seconded as the candidates, and addressed the persons assembled in the town hall. The affidavits then set out Mr. Humfrey's speech, upon which this application was founded, which, after stating that the borough had been shamefully neglected, the tenantry oppressed, the poor utterly forgotten, and the sick and destitute unrelieved, while the Duke of Marlborough had been enjoying all the honour of his princely rank, and all the wealth of his high station, without doing the slightest good to a borough of which he claimed to be the patron, and after other statements relating to turning a tenant out of his farm, and the service of notices to quit upon 140 cottagers, proceeded thus:—"I shall now tell you how a poor man has been treated. There is a man named Harris, aye, that is his name, which, if the duke should hear of on his dying bed, and is not haunted by the spectre of that man, his heart must be even harder than it is represented to be. This Harris was a respectable man, but not rich; he held a cottage under the duke, and kept a horse. One day he took this horse to water at a pit, to which he certainly had no legal right to go, and Timothy Slingo, the Duke's hayward, passing by, took up the horse to put it into the pound. Harris touched the horse with his whip, and it broke from the hayward's custody, and naturally enough ran back to his own stable. Harris was summoned for rescuing the horse, and committing breach of pound. He was fined 1s. and the costs, which amounted to 19s. 6d. This was more than he could pay, and he went to gaol. When he was in gaol his creditors came upon him; his property was seized, and sold under an execution; he became a ruined man, and he is now at work upon the roads (great tumult and a cry of 'tis true'). Yes, it is true, but I have not told you all—(Harris was here raised above the heads of the crowd). Yes; that is the man. The duke might tremble to see him. Two Magistrates, before whom he was first brought, refused to convict him, because they considered that the hayward had somewhat exceeded his duty. He was then brought before the duke, a fit judge in his own cause; and sitting on his own dog-kennel, with a glass of ale in his hand, the Duke of Marlborough himself convicted Harris, and sent him to gaol. I ask, will the Marquis of Blandford undertake that the man shall be re-instated, and restored to his former position; have his cottage, his furniture given back to him? Ah, gentlemen, I fear that nothing can make Harris what he was before he became the victim of the shilling fine, and the 19s. 6d. costs." The speech also contained several other charges against the duke; one, of having turned a tenant out of a farm, who had lent money to the duke; another of having had a man summoned and fined 3d. for picking up part of a deer's horn in the park at Blenheim; another for having had a man summoned and fined a farthing for drawing a garden-chair upon the grass, instead of upon the road in Blenheim Park: but as the case principally relied upon in favour of the rule, and that upon which the judgment proceeded, was that of Harris, it is not necessary to state the others more fully.

With regard to the case of Harris, the affidavit of the duke (who was a Justice of the Peace for the county of Oxford, and Lord Lieutenant of the county,) denied that in 1841, the time referred to, Harris held any cottage under the duke, but stated that in 1842, ten months after the conviction for pound-breach referred to, Harris had applied to an agent of the duke, to become, and had become tenant to the duke of an allotment of land. It also deposed that Slingo was not the duke's hayward, nor in any way his servant or appointed by him, but was appointed by the surveyor of the highways. It then stated, that on the 2nd of June 1841, in consequence of an agricultural meeting being about to be held in Blenheim Park, it was appointed, for convenience, that the petty sessions should be holden upon that day at a farm in the park called the Kennel Farm, instead of at the usual place in Woodstock; that the case of Harris, was charged with releasing a horse when seized by the hayward, was appointed, amongst others, to be heard there, (but without deponent's previous knowledge, or his being aware that any complaint or information had been laid against Harris); that the petty sessions were holden accordingly in the parlour at the farm, and not elsewhere, at which the duke and two other Magistrates attended; that no two other Magistrates had previously inquired into the case, and refused to convict; that the case was heard, and upon the evidence the three Justices felt bound to convict, when Harris was convicted in 2s. 6d. fine and 12s. 6d. costs, but that, at the suggestion of the duke, the fine had been reduced to 1s., and that Harris was informed that a fortnight would be given him to pay the money, when, if it was not paid, he would be committed. The affidavit then stated, that the duke had endeavoured to discharge his duty on the occasion with strict impartiality, and that the conviction was the judgment of the three Magistrates. It denied that there was any ale; that the duke was a judge in his own cause; that he sat on his own dog-kennel, or that there was any kennel at all within a mile of the place. It further appeared, that on the 16th of June, at a petty sessions, the fine and costs not having been paid, a warrant was in the ordinary course presented to and signed by the duke and one of the two other Magistrates, for the commitment of Harris to the house of correction for fourteen days, unless 1s. and the costs were sooner paid. It then denied all vindictive feeling against Harris. There were also answers given to the other charges.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This is an application to the Court to exercise its extraordinary jurisdiction, by granting leave to file a criminal information. The words spoken of the Duke of Marlborough, which formed the subject of the present complaint, undoubtedly conveyed grievous imputations upon that noble person, on whose part the application has been made; and it is certainly not to be wondered at, that his Grace has taken the earliest opportunity of coming to this Court, for the purpose of denying upon his oath the truth of the imputation which had been made against him. The question, however, which arises for the decision of the Court, upon the present application, is, whether the words complained of were such as, according to the practice of the Court, formed a sufficient ground for directing a criminal information to be filed. With regard to the last three statements of the series, it is clear upon all the authorities, that they cannot support a decision of that nature, unless the offence actually committed could be transformed into one of a different sort, and brought forward as an attempt to provoke the applicant to the commission of a breach of the peace. There is one portion of the words concerning which the Court had entertained some doubt, as to whether they did not constitute a ground for acceding to the present motion, and these were the words which charged the Duke of Marlborough with corruption and partiality in the discharge of his duties as a Magistrate. The denial of that charge in the duke's affidavit was complete; but the Court was unable to find any case in which the speaking of words of that nature had been considered sufficient to support a motion of this kind, unless they were addressed to the Magistrate himself in the actual discharge of his duties as such; and the ground upon which the Court interfered in a summary manner in such instances was, that the offence in these cases amounted to a direct and immediate obstruction of the administration of justice; and no case had occurred where a criminal information had been issued for the mere speaking of words imputing misconduct to a Magistrate, but disconnected with circumstances which tended to produce a direct and immediate obstruction of the administration of justice. It was true Mr. Starkie, in the edition of his work upon libel, published in 1830, (1) had the following passage: "The case might fall under a very different consideration, if a Magistrate were to be charged with some specific act of oppression or corruption in his judicial capacity." Such an act is charged here, but this doubt of Mr. Starkie was only a doubt even now, as there had not, in fact, occurred any case where the intimation of that learned person had been affirmed by the decision of the Court. The Court had expected that the learned Solicitor General would have commented upon the cases which had occurred upon the subject; and they attributed the omission to the fact, that there was really no case, nor even any dictum which went the length of shewing that the present application ought to be granted. The Court could not therefore comply with this motion, without creating a precedent entirely new, and setting an example, which it was not clear that the law of the land would justify the Court in making. One principle which prevailed throughout all the cases upon the subject was, an unwillingness to turn mere words into a crime. There was, in all such cases, so much difficulty about the proof, and so many explanations might be available, for the purpose of explaining and qualifying, or greatly palliating the words which might happen to be the subject of complaint, that the Court was extremely unwilling to interfere in a summary manner, upon oral testimony alone. In such cases the Court could not interfere in a summary manner, without violating the authority of all the former precedents, and opening a door to inquiries, the consequences of which it would be impossible to foresee, or to calculate. For these reasons no rule would be made upon the present motion.

PATTESON, J. observed, that the Lord Chief Justice had so completely expressed his (Mr. Justice Patteson's) views upon the case, that he thought it unnecessary to add anything to the judgment of his Lordship.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. THE INHABITANTS OF LEEDS.
June 3. }

Order of Renewal—Baron and Feme—Examination.

Where husband and wife are living together, and become chargeable, and no settlement of the husband can be ascertained, the wife cannot be removed to the place of her maiden settlement, the husband alone consenting to the separation.

Whether such a separation could be made, if both husband and wife consented—quære.

The heading of an examination was—“The examination of J. M., of, &c., taken upon oath at, &c., before us, &c., touching the place of his lawful settlement.” The examination then shewed an inquiry as to the place of settlement of J. M., and that no settlement of his could be discovered. It then disclosed the maiden settlement of L. M. his wife:—Held, that the heading of the examination was sufficient on which to make an order to remove the wife (without her husband) and their four children to the wife's maiden settlement.

(1) Vol. II. p. 199.

The examinations stated, that diligent inquiry had been made, in all likely places, to ascertain the settlement of the father and mother of J. M., and his settlement, or the place of his birth, but that the settlement of neither could be ascertained. They then shewed the maiden settlement of the wife, to which place the order removed herself and children.

Held, that the examinations were not defective in not excluding, as the place of birth of J. M., Scotland, or Ireland, or either of the isles of Man, Jersey, and Guernsey, though, if his birth had taken place in either of those countries or islands, he would have been liable to have been passed there with his wife and such children as had not gained a settlement in England, under 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 40. s. 2.

An order was made in January 1843, for the removal of Lydia Morgan, the wife of John Morgan, and Margaret aged twelve years, Thomas eight years, John four years, and Ann one year and nine months, their children, from the township of Leeds to the township of Washton. Upon appeal to the Quarter Sessions for the borough of Leeds, the Court quashed the order, subject to a case, of which the following are the material parts:—

CASE.

The examinations on which the order was made were taken down in writing, on the same sheet of paper on which the order was written, except the examination of George Smith, which was on a separate sheet. The examinations were in the words following:—

“Borough of Leeds, in the county of York. The examination of John Morgan, of Leeds, taken upon oath at, &c., before us, A. T. and G. W. Esqrs., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said borough, touching the place of his lawful settlement, who saith as follows: [after stating his marriage and the birth of the four children, and that none of them were emancipated, he proceeded:] I am now living, residing, and inhabiting, with my said wife and children, and we are all actually chargeable to the township of Leeds. I never gained a settlement in my own right. I never heard where my father and mother were married. They neither of them had settlements in England to my knowledge and belief. I never knew the place of my birth, though I have made diligent search and inquiry to ascertain it. My father died twenty-four years ago, and my mother eight years ago. In October last, I assisted George Smith in endeavouring to discover my place of settlement, and the place of settlement (if any) of my father and mother, and we inquired of all persons, and searched in all likely places to find a place of settlement for me, but without success. We could not discover any settlement for me, and I believe I never had any. I hereby consent and agree that my said wife and children shall, without me, be removed to the township of Washton, in the county of York, that being the place of her maiden settlement at and immediately before her intermarriage with me; and I pray that such removal may be forthwith ordered.”

The examination of Lydia Morgan, taken upon oath at the time, place, and in manner aforesaid, who says, “I am the wife of the above-named John Morgan. I never gained a settlement for myself. I am the lawful daughter of the under-mentioned John Miller.”

Then followed the examination of John Miller, which shewed the settlement of himself and of Lydia Morgan, derivatively from him, to be in Washton; and then the examination of George Smith, one of the overseers of Leeds: the heading of this examination was as follows;—“Borough of Leeds, in the county of York. The examination of George Smith, one of the overseers of the poor of the township of Leeds, in the said borough, taken upon oath, at &c., on &c., before us, &c., touching the last place of the legal settlement of John Morgan, and Lydia his wife, and their children, who says, I have together with John Morgan made diligent search and inquiry with the object of discovering and ascertaining whether John Morgan hath any legal settlement, and I have not been able to discover that he hath by his own act, or the act of his parents, or their ancestors or otherwise, acquired any settlement,” &c.

The grounds of appeal were, first, that when the examinations were taken, John Morgan and his wife and children were living together, and it does not appear that he was not a person born in Scotland or Ireland, or in the Isle of Man or Scilly, or in either of the isles of Jersey or Guernsey, or that being born in one of the countries or isles aforesaid, he has gained a settlement in England, the place whereof is unknown; secondly, that the examinations shew no search or inquiry to ascertain whether John Morgan was born in one of the countries or isles aforesaid; thirdly, that it is not shewn where the searches mentioned in the examinations, as to the place of settlement of John Morgan, were made; fourthly, that it does not appear by the examinations that Lydia Morgan consented to be removed to Washton without her husband; fifthly, that the examinations are informal and insufficient and bad on other grounds than those above stated, and do not shew good cause for the removal of the paupers from Leeds to Washton; sixthly, that the examinations whereon the order of removal was made were not duly taken by A. T. and G. W. Esqrs., the two Justices by whom the order was made.

When the appeal came on to be heard, the appellants insisted that the examinations were insufficient upon the fourth ground of appeal. They also claimed a right to insist under the fifth and sixth grounds, that the order should be quashed, as it appeared, on looking at the examinations, including the headings thereof, that the examinations of John Morgan, Lydia Morgan, and John Miller, were not taken in the matter to which the order related. Upon the objections on the fourth, fifth, and sixth grounds, the Court below quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court. The appellants also insisted that the examinations were insufficient, upon the first, second, and third grounds, with respect to which also the case was granted. If all the objections should have been overruled, then the order of Sessions to be quashed, and the order of removal affirmed. If all or any objections were fatal, then the order of removal to be quashed, and the order of Sessions affirmed.

Bliss and Stapleton, in support of the order of Sessions.—This is an order separating the wife and children from the husband, which, at all events, cannot be done without the consent of both husband and wife—The King v. Ellham (1). There is no consent of the wife in this case, so that it is unnecessary to consider whether The King v. Ellham could be supported. But a strong inference arises that that case is not law, from the circumstance that in cases where the wife only has been removed, and it has not appeared where the husband has been at the time of the removal, the Court will not intend that such removal will effect a separation between man and wife, but will rather presume that the husband is at the place to which the wife is sent—St. Michael's, Bath, v. Nunny (2), The King v. Ironacton (3), The King v. the Inhabitants of Stockton (4). So a separation of a mother and child within the age of nurture will not be permitted—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Birmingham (5). The examinations are also defective, in not excluding as the place of birth of John Morgan, either Scotland or Ireland, or the isles of Man, Jersey or Guernsey. Since the 59 Geo. 3. c. 12. s. 33 (6), if a poor person, born in either of those countries or islands, becomes chargeable in England, having gained no settlement there, he is to be removed with his wife and such children as have gained no settlement there, to the place of his birth—The King v. the Inhabitants of Leeds (7). If the husband was born in any one of the above places, the removal is improperly made to the wife's maiden settlement. The examinations are also insufficient to support the order, as, with one exception, the heading of them relates to, and they purport to be taken touching the settlement of John Morgan only; whereas, the order removes the wife and four children, and not the person whose settlement was the subject of the examinations—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Silkstone (8).

Hall and Pashley, contra.—It must be admitted, that it does not expressly appear that the wife consented to the removal to her maiden settlement, which may make this case distinguishable from The King v. Ellham, though there is no doubt that in fact she consented; and it is not clear that the husband's acquiescence alone is not sufficient—The King v. Eastbourne (9). But, at all events, the order will be good as to two of the children, as they are above the age of nurture. Next, it was not necessary that the examinations should negative the birth of the husband in any of the places mentioned in the statute. That would be no more than a birth settlement, and would be superseded by the mother's maiden settlement—The King v. the Inhabitants of St. Mary, Leicester (10). Then, as to the examination not being made respecting the settlement of the wife and children; that objection is not open upon the general ground of appeal. The examination of John Morgan certainly applies to his place of settlement, and shews that it is not known. That was a preliminary step to removing the wife to her maiden settlement. The other examinations, in the heading of them, are not stated to be taken as to the settlement of any particular person, but the order determines the subject-matter of the inquiry. The examination need not be complete, per se. The heading is not a statement made by the overseers or witnesses, but is affixed by the clerk.

Cur. adv. vult.

Upon a former day (April 20), LORD DENMAN, C.J., stated, that the question of separating the wife from her husband hardly arose in this case, as no consent of the wife to the separation was shewn, which, at all events, was necessary, and the Court confirmed the order of Sessions generally. But, upon a subsequent day, it being intimated that the decision in that part of the case would not affect two of the children, who were above the age of nurture, the Court, after considering the further points raised with regard to them, delivered the following judgment:—

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—In this case, the order of Sessions was confirmed by this Court, upon the single ground that the wife had not consented to be removed without the husband; and that such consent was necessary to a valid removal, assuming that it could be valid under any circumstances. The Court did not then recollect, that this ground of decision did not apply to two of the children, above the age of nurture, as to whom it is necessary to consider the other points of the case. One point arises upon the examinations of the father and mother, and one Miller, which were taken touching the lawful settlement of the father only; whereas the order of removal is of the wife and children to the wife's maiden settlement; and it is alleged that the examination should have been headed accordingly. We think this point is not tenable. An inquiry into the father's settlement was necessary in this case, and was the foundation of the proceeding, for until it appeared that his settlement could not be discovered, the wife's settlement would be immaterial; and when it did so appear, the rest of the inquiry followed as of course. The heading of an examination may be important with regard to an indictment for perjury, and to shew that the examination was taken in a matter in which the Magistrates had jurisdiction. Here the heading shews jurisdiction; and it is true as far as it goes, for there was an inquiry touching the settlement of the father, and also a further inquiry arising out of the first inquiry. If that further inquiry had been unconnected with the first, the case would have been very different, but as it is, we think it so naturally arose out of the first inquiry, that we must hold that the examination was sufficiently taken. The second point we also think untenable. It appears from the examination that diligent inquiry was made to ascertain the father's settlement. The precise nature of those inquiries need not be stated. Then it is said, that the examinations do not negative the father having been born in Scotland, Ireland, or the islands of Scilly, Jersey, or Guernsey. It is obviously impossible to negative his birth in the places mentioned, except by shewing where he was born. It is absurd to require a search in Ireland, Scotland, or those other places; and even if such search were made, the same necessity applies to searching every parish register in England. We are, therefore, of opinion that the order of removal is good, and ought to be confirmed with regard to the two children above the age of nurture; but that it should be quashed, and the order of Sessions confirmed as to the wife and the two children within the age of nurture.

Order of Sessions confirmed as to the wife and two children within the age of nurture, and quashed as to the other two children.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. LORD HASTINGS
June 3. } AND ANOTHER.

Bastard—Order of Filiation, Application for—Hearing—Costs.

Upon an application to petty sessions by the guardians of a union, for an order upon a person whom they charged with being the putative father of a bastard child, a notice of the intended application was put in, purporting to be signed by several guardians: the person charged called for proof that the notice was signed by a majority of the guardians, which not being given, he contended that the case could not be proceeded with, and the Justices thereupon dismissed the application, and made no order upon him.

Held, that this was not such a hearing of the application under the proviso in sec. 78. of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. as entitled the person intended to be charged to his costs; and the Court refused to direct a mandamus to the Justices, commanding them to make an order for them.

Gunning, on behalf of John Shepherd, had obtained a rule, calling upon Lord Hastings and James Gay, Esq., Justices for the county of Norfolk, to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, directed to them, commanding them to make an order, ordering and directing the guardians of the poor of the Aylsham Union to pay to the said John Shepherd the full costs and charges incurred by him in resisting an application made by the guardians of the poor of the said union to the said Justices, at a petty sessions held before them, &c. for an order upon the said John Shepherd, to reimburse the union for the maintenance and support of a female bastard child, born of, &c.; upon the hearing of which said application the said Justices did not think fit to make any order thereon, but refused to make any order thereon, and dismissed the same.

It appeared by the affidavit of Shepherd upon which the rule was granted, that upon the 20th of March 1844 he had been served with the following notice:—

"Whereas D. T., late of, &c. was on the 14th day of February last delivered of a female bastard child, and the said child, by reason of the inability of its said mother to provide for its maintenance, on the said 14th day of February last became chargeable to the parish of H., and from thence hitherto has been maintained and supported by the Aylsham Union, in which the said parish is situate; and whereas we, the undersigned, being a majority of the guardians of the said union, duly assembled at a meeting of the board of guardians of the said union, having made diligent inquiries as to the father of the said child, do find and charge that you, John Shepherd, of Milton Constable, in the said county, farmer, are father of the same; therefore take notice, that we, as such guardians of the said union, intend on the 28th day of March instant to apply to the Justices of the peace at the petty sessions, to be holden at, &c., in and for, &c., for an order upon you, the said John Shepherd, to reimburse the said union for the maintenance and support of the said child. Given under our hands, at a meeting of the board of guardians of the said union, held," &c. Signed by seventeen guardians.

The affidavit then stated that Shepherd, in pursuance of the notice, attended with his attorney at the petty sessions, and on the case being called on he produced the notice, and admitted the service in fact, and then called upon the parties who appeared to support the application, to prove that the notice was signed by a majority of the guardians, who by law ought to have signed the same, but that the same was not proved; that thereupon the Justices refused to make any order, and dismissed the application; that the attorney for the deponent then applied for costs, but the Justices refused to order the guardians to pay the costs.

"that if, upon the hearing of such application, the Court shall not think fit to make any order thereon, it shall order and direct that the full costs and charges incurred by the person so intended to be charged in resisting such application shall be paid by the overseers or guardians." Here the "hearing of the application" was prevented by the very person making this application. At the petty sessions, he objected that the case could not be heard, as there was no proof that he had had a proper notice; and now he contends that the case has been heard, and that he is entitled to his costs. The Queen v. the Recorder of Exeter (1) was relied upon in moving for the rule, but there a notice, in fact, was put in and proved, and so the Justices had possession of the case, but the application was not made by the proper parties. The applicant should not have taken this objection, but have allowed the case to proceed to a hearing, and had it dismissed upon the merits.

Gunning, contra.—It is not contended that if there has been a hearing, and no order has been made, the statute is not imperative in requiring costs to be given to the person intended to be charged. Here there has been a hearing; for the case was called on, and the notice of application by the guardians put in. In The Queen v. Stamper (2) it was decided that an entry of such a case with the clerk of the peace was an application, and the calling on of the case and attendance of the party to be charged, a sufficient hearing to give costs. That was decided upon this same section. The taking of a preliminary objection cannot disentitle a party to his costs. In The Queen v. the Recorder of Exeter the application for the order was made by the churchwardens and overseers, instead of by certain persons incorporated for the management of the poor, and the case was not heard, as a proper notice had not been given, but the churchwardens and overseers were ordered to pay the costs. So here was no proper notice, and the case was therefore not fully heard. The observation of Lord Denman, C.J., in that case, namely, "that parties improperly bring a man before the Justices, upon an application which fails," is strictly applicable here. He also cited The Queen v. Cottingham (3).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion that this party is not entitled to succeed in this application for costs, which are only to be granted upon a hearing of the application. That hearing the applicant himself prevented. I ground my decision upon the words of the proviso referred to.

PATTESON, J.—I am of the same opinion. The statute enacts that no application shall be heard unless fourteen days' notice shall have been given, by the overseers or guardians, to the person intended to be charged. Here the party himself applying for the costs succeeds in convincing the Justices at petty sessions that they cannot hear, because there is no sufficient notice proved. Now he says the case has been heard. The two cases relied upon do not oblige us to accede to this application. In The Queen v. Stamper no question at all was raised about notice, and in the case against the Recorder of Exeter it was not objected that there was not sufficient notice to bring the case before the Court, but that the wrong parties had given it.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of opinion that in this case we ought to further the view of the Sessions, unless we are tied down by authorities to the contrary. The cases do not furnish such authority. Costs are to be given upon "the hearing." The language of the statute does not oblige us to say that a party who has successfully insisted at Sessions that the case cannot be heard, can come here, and procure costs which are contingent upon a hearing.

WIGHTMAN, J.—Looking at the act of parliament and the conduct of the party together, I am of opinion that we are not obliged to accede to this application. The objection at the Sessions was, that the case could not be heard for want of notice. That is the real objection, as, the notice not having been proved, it is the same as if there had been no notice at all. But now the same party insists that the case has been heard.

 1844. } THE QUEEN v. RICHARD AN-
 May 7. } DREWS.

Criminal Law—Bail—Prisoner.

Where a true bill for murder had been found against a prisoner, by the grand jury, but the trial was postponed in consequence of the absence of material witnesses for the prosecution, the Court refused to entertain an application to admit him to bail.

Semble—The Court will in no case admit to bail where a true bill for a capital offence has been found against the prisoner by the grand jury.

The prisoner having been committed to Warwick gaol upon the coroner's warrant, for the wilful murder of his child, founded upon the inquisition held by him, a true bill for the same charge was found against him by the grand jury, at the last assizes. In consequence of the absence of two witnesses, the trial, at the instance of the Crown, was postponed till the next assizes; and an application was thereupon made to Gurney, B., the Judge of Assize, to bail the prisoner, but this was refused.

Miller now moved for a rule nisi, to admit the prisoner to bail, and cited The Queen v. Chapman (1), and The Queen v. Gutteridge (2), as overruled by The Queen v. Scaife (3), which was a case of felony. He also contended, upon affidavits, that the circumstances of suspicion were so slight, as to entitle him to sustain this application.

Cur. adv. vult.

WIGHTMAN, J.—No instance of an application precisely similar to the present in its circumstances was brought before me, when this motion was made; but Mr. Miller relied upon the practice of this Court of admitting to bail, after the coroner's inquisition, as an authority in his favour. He also quoted the case of The Queen v. Scaife; but that is distinguishable, inasmuch as the charge there made against the prisoners was for having coining moulds in their possession, which was not, like the present, a capital offence. With respect to the practice of bailing, where a party is committed upon the coroner's inquisition, I think that stands upon a very different footing from the present case. The Court there can have before it the depositions on which the charge is founded, and, consequently, can see what are the grounds upon which the conclusion of the jury has been come to, and form a judgment as to its correctness. But where a true bill has been found by a grand jury, that cannot be done, for we cannot discover upon what evidence they acted. This distinction is pointed out in Lord Mohun's case (4), which is a direct authority against the present application. It is there said, "If a man be found guilty of murder by the coroner's inquest, we sometimes bail him, because the coroner proceeds upon depositions taken in writing, which we may look into. Otherwise, if a man be found guilty of murder by a grand jury, because the Court cannot take notice of their evidence, which they are bound by their oath to conceal." That, however, is not the only case; but I find that the decisions are uniformly adverse to this application; for in Bacon's Abridgment, tit. 'Bail in Criminal Cases,' there is another authority in these words:—"Nor will they bail after a bill for murder found, though the fact were plainly manslaughter"—Case of Kirk, and Case for the murder of Seymour Conway (5). In addition to those, there are two later cases which were cited, the one before Lord Abinger, C.B., and the other before my Brother Patteson, in both of which the application to admit to bail was refused, on the ground that a true bill had been presented by the grand jury. These authorities appear to me conclusive; but I may add, that in this very case a similar application was made to Gurney, B., who refused to grant it. Under these circumstances, in the absence of any authority to support it, the motion must be refused.

Order of Supersedeas—Costs—Entry of Appeal.

Upon receipt of notice and grounds of appeal, the respondents obtained an order of supersedeas, which they served upon the appellants, and afterwards tendered two guineas for costs, which the appellants refused to accept. The appellants went to the Sessions, and applied to enter their appeal, in order to get their costs, but the Court refused to allow the entry.

A rule nisi having been obtained for a mandamus to the Justices to enter the appeal, the affidavits in opposition stated a standing order of the Court of Quarter Sessions, by which it was ordered, that the sum of 30s. only, as and for costs and expenses, shall be allowed in appeals against orders of removal, tried in the said court, to either party.

Held, that the appellants were entitled to have had their appeal entered, and that the real amount of costs should be considered, notwithstanding the above order.

Welsby had obtained a rule, calling upon the Justices of Merionethshire to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, commanding them to enter continuances, and hear an appeal against an order for the removal of William Williams, his wife, and their child, from the parish of Llangar to the parish of Dyncio. It appeared, from the affidavits upon which the rule was moved, that the order was dated the 10th of January 1844, of which notice, with notice of chargeability, &c., was given to Dyncio upon the same day; that notice of appeal was given on the 30th of January, and grounds of appeal served on the 19th of March; that on the 28th of March an order of supersedeas was served by the overseers of Llangar, but no tender or offer of costs was then made; that a fresh order of removal was obtained on the 1st of April, and served upon the 9th of April on the overseers of Dyncio, when the overseers of Llangar tendered two guineas as the costs incurred, by the appellants, respecting the appeal against the first order, which sum was not accepted, the overseers of Dyncio stating, that the costs amounted to a much larger sum, and that, if that was not paid the overseers would prosecute the appeal against the first order; that the Sessions were held on the 12th of April, when application was made to enter and prosecute an appeal against the first order, but the Justices refused to allow the appeal to be entered, or to allow the churchwardens and overseers of Dyncio their costs and expenses necessarily and unavoidably incurred; that the costs and expenses amounted to 26*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*

The affidavits, in answer, set out all the examinations and orders (which are not material), and also the following statement, contained in an affidavit made by the attorney for the respondent parish, viz. that there is and has been, for a great many years last past, a standing rule or order on the books of the Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the said county of Merioneth, whereby it is ordered, that the sum of 30*s.* only, as and for costs and expenses, shall be allowed in appeals against orders of removal tried in the said court to either party, and that it is the general practice of the Court to act upon such rule.

Jervis and W. Yardley shewed cause.—The Justices were right in refusing to allow the appeal to be entered, as previous to the Sessions an offer of two guineas was made to the appellants for their costs. That was 12*s.* more than they would have got by the rule of the Sessions, if the appeal had been entered and tried, and the order quashed. As, therefore, the Court will not interfere with the rule of Sessions, the writ will not be ordered to go, as if it be obeyed, and the appeal directed in favour of the appellants, 30*s.* will, at the most, be awarded to them for costs. The Justices may exercise a discretion as to the entry of the appeal—The King v. the Justices of Norfolk (1).

Welsby, contra.—The appellants are entitled of right to enter their appeal, in order to secure reasonable costs—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Townstall, and The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Stayley (2). Then the alleged rule of Sessions is no answer to this application. It is confined also to appeals tried. Such rule, if it could be held to be a reasonable one, cannot be applied to a case like this, where there is no mode, but by entry of the appeal, to secure costs. There is nothing to shew that two guineas, the sum offered, was a reasonable sum; nor was that, or any sum, offered, till the 9th of April, three days before the Sessions.

(1) 5 B. & Ald. 484.

(2) 2 Gale & Dav. 676; a.c. 12 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) M.C. 72.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion, that the Sessions were not acting legally in refusing to allow this appeal to be entered. They were bound, under the circumstances, to have allowed the entry, and should exercise a discretion as to the amount of costs to be given.

PATTESON, J.—I cannot see, in accordance with the cases to which we have been referred, how the Sessions were justified in refusing to enter this appeal, even if it should appear, upon investigation, that the appellants would be no gainers by this course.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am of opinion, that the Justices were wrong in refusing to allow the entry of this appeal. We are not warranted in supposing that they would adhere to the alleged rule of Sessions; but I should rather apprehend that they will reconsider their practice, and ascertain the real amount of the costs.

Bastard—Election to go to Quarter Sessions, Exercise of—Order to reimburse—Sufficiency.

Under the act 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84, enabling Justices of the Peace in petty sessions to make orders for the support of bastard children, it is too late for the person charged with being the putative father, to declare to the Justices in petty sessions, under section 3, that he is desirous that the charge should be heard and determined at the Quarter Sessions, after some witnesses have been examined, and the case has been partly heard, by the consent and in the presence of the person charged.

An order in bastardy, made in petty sessions, to reimburse, and for future maintenance, was dated the 2nd of February 1844.

It recited the hearing of the application of the churchwardens and overseers of the township of Ripon, and that it appeared that a male bastard child had been born of the body of &c., at &c., on the 27th day of February last past; and that it appeared upon the evidence, &c., that J. B., of &c., was the father, and ordered, that J. B. "should forthwith pay or cause to be paid to the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said township of Ripon, the sum of 9s. 4d., to reimburse the said township the actual expense incurred in the maintenance and support of the said bastard child, from the time of its birth, as aforesaid, to the time of making this our order:"—Held, that the order to pay the 9s. 4d. was bad, as it was made for a time exceeding six calendar months next preceding the hearing of the application, contrary to section 73. of the Poor Law Act.

Affidavits were tendered to shew that the order for payment was bad, as there were no churchwardens for the township of Ripon. Whether the affidavits could be received, as they did not go to oust the Magistrates of jurisdiction—quære. But, held—per Patteson, J., and Williams, J., (Lord Denman, C.J. dubitante,) that the order was sufficient, even though there were no churchwardens for the township.

This was a rule calling upon Charles Oxley and Robert Paley, Esquires, Justices for the liberty of Ripon, in the county of York, to shew cause why a writ of certiorari should not issue, directed to them, &c., to remove into this court the following order in bastardy, made by them in petty sessions:—"Liberty of Ripon, in the county of York. At a petty sessions holden at &c., on the 2nd day of February, in the seventh year, &c., and A.D. 1844. Whereas, upon the hearing of the application of the churchwardens and overseers of the township of Ripon, in the said liberty (seven days' notice of which application having been duly proved before us to have been given by the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor to John Brown, hereinafter named), it appears to us, the undersigned Justices of the Peace, assembled at the said petty sessions, that a male bastard child was lately (that is to say), on the 27th day of February now last past, born in the township of Markington with Wallerthwaite, in the said liberty, of the body of Mary Denison, single woman; and that the said child has, by reason of the inability of the mother of the said child to provide for the maintenance of the same child, become chargeable to the said township of Ripon, in the said liberty; and whereas, it further appears to us, the said Justices assembled in petty sessions aforesaid, upon the hearing of such application, and the evidence of the mother of the said bastard child (such evidence being corroborated in a material particular by other testimony to the satisfaction of us, the said Justices, as required by law), that John Brown, of Hill House, in the said township of Markington with Wallerthwaite, labourer, is really and in truth the father of the said bastard child; it is therefore adjudged by us, the said Justices, that the said John Brown is the father of the said bastard child, and we do hereby order that the said John Brown shall forthwith pay or cause to be paid to the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the said township of Ripon, the sum of 9s. 4d., to reimburse the said township the actual expense incurred in the maintenance and support of the said bastard child from the time of its birth as aforesaid, to the time of making this our order." It then directed a weekly payment of 1s. 6d., so long as the child should be chargeable to the township of Ripon, and until it attained the age of seven years, to be paid by Brown to the churchwardens and overseers of the township of Ripon, for the maintenance and support of the child." Signed by the Justices.

The objections stated upon the affidavits for the rule were—first, that the Justices had no jurisdiction to make it, because, that after the examination of the mother of the child at the petty sessions, and after the examination of another witness also in support of the said application, but before all the witnesses on behalf of the application had been called, and before the Justices had proceeded to pronounce their decision upon the case, the attorney for Brown, who, with his attorney, had been personally present from the beginning (the attorney having cross-examined the witnesses called), declared to the Justices, that Brown was desirous that the charge should be heard and determined at the next ensuing Quarter Sessions of the liberty of Ripon, and stated his readiness to enter into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties, according to the statute 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85. s. 3, conditioned to appear and try at the next Quarter Sessions, &c.; but the Justices determined that the application was too late, and that the hearing of the charge should be proceeded with, and made the order. Secondly, that the adjudication of 9s. 4d. "to reimburse the township the actual expense incurred in the maintenance of the child, from the time of its birth to the time of making the order," was void, as it appeared upon the face of the order that the child was nearly twelve months old, whereas, by the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 73. (the Poor Law Act), the costs could only be calculated from the day of the commencement of six calendar months next preceding the hearing of such application. Thirdly, that the order to pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the township of Ripon was bad, as the affidavits stated that there were no churchwardens of the township of Ripon, although there were churchwardens of the parish of Ripon, which comprised several townships, of which the township of Ripon was one.

Baines and Pickering now shewed cause. —The first objection depends upon the meaning of sect. 3. of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85. That statute was passed to enable Justices of the Peace, in petty sessions, to make orders for the support of bastard children. The power to make such orders had previously rested with the Quarter Sessions only, under secs. 72. and 73. of the Poor Law Act, but by the late Act all original powers, which before could only be exercised at a Court of Quarter Sessions, were vested in petty or special sessions. Under sec. 3. (2) of the act of Victoria the case may still go to

(2) Sect. 3. "Provided always, and be it enacted, that if the person whom the guardians or overseers shall charge with being the putative father of such child, shall declare to the Justices, in such special or petty sessions, that he is desirous that the charge shall be heard and determined, at the Quarter Sessions of the Peace, and shall then and there enter into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties conditioned personally to appear at the Quarter Sessions of the Peace, the next or next but one ensuing, as the Justices shall think fit, to answer to the said charge, and to abide the judgment of the Court at such Sessions, and to pay all the costs incurred by the said guardians and overseers in bringing such charge before the said Court, in case the Quarter Sessions, at the option of the party charged, upon certain conditions; but it is submitted, that that option must be exercised before the petty sessions have begun to hear the case. It was never intended that there should be two hearings of the case, or that there should be any appeal from the petty to the Quarter Sessions. Here, then, the application to have the case heard at the Quarter Sessions was too late, as the case had been fully entered upon, and was in the course of hearing. It was intended to give the choice of two tribunals, but not the chance of both. The Court of Petty Sessions clearly had jurisdiction to proceed and make the order, as it is not contended that their jurisdiction was stopped before the inquiry commenced. The argument on the other side rests solely on the words, "that the Justices in special or petty sessions shall not proceed further to hear the charge;" but the meaning is, that the election shall be made before the inquiry commences, and that if the Quarter Sessions is chosen as the tribunal, the petty sessions shall not proceed to hear. Supposing the view of the other side to be correct then the Quarter Sessions must take up the case at that precise point where the petty sessions leave off. Secondly, if it clearly appears on the face of the order that the sum of 9s. 4d. extends over a period beyond six months next preceding the hearing of the application, the order will be bad pro tanto. But it is not clear that it is so. The order states that a male bastard child was born "lately, that is to say, on the 27th day of February last." The time is laid under a videlicet, and the words "that is to say, on the 27th day of February last" need not be there, and may be rejected as surplusage—The King v. Gill (3), The King v. Picton (4). If the word "lately" leaves the matter ambiguous, all fair intendment will be made to support the order—The King v. Stockton (5).

the Court shall adjudge him to be the putative father of such child, then the Justices, in special or petty sessions, shall not proceed further to hear the charge, but shall take such recognizance, and transmit it to the clerk of the peace, and in such case all further proceedings in the matter of such charge shall be had before the said Court of Quarter Sessions as if this Act had not been made."

(4) 2 East, 195.

(5) 5 B. & Ad. 546; s. c. 3 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 48.

Thirdly, if affidavits are admissible to shew that there are no churchwardens of the township of Ripon, an addition of improper persons, to whom the payment is to be made, will not vitiate the order—The Queen v. Goodall (6).

Martin, contra.—Upon the first point, the words of section 3, which provides that the Justices, under certain circumstances, "shall not proceed further to hear," clearly shew that a part of the proceedings may have been taken, before there shall have been any declaration of a desire to go to the Quarter Sessions. The hearing, at petty sessions, is subject to an appeal.

Secondly, the order is bad as to the 9s. 4d.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We agree with you upon that point.]

Thirdly, payment is ordered to the "Churchwardens and overseers of the township of Ripon;" and the affidavit shews that the township has no churchwardens. The order is, to pay to persons who do not exist. It is like an action commenced by non-existing persons.

[PATTESON, J.—We are considering the sufficiency of the order upon the face of it. Have you a right to shew, by affidavit, that there are no churchwardens?]

The Queen v. Goodall was different.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I am of opinion that there is nothing in the first objection. Certain proceedings are to be taken by summons of the party, previous to hearing the application; and the obvious meaning of the 3rd section is, that when the party has been brought to the petty sessions, and has declared that he is desirous that the charge should be heard at the Quarter Sessions, the Justices in petty sessions shall not proceed further to hear, that is, shall not enter upon the inquiry of, the charge. That declaration of the party must be made previously to any hearing of the charge at the petty sessions. The person charged is not first to select the petty sessions as the tribunal, and then, when the matter is going against him, say, that he will go to the Quarter Sessions. Upon the second point, as to the 9s. 4d., the order is bad, as, giving a sensible interpretation to the language of it, the payment is in respect of the period, "from the time of its birth," which the order shews to be more than six calendar months next preceding the hearing. Upon the third point, I entertain some doubt as to the sufficiency of the order to pay; but that is not of consequence, as no doubt as to its sufficiency is entertained by my learned Brothers.

PATTESON, J.—I feel no doubt as to the construction of the act upon the first point. The party charged is only to go to one tribunal. The 72nd section of the Poor Law Act gave the jurisdiction to Justices in Quarter Sessions. That was thought inconvenient, and, therefore, by the subsequent act, it is compulsory that the application shall be made to the petty sessions; but the party charged is allowed to elect either tribunal. If, however, he selects the petty sessions, and the case is proceeded with, he cannot change afterwards, because the case may be going against him. If the legislature had intended to give an appeal to the Quarter Sessions, it would have been very easy to have said so. The charge may be heard at the quarter or petty sessions, but not at both. The words of the section mean, that, upon objection, before any hearing, the petty sessions are not to hear at all. I agree with my Lord as to the order to pay 9s. 4d. Upon the last point, I cannot see that the introduction of the name of the churchwardens does any harm. If there are any for the township, the order is right, as by the Poor Law Act the overseers of the parish are to be reimbursed, and the churchwardens are overseers by law. If there are none for the township, and there are some for the parish, then a payment to them would be contrary to the order. If there are none for the parish or township I do not think the order would be bad, because some of the persons, to whom payment is to be made, are not existing; according to the maxim, utile per inutile non vitiatur.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of opinion that the case is entirely free from doubt upon the first point. The absence of all words as to any appeal, is alone conclusive that it was not intended that the proceeding at Quarter Sessions should be in the way of appeal. Where such is the intention, words giving an appeal are used; as in the statutes relating to orders of removal, and to poor-rates. The obvious meaning of the section is to give a choice of tribunal to the party charged. He must make his election at the time when he comes. If at that time he prefers the Quarter Sessions, the petty sessions "shall not proceed further to hear the charge." I also quite agree that the order is bad as to the 9s. 4d. Upon the other point some doubt has been felt by my Lord; but I concur with my Brother Patteson, in thinking the order sufficient. I much doubt if we are at liberty to look into affidavits upon this point, as they are not for the purpose of shewing want of jurisdiction. The Justices clearly had jurisdiction over the subject-matter. Is then the order necessarily bad for applying the term "churchwardens" to a township? It is not so, as it is not unusual to have churchwardens for a township. If there are some, the payment is to them, and the order right: if not, this is merely a nomen inutile.

Rule absolute, to bring up the order to be quashed, so far as regards the sum of 9s. 4d.

May 7. } OTHERS.

Conspiracy—Indictment, Sufficiency of.

An indictment charged that defendants did unlawfully combine, conspire, confederate, and agree together, to cheat and defraud certain liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, being tradesmen (not naming them), of divers large quantities of their goods and chattels. It then set out several overt acts, namely, the purchase, by one of the defendants, of goods of several tradesmen (naming them) upon credit, and of other tradesmen, whose names were unknown, with direction, that the goods should be delivered at the house of that defendant; that no payment was ever made for them; the pretence that certain debts were due from that defendant to the others (setting out the debts); that actions, on account of these fictitious debts, were commenced against such defendant by the others, and judgments signed for want of a plea, and writs of fi. fa. sued out upon the judgments, by virtue of which, the goods and chattels so fraudulently obtained were taken in execution; concluding with an averment, that so the defendants did cheat and defraud the tradesmen who supplied the goods, &c.

All the overt acts were alleged to have been done in pursuance of the conspiracy:—Semble, in arrest of judgment, that the count would have been good without the allegation of the overt acts; and that it was not material that the names of the tradesmen (in the early part of it) to be defrauded, should be stated.

Held, also, that, if necessary, the overt acts might be looked to, in aid of the charging part of the indictment.

The defendants were indicted at the Central Criminal Court for conspiracy. The first count of the indictment stated, that William Henry King, Emily Ann Birch, Anna Dorcas Phillips, and Augusta Ann Birch, late of, &c., in the fifth year, &c., did unlawfully combine, conspire, confederate, and agree together, to cheat and defraud certain liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, being tradesmen, of divers large quantities of their goods and chattels. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, further present, that the said E. A. B. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, did, in pursuance of the said conspiracy, fraudulently order, and obtain upon credit, from W. A. W. & C. W, upholsterers, in the city of London, divers goods and chattels of great value, to wit, of the value of 500*l.*, belonging to the said W. A. W. & C. W; from F. B. & W. Queen respectively. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, further present, that the said E. A. B. then and there, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, did, in further pursuance of the said conspiracy, and in order that the said goods and chattels might be taken in execution, and sold, as hereinafter mentioned, order and direct that the said goods and chattels so fraudulently obtained on credit as aforesaid, should be delivered by the said several tradesmen respectively, at the house of the said E. A. B, in Bedford Place, Russell Square, in the county of Middlesex aforesaid, and that the goods and chattels were so delivered at the said house, in accordance with the said order and direction; and that no payment, remuneration, or satisfaction for the said goods and chattels, was at the time of such delivery, or at any other time, made, by or on behalf of the said E. A. B, W. H. K, A. D. P, and A. A. B, or by or on behalf of any or either of them, to the said several tradesmen hereinbefore mentioned, or whose names as aforesaid are to the jurors unknown, or to any or either of them, or to any other person or persons authorized by them, or any or either of them, to receive the same; and the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, further present, that in further pursuance of the said conspiracy, and in order that the said goods and chattels might be taken in execution and sold as hereinafter mentioned, the said E. A. B. did then and there, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, allow and procure the said goods and chattels so delivered as aforesaid, to continue and be in her said house, until they were taken in execution, as thereafter mentioned; and the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, further present, that affidavits, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, the said E. A. B, W. H. K, and A. D. P, in further pursuance of the said conspiracy, did falsely and fraudulently pretend, that certain debts were due and owing from the said E. A. B. to the said W. H. K, and A. D. P. respectively, to wit, a fictitious debt of 2,145*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.* pretended to be due and owing from the said E. A. B. to the said W. H. K, and a fictitious debt of 514*l.* 16*s.*, pretended to be due and owing from the said E. A. B. to the said A. D. P.; and that then and there, &c., within the jurisdiction aforesaid, the said W. H. K. and A. D. A. B. separate actions at law against the said E. A. B. in Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster, and in Her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster; and that afterwards, to wit, on the 28th day of February 1842, in further pursuance of the said conspiracy, to wit, in the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, judgments were collusively signed, and caused to be signed by the said W. H. K. and A. D. P. respectively, in each of the said actions for want of a plea; and that afterwards, to wit, on the 1st of March in the year last aforesaid, in further pursuance of the conspiracy, to wit, in the parish and county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, certain writs of fi. fa. were collusively sued out, and caused to be sued out by the said W. H. K. and A. D. P. upon the respective judgments so obtained by collusion as aforesaid, by virtue of which writs, the said goods and chattels so fraudulently obtained as aforesaid, from the said several tradesmen before mentioned, and the said several tradesmen whose names as aforesaid are to the jurors unknown, were within the parish and county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction aforesaid, on the day and year last aforesaid, and before the expiration of the said respective times of credit, taken in execution, and sold in due course of law, in order to satisfy the fictitious debts, falsely and fraudulently alleged to be due and owing from the said E. A. B. to the said W. H. K. and A. D. P. respectively; and so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, find that the said W. H. K., E. A. B. and A. D. P. in the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and in the jurisdiction aforesaid, in manner and by the means aforesaid, unlawfully did cheat and defraud the said W. A. W. and C. W., the said F. B. and W. T., the said J. W. and C. W., the said C. T. and E. E., and the said other tradesmen, liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, who supplied the said goods and chattels as aforesaid, but whose names are to the jurors unknown respectively, of the said goods and chattels, to the great damage of the said several persons so supplying the said goods as aforesaid, to the evil example of all others in like case offending, and against the peace of our Lady the Queen, her crown and dignity.

The indictment having been removed into this court, was tried before Williams, J., in Middlesex, at the sittings after Hilary term, 1844, when the defendants William Henry King and Emily Ann Birch were convicted upon the above count, and the learned Judge then pronounced judgment upon them. One other of the defendants was tried and acquitted. In Easter term, rules were obtained on behalf of the defendants convicted who had defended separately, calling upon the prosecutors to shew cause why the judgment pronounced upon the defendants should not be amended by arresting the judgment in the prosecution. The ground of the motion was, that the count in the indictment was bad.

Humfrey and Montagu Chambers now shewed cause.—The indictment is sufficient, as it clearly shews in the early part of it a conspiracy to do illegal acts; and where the act is in itself illegal, it is not necessary to state the means by which the conspiracy was effected. But if that does not clearly appear in the early part, then the allegation of conspiracy is followed up by a statement of the overt acts, which may be taken in aid to shew a complete offence—The King v. Spragg (1). Lord Mansfield there says, "Here is much more than a bare conspiracy without effect; here is an overt act laid, as I may call it; and it is found that the defendants, according to the conspiracy, &c. actually did indict this man—so that this was a complete formed conspiracy, actually carried into execution." All the statements of overt acts in the indictment are alleged to have been done in pursuance of the conspiracy, and that has been found by the jury. The acts to complete the conspiracy may be acts legal per se, or they may be illegal; but their character is derived from their being done in pursuance of the conspiracy. The King v. Gill (2) is an authority in favour of this indictment. They also referred to The Queen v. Parker (3), The King v. Seward (4), The King v. Biers (5).

Kelly, Godson, Flood, and Pashley, contra.—It cannot be contended that the indictment would have been sufficient if it had concluded in the early part of it, and merely stated, that the defendants conspired, &c. "to cheat and defraud certain liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, being tradesmen, of divers large quantities of their goods and chattels." There is no mention of the persons to be defrauded, nor, consequently, of those to whom the goods belonged—The Queen v. Parker. The name should be given, or it should appear that the names are unknown (6)—The Queen v. Biss (7). Nor is this cured by the statement which follows of overt acts, as it is not alleged that the persons subsequently named, and from whom goods were obtained, are the same persons as those previously spoken of.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It was held in The Queen v. Peck (8), that the omitting to mention the names of the creditors intended to be defrauded was immaterial.]

Then they must be connected by the overt acts; those acts were harmless; they shew a purchase of goods upon an unexpired credit. There is no allegation that they were purchased with an intention never to pay for them, or that the purchaser knew she could not pay for them. It would have been no offence for the debtor, before the expiration of the credit, to dispose of the goods in any way she pleased.

[PATTERSON, J.—Perhaps not, in a bond fide transaction: but here all the overt acts are charged to have been done in pursuance of the conspiracy.]

one would be cheated or defrauded. The Queen v. Parker shews that the principle of The King v. Gill will not be extended. Next the count is bad for duplicity, as it is a statement of two distinct offences, and contains an insufficient charge of conspiracy in the early part, and is bad as a count for obtaining goods under false pretences in the latter—The King v. Perrott (9). They also contended, that The King v. De Berenger (10) was distinguishable, as the conspiracy was there complete without the names of the persons injured; and also cited The King v. Richardson (11), The King v. Fowle (12), The Queen v. Kenrick (13).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—In the case of The King v. Gill, the indictment was held to be good. Mr. Justice Holroyd there says, that it is "quite sufficient to state only the act of conspiring, and the object of the conspiracy, in the indictment." That is stated to be sufficient, as there may be conspiracies entered into to cheat all the world, or where there are many individuals, it may be impossible to name them. I am not prepared to say, in this case, that the first part of the count of this indictment would not be perfectly good if it stood alone; but if more is required than is there stated, then The King v. Spragg shews that the overt acts may be prayed in aid to explain the indictment, and here the overt acts shew that the parties intended to be cheated were, in fact, cheated. It has been objected, that the names of the tradesmen to be cheated are not given in the introductory part of the indictment: to which it may plainly be answered, that the individual parties were probably not in contemplation at that time. But it is said, that the overt acts limit, and cannot extend, the introductory words of the indictment. The overt acts may be in themselves innocent, and their object is to inform the defendant of the means he is charged with using to cheat and defraud, as, for instance, in this case, the information is shortly this, that Birch bought goods on credit, which fact may co-exist with innocence; but the overt acts shew that the parties did those acts in pursuance of the conspiracy, charged in the introductory part of the indictment. Then, the last paragraph of the indictment is no distinct charge of obtaining goods under false pretences, but an unnecessary way of summing up the facts set out as overt acts in the former part of the indictment.

PATTESON, J.—I understand the position laid down by Mr. Starkie, and the cases cited in support of it. They were all upon some one act to cheat and defraud one particular person; but when the conspiracy is general, and all mankind are intended to be defrauded, it is impossible to state names; and it was so distinctly held in The King v. De Berenger. There no names were mentioned, nor was it possible they could be; so here, under the circumstances detailed, the overt acts allege, that one conspirator did obtain goods on credit from A. B, C. D. &c., and divers other persons to the jurors unknown, and it is impossible the indictment could state more. I have no doubt that the indictment would have been good, if it had stopped at the charging part of it, without mentioning any names, and, as in The King v. Gill, without alleging any overt acts; indeed, on the motion for the rule, it was rather put that the indictment was inconsistent, than that it was insufficient. Mr. Pashley, in moving for the rule, stated, that the overt acts charged false pretences without negating them; now, looking at the indictment, there are no grounds for that statement. There are no false pretences, in the ordinary sense, alleged; that is, no false pretences, as used to the persons from whom the goods were obtained. The mode in which the goods were obtained (as alleged in the indictment), was, that they were purchased on credit by one of the defendants, and then delivered at her house, in order that they might be taken in execution and sold, under a pretence of a lawful debt due to the other defendants. Not a shilling was ever paid for them; and if that is not an allegation of overt acts to constitute cheating and defrauding, it is impossible to say what is to be considered sufficient. The fallacy throughout the argument has been, that the counsel for the defendants have argued upon one or two of the overt acts, without taking the whole together.

WILLIAMS, J.—I am of the same opinion. I quite agree that the fallacy has been in overlooking the fact, that the gist of the offence is the conspiracy. The argument comes to this, whether there is a good count without the overt acts. I agree with my Lord Denman, and the same has been stated by my Brother Patteson, that this is a good count. The objection in The Queen v. Parker does not exist here. In this indictment the property in the goods is stated. But supposing the overt acts are brought into consideration, there is nothing in them not directly consistent with the charge in the former part of the indictment. It is said, that each and every overt act must be per se criminal, but I by no means admit the propriety of that proposition. They are merely a statement to shew the nature and quality of the evidence, by which the charge of conspiracy is to be sustained. Here, the obtaining of the goods upon credit, the ordering them to be sent to the house of one of the defendants, the fraudulent pretence of certain debts, the commencement of, and signing judgment in, an action, and the fi. fa. upon that judgment, are all in direct conformity with the principal allegation of a conspiracy to cheat and defraud certain tradesmen. Then, it has been objected, that it is not sufficiently alleged in the indictment, that the goods were the several goods of the persons named; but there is no rule of law which requires that you should make nonsense of an indictment. It is not to be strained to make sense of it, but to be construed according to the ordinary rules of construction.

1844. } BURGESS v. BOETEFEUR AND May 22, 24. } BROWN.*

Overseers, Liability of—25 Geo. 2. c. 36—Disorderly House.

An action, founded on the statute 25 Geo. 2. c. 36, by one of two inhabitants who had given information, &c. to the parish constable of A. R. keeping a disorderly house, in consequence of which A. R. was indicted and pleaded guilty to the charge, was held to be properly brought against two defendants, who, though not overseers at the time of the trial of A. R., were overseers at the time A. R. was brought up for judgment.

*Held also, that it was sufficient to shew a demand made upon, and a refusal made by the defendants to pay the plaintiff the reward of 10*l.* in order to entitle him to maintain the action against them for the double penalty given by the act, although there were also churchwardens, upon whom no demand had been made.*

Quære, Whether churchwardens are overseers within the stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36.

Plea—Nil debet.

The plaintiff was an inhabitant of the parish of Paddington, of which parish the defendants were overseers from Easter 1843 to Easter 1844; and the action was brought in consequence of the refusal of the defendants to pay three several sums of 10*l.* each, to the plaintiff, who, together with another inhabitant of the parish, had given information which led to the conviction of three persons keeping disorderly houses within the parish (1). At the trial, before

Coltman, J., at the Middlesex Sittings in last Hilary term, it appeared that the overseers of the parish, from Easter 1842, to Easter 1843, were two persons named Watson and Carbonell. In September 1842, the plaintiff and another inhabitant, paying scot and lot, gave notice in writing to Wallis, the constable of the parish, as required by stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36, and served the like notice on Watson and Carbonell, the overseers, as required by stat. 58 Geo. 3. c. 70. s. 7, that M. P., A. R., and S. M., severally kept disorderly houses within the parish. Watson and Carbonell declined prosecuting the parties, whereupon the plaintiff and the other inhabitant went before a Justice of the peace, with the constable, and made oath of the truth of the contents of such notices, and they and the constable entered into the recognizances respectively required by the statute. At the October Sessions 1842, M. P., A. R., and S. M., severally pleaded guilty to indictments for keeping a disorderly house. No judgment was then given, but continuances were entered on the roll, and in June 1843, the nuisances having been in the meantime abated, the parties were called up for judgment, and fined 1*s.* each. In March 1843, the plaintiff demanded the reward of 10*l.* from Watson and Carbonell, and, on their refusal, commenced an action against them, which was afterwards abandoned. In November 1843, the plaintiff served the defendants with a written notice, reciting the facts, and demanding the sum of 10*l.* in respect of each of the convictions above mentioned, and for the non-payment of those sums this action was brought. By an admission in the cause, the defendants admitted, "that the defendants, on the 4th of November 1843, were and still are the overseers of the poor of the said parish, duly appointed." At

(1) The statute 25 Geo. 2. c. 36. s. 5. enacts, "In order to encourage prosecutions against persons keeping bawdy-houses, gaming-houses, or other disorderly houses, that if any two inhabitants of any parish or place, paying scot and bearing lot therein, do give notice in writing to any constable (or other peace officer of the like nature where there is no constable) of such parish or place, of any person keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or any other disorderly house, in such parish or place, the constable or such officer as aforesaid, so receiving such notice, shall forthwith go with such inhabitants to one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county, city, riding, division, or liberty in which such parish or place does lie, and shall, upon such inhabitants making oath before such Justice, that they do believe the contents of such notice to be true, and entering into a recognizance in the penal sum of 20*l.* each, to give or produce material evidence against such person for such offence, enter into a recognizance in the penal sum of 30*l.* to prosecute with effect such person for such offence, at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace, or at the next assizes to be holden for the county in which such parish or place doth lie, as to the said Justice shall deem meet; and such constable or other officer shall be allowed all the reasonable expenses of such prosecution, to be ascertained by any two Justices of the peace of the county, city, riding, division, or liberty where the offence shall have been committed, and shall be paid the same by the overseers of the poor of such parish or place; and in case such person shall be convicted of such offence, the overseers of the poor of such parish or place shall forthwith pay the sum of 10*l.* to each of such inhabitants; and in case such overseers shall neglect or refuse to pay to such constable or other officer such expenses of the prosecution as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to pay, upon demand, the said sums of 10*l.* and 10*l.*, such overseers, and each of them, shall forfeit to the person entitled to the same, double the sum so refused or neglected to be paid."

the close of the plaintiff's case it was objected, first, that the defendants were not liable, inasmuch as Watson and Carbonell were overseers at the time of the conviction of the offenders, and the demand for the 10*l.* should, therefore, have been made upon them; secondly, that the demand should have been made upon the churchwardens of the parish, as overseers ex officio, and not on the defendants only. The plaintiff's counsel contended, that the defendants were estopped by their written admission from disputing the fact that they were the overseers at the time the demand was made on them. The learned Judge received evidence proving that there were two churchwardens at the time the demand was made, and reserved leave to the defendants to move for a nonsuit on the two objections raised. The only point left to the jury was whether the prosecutions had been conducted by the constable, as required by the statute; or, as the defendants' counsel contended they had been, by the two inhabitants, of whom the plaintiff was one; in which latter case, on the authority of Clarke v. Rice (2), the action could not be maintained. Upon this point, it was proved that the constable had subpoenaed some of the witnesses for the prosecution, and had had his expenses allowed and paid. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for 60*l.*

Bompas, Serj., in the same term (January 22), obtained a rule nisi for a nonsuit, pursuant to the leave reserved, upon the objections raised at the trial, or for a new trial, on the ground that there was no sufficient evidence that the constable conducted the prosecution.

Byles, Serj. (Corrie with him) now shewed cause.—The defendants were the overseers at the time of the conviction of the offenders in this case, and therefore the proper persons on whom the demand for the 10*l.* reward was made. The term "conviction" may, in popular language, sometimes mean confession or verdict, but in this act of parliament it must mean judgment. The word has been so interpreted in analogous statutes—Sutton v. Bishop (3), Lee v. Gansel (4). A plea of autrefois convict, or autrefois acquit, would not be supported unless there was proof of a judgment; and so in an indictment alleging an offence after a previous conviction, under 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 28. s. 11, the record of the conviction must contain the judgment of the Court—The Queen v. Ackroyd (5). It would be inconvenient to hold otherwise in this case. There might, after verdict of guilty, be a new trial granted, and an acquittal on such second trial. In such case, the verdict on the first trial could not be a conviction entitling the inhabitant to the reward of 10*l.* Again, the overseers, who are to pay the inhabitant the 10*l.*, are the same overseers who are to pay the constable his reasonable expenses, provided he fulfil the condition of his recognizance to prosecute the parties with effect, that is, to judgment. Neither the reward to the inhabitant, nor the expenses of the constable, can be claimed till after judgment. But even if the term "convicted," in the statute, refers to the verdict of the jury, or the confession, by plea of guilty, of the party prosecuted, the reward of 10*l.* is a charge upon the parish funds, which the overseers for the time being are bound to pay on demand. The parish has been the gainer by the prosecution set in motion by the plaintiff; the parish, therefore, are the persons to pay the reward. Would the plaintiff have lost all title to the reward, if the overseers had gone out of office the day after the parties had been convicted, and before the plaintiff had had a reasonable time to demand it of them? The statute says, "the overseers shall forthwith pay;" but the word "forthwith" must receive a reasonable construction—Pybus v. Mitford (6), The King v. Francis (7). Secondly, as to the non-joinder of the churchwardens in the demand made on the defendants as overseers. Even if the defendants are not estopped from raising this objection, by the admission made in the cause, that they were the overseers, that is, the overseers in the sense of the words in this statute upon which they are sued, churchwardens are not overseers within this statute. Though the 43 Eliz. enacts, that churchwardens shall be overseers ex officio, yet that very statute, in other sections, makes a distinction between churchwardens and overseers; and whenever, in other statutes (8), churchwardens are comprehended in the term "overseers," it has been necessary so to state in the interpretation clause. Public officers are not to be made liable to a penalty, without words expressly imposing the liability on them. It is no answer to an action against these defendants that others have not been applied to. Notice to one is notice to all—The King v. the Justices of Norfolk (9), The King v. the Justices of Warwickshire (10). Each of the overseers refusing is liable to the penalty, and might have been sued alone.

Channell, Serj. (V. Lee with him), contra.

—First, the conviction in this case took place when the parties indicted pleaded guilty. It may be conceded, that to prove a conviction, it may be necessary to produce a record of the judgment on that conviction. This was the effect of the decisions in Sutton v. Bishop and Lee v. Gansell. But this does not determine the question as to the meaning of the word itself.

[CRESSWELL, J.—A person convicted of perjury is disqualified thereby as a witness. Is it in such case the verdict or the judgment which disqualifies?]

The verdict produces the disqualification; the judgment is the proper legal evidence that that verdict is operative.

[COLTMAN, J.—If the right of the plaintiff to the reward attached immediately upon the confession of the parties indicted, as you contend, and he had made his demand, and brought his action immediately, and before judgment, he would have been unable to prove that the parties were convicted.]

The defect in the means of proof of a fact is not conclusive against the fact. The question is, what is the meaning of the word "convicted"? and not only in popular, but in legal language, the term is continually used as distinguished from judgment, which may or may not follow upon conviction—4 Blackstone's Commentaries, pp. 329, 362. By this statute, the inhabitants are not bound to prosecute with effect, but merely to give material evidence. If they fulfil that condition of their recognizance, and a verdict passes against the party indicted, they have nothing more to do with the matter, and are entitled to the reward, although the prosecutor may not call the party up for judgment, and they have no means of compelling him to do so. Again, by stat. 58 Geo. 3. c. 70, the overseers are to have notice of the disorderly houses complained of, and are to have the option of conducting the prosecution themselves, and it is such overseers who are to pay the reward. The defendants never had that option, nor does it appear, from the written demand served upon them, that they ever had any notice of the proceedings until the demand was made upon them. Further, the written demand does not state that the conviction took place when the defendants were overseers. There had been a previous demand on Watson and Carbonell, and the plaintiff cannot make more than one demand in such case. Lastly, churchwardens are overseers, and admitting that a notice addressed to all would have been good, though served on one only, this is a demand upon only a portion of the overseers. Non constat, that the churchwardens have not paid the reward.

TINDAL, C.J.—This case comes before us on a motion that the defendants may enter a nonsuit, or that there may be a new trial. The grounds on which a nonsuit is asked for are three. In the first place, it is said, that the action has been brought against the wrong overseers; that the penalty was incurred by, and should have been enforced against the overseers of 1842, whereas the defendants are the overseers of 1843. Secondly, it is urged, that the demand made upon the defendants was insufficient and improper; and the third objection is, that no action will lie against two overseers only for the penalty, where no demand for the 10*l.* has been made upon all of them. The first is the main and principal ground of objection relied on. The action is brought upon the stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36, because though by a subsequent act, 58 Geo. 3. c. 70, it is put into the power of the parish officers, if they think proper, to become themselves the prosecutors of disorderly houses, upon notice thereof given to them, yet, if they decline interfering, that later statute allows the prosecution to go on as before: and as it appears that in the present case, the plaintiff did

(8) 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76; 39 & 40 Geo. 3. c. 99, 57 Geo. 3. c. 29; 59 Geo. 3. c. 12, were referred to.

bring the matter to the notice of the parish officers, who thought it expedient, no doubt from most proper motives, not to interfere, the case must stand altogether upon the previous statute of Geo. 2.—[His Lordship then read section 5. of the statute.] The first point is, who were the overseers of the parish of Paddington at the time of the conviction of these parties? It appears that when the parties were brought before the Sessions, they pleaded guilty; and it is contended, on the part of the defendants, that such confession was the conviction; on the part of the plaintiff, it is said, that there was no conviction until they were brought up for judgment. Undoubtedly, the word conviction is verbum equivocum. It is used in both the senses contended for. In common parlance no doubt it is taken to mean, the verdict at the time of trial, but in strict legal sense it is used to denote the judgment of the Court. In one of the extracts which has been read from Blackstone, the word is used in the same sentence in both these senses. What meaning then does it bear here? In order to determine this, we cannot do better than look to decided cases, and see what meaning the Court has attached to the word in analogous statutes. And I cannot help thinking that Sutton v. Bishop is decisive on this point. That was an action, like this, to recover a penalty under a statute, and the question turned upon the meaning to be attached to the word, "convicted" of an offence under that statute. The Court there said, "Though there is a distinction, in criminal cases, between the conviction and attainder, yet there is no such distinction in civil cases between verdict and judgment, so as that any effect can follow from a naked verdict. In a civil action no penalty takes place till judgment be given on the verdict. The penalty is demanded as a debt, and is not due till judgment is given. Any other construction would open the door to frauds. An offender would prosecute another to verdict, and thereby secure his own indemnity, and then proceed no further." Why does not the same reasoning apply here? It would open the door to fraud just as much here as there, if the mere confession of the party prosecuted, without any judgment being pronounced thereon, were held to be a sufficient conviction. The inhabitant might go only so far as to secure his

10*l.* by entering into a recognizance to give material evidence: the party prosecuted might agree to plead guilty, and might never be prosecuted to judgment. In the same way the word "acquittal" is also verbum equivocum, and may in ordinary language be used to express either the verdict of a jury, or the formal judgment of the Court, that the prisoner go thereof without day. But there can be no doubt, if we bring the words to a strict legal test, that nothing would suffice to support a plea of autrefois acquit, or autrefois convict, but the production of the judgment. I think, therefore, looking to the object of this statute, to the decisions of the Courts upon analogous statutes, and to the propriety of applying to acts of parliament the rules of legal interpretation, that the present defendants were the overseers at the time of the conviction of these offenders, and are therefore so far properly made defendants in this action. The next objection is, that the demand made in this case does not shew that the proceedings had taken place according to the provisions of the statute. I think the defendants are not at liberty to raise this objection now. It was not raised at the trial, nor in moving for the rule, and non constat, if it had been made at the trial, that the plaintiff might not have answered it. No written demand is necessary, and the plaintiff might have shewn a demand made by word of mouth. Thirdly, it is objected, that churchwardens are overseers ex officio, as much as overseers who have been nominated by the Justices, and therefore that the demand in this case should have been upon the churchwardens as well as the overseers. It seems to me unnecessary to determine, whether churchwardens are overseers within the meaning of this statute, because the words of the statute are, that on refusal "such overseers and each of them, shall forfeit." &c. Now, it is clear, that these words do not mean that there shall be a separate penalty incurred by each of the overseers, but that the person entitled to the 10*l.* may make his demand upon each severally, and in case any one of them refuse may sue him for the penalty. We know that in many cases, under private acts of parliament, the number of overseers may be very great. It might be impossible to serve them all with notice of demand. Some of them might be absent from the parish, and it would be throwing an unnecessary burden on a party entitled to a reward to make service of his demand upon all the overseers essential to his recovery of it. I think, therefore, this demand sufficient to ground the present action. If the other overseers, not sued in this action, had paid the plaintiff the 10*l.* to which he was entitled, that would have been an answer to the action on the merits. It is not pretended, however, that such has been the case. As to a new trial, I agree that had there been no evidence of the constable's prosecuting, there would not have been sufficient to maintain the action. But I think there was evidence of it here. It is suggested, that it is a great hardship on a parish to be compelled to pay such large sums of money to persons who may get up these prosecutions for the sake of the reward. I agree that cases may occur where wicked persons combining together may defraud the parish of money. But such conspiracy would be brought to light by evidence, or would be the subject of an indictment against the parties. Here the parish had the option of prosecuting, which they did not choose to exercise: they have had the benefit of the plaintiff's exertions in suppressing a nuisance, and the defendants have brought this action on themselves by the refusal to pay him the reward.

COLTMAN, J.—The great point here is, what is meant by the word "convicted" in this statute? Looking to the object which the statute has in view, it seems to me that there must be a conviction followed up by a judgment to entitle the inhabitant to the reward. It is for the benefit rendered to the parish by driving improper persons out of it that the reward is given, and this object is not attained unless the offenders are prosecuted to judgment. As to the second point, that the demand was insufficient for not shewing that the conviction took place at the time the defendants were overseers, I agree with my Lord in thinking that this objection is not open to the defendants now. As to the third point, that the demand is bad, not having been made upon the churchwardens, I at first felt some doubt and hesitation, but on consideration I think it was not necessary. The act says, "in case such person shall be convicted, the overseers of the poor of such parish shall forthwith pay the sum of 10*l.*," &c. This casts a duty upon the overseers, and upon all of them, including the churchwardens. But it is not this obligation to pay, which is the cause of action here. The section goes on to give a remedy to the person entitled to the 10*l.*, not simply on the overseers' default in that duty, but only in case such overseers shall neglect or refuse to pay upon demand the said sum of 10*l.* The action vests only upon demand and refusal, and only against those parties upon whom a demand is made; and as the act says, "such overseers, and each of them, shall forfeit double the sum," &c. it is not necessary to make a demand upon each in order to entitle the party to proceed against any. A difficulty occurred to me, as the action might be brought against one overseer only upon his refusal after demand, whether there was not a misjoinder in this case—whether the action was not brought against too many: but, on consideration, I think, that as there is to be but one sum of 10*l.* paid as the reward, the action may properly be brought against all jointly, who have had a demand made on them, and have refused to pay.

CRESSWELL, J. (11)—I am entirely of the same opinion. As to the first point, I think, the overseers who are liable to this payment, are the overseers at the time of the conviction of the offenders by the judgment of the Court. Whether we look at this statute, or at analogous statutes, I think this is clearly the meaning to be attached to the term "conviction." The word itself is ambiguous. Look then at the object of the statute. The reward is given to the inhabitants, not for any particular step in the prosecution of persons keeping disorderly houses, but for putting in motion proceedings which end in a benefit to the parish, the suppression of houses against good morals. The inhabitants are not entitled to a reward for giving evidence, but having put the constable or the overseers in motion as prosecutors, the inhabitants are then bound by their recognizances to aid them by giving material evidence. The constable then enters into a recognizance to prosecute with effect. But a verdict, not followed by judgment, might be wholly ineffectual to put down the nuisance complained of. It seems to me that the reward is to be paid in respect of the service done to the parish by the inhabitant who put in motion proceedings which terminate in the abatement of the nuisance. There are many analogous statutes which provide that rewards shall be given to persons prosecuting to conviction certain felons. In all those cases it is perfectly clear that conviction means judgment; for, in those cases, to entitle a party to the reward he must have a certificate of the conviction signed by the Judge before whom the felon was tried. I think the same construction applicable here. As to the second point, I concur with my Lord, and my Brother Gokman. I also concur as to the third ground of nonsuit urged, though I have during the argument certainly entertained some doubt. But looking at the section, and admitting that the word "overseer" may, as there used, include churchwardens, the duty of paying the 10*l.* is a duty cast upon them all; and a payment by one would be a payment by all. But if there is no payment of the 10*l.*, I think it is those only on whom the demand is made who incur the penalty for the refusal, and that the plaintiff was not bound to make the demand on all. I quite concur in thinking that there was evidence sufficient to shew that the constable conducted the prosecution; and therefore that there is no ground either for a nonsuit or a new trial.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. THE INHABITANTS
May 29. } OF SHIPSTON-UPON-STOUR.

Examination, Sufficiency of Signature of Magistrate—Order of Removal.

The copies of all the examinations sent; under the provision of the New Poor Law Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 79, must shew on the face of them that they were taken before two Magistrates; and it is not sufficient that the Magistrates who take the first examination, (which sets out their character as such) sign their names to the subsequent examination.

It is not an objection to an order of removal of a mother and her illegitimate child, that it adjudicates the settlement of both the mother and child to be in the mother's parish.

On an appeal against an order of two Justices of the county of Worcester, for the removal of Sarah Sutton, single woman, and her illegitimate child, William, from the parish of Shipston-upon-Stour, to the parish of Atherstone, the Court of Quarter Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following

CASE.

By order, bearing date the 31st day of December 1842, to W. Dickens and H. Townsend, clerk, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, acting in and for the county of Worcester, whose names are thereunto set, and seals affixed, upon examination of the premises upon oath, and other circumstances, adjudged the place of the last legal settlement of Sarah Sutton, single woman, and her illegitimate child, William, to be in the parish of Atherstone-upon-Stour, in the county of Warwick. The examinations sent to the appellant parish with the said order of removal, were, so far as is material to the decision of the Court, as follows: The examination of Sarah Sutton, (the pauper) taken upon oath before us, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the county of Worcester, who, upon her oath, saith, "I am about twenty-four years of age. I have not, to the best of my knowledge and belief, gained any settlement in my own right. About seven weeks ago I was delivered of a male bastard child, in the parish of Shipston-upon-Stour, which has since been christened William." Taken and sworn before us this 31st day of December 1842,

(Signed) William Dickens,
H. Townsend.

The mark + of Sarah Sutton.

Then immediately followed, on the same sheet of paper, the examination of Patience Randall, the wife of Thomas Randall, of Shipston-upon-Stour, in the county of Worcester, labourer, taken this 31st day of December 1842, who upon her oath saith, "that the pauper, Sarah Sutton, is my daughter; that she was born at the parish of Atherstone-upon-Stour, in the county of Warwick, and is about the age of twenty-four years, and is illegitimate, being born before I was married." Taken and sworn this 31st day of December 1842, before us,

(Signed) William Dickens,
H. Townsend.

The mark + of Patience Randall.

These two examinations filled the second and third pages of the sheet of paper; the first page of which was occupied by the notice of chargeability and order of removal. The whole was duly sent by the overseers of the respondent parish to the overseers of the appellant parish. There were twelve grounds of appeal; but those upon which the Court of Quarter Sessions grounded their decision are as follows: first, that the said examinations are defective and insufficient in this, that it is nowhere therein alleged, nor does it appear that the said Sarah Sutton is not a widow, or that she never acquired any settlement by marriage. Secondly, that the examination of the said Sarah Sutton contains no legal evidence, shewing, that she or her said child are, or either of them is, settled in our said parish of Atherstone-upon-Stour. Thirdly, that it does not appear in and by the said examination, or any part thereof, that the examination of the said Patience Randall was taken before two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, of the county of Worcester, nor that she was examined before two Justices of the Peace, for the county of Worcester, touching the place of the legal settlement of the said Sarah Sutton, or before the said Justices, who signed the said order of removal. Fourthly, that the said order of removal, as regards the said William, is bad and erroneous in this, that it adjudicates as to his settlement in our said parish of Atherstone-upon-Stour, absolutely; whereas it should have adjudged and ordered, that, as an illegitimate child, he should have and follow the settlement of his mother the said Sarah Sutton, until he should attain the age of sixteen only. Before the appeal was called on for hearing the counsel for the appellants contended, that the order ought to be quashed, upon the objections contained in the grounds of appeal above set forth; and the Court, after argument, were of that opinion, and quashed the same accordingly. If the Court of Queen's Bench should be of opinion that the objections stated in either of the first three grounds of appeal, were fatal to the sufficiency of the examinations, then the order of the Court of Quarter Sessions to be confirmed; or, if they should be of opinion that the order was bad, only upon the objections raised in the fourth ground of appeal, above stated, then the said order was to be quashed, so far as regarded the said William, otherwise the case to be sent back to the Sessions, to be heard upon the merits.

Selfe and Beadon, in support of the order of Sessions.—First, though the examination is framed with technical particularity in other respects, it does not shew that the pauper, Sarah Sutton, never was married; and the Sessions are, in all cases, to judge whether there is sufficient particularity—The Queen v. Bridgewater (1).

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears that she is a single woman and the mother of an illegitimate child.]

Then, secondly, Patience Randall's examination is not stated to have been taken before two Justices; there is no heading to her examination, and the jurat gives no description of the persons before whom it is sworn.

[COLERIDGE, J.—The day is the same with that on which the first examination was taken; the names are the same, and they are both on the same paper.]

The observations of Williams, J., in The Queen v. Silkstone (2), are applicable to this case. The result of the decisions, under the Poor Law Act, goes to shew that examinations are to be construed with the same strictness as orders; and such a defect as this would vitiate an order—The King v. Stepney (3), The King v. Bourn (4). Lastly, the order is bad, as to the child, for the reason stated in the fourth ground of appeal. It cannot be said that the child is settled in Atherstone, but he follows the mother's settlement, until he attains the age of sixteen—4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 71. Such an order would conclude the appellants, as to the settlement of the child, in any future appeal.

Whitmore and Huddleston, contra.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J.—You need not trouble yourself on the third objection.]

As to the second, though it might be a good objection, if it were shewn that, in point of fact, the examinations were not all taken before the same Magistrates, yet it need not be shewn affirmatively, by the respondents, that they were so taken. The statute

4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 79. requires that "a copy of the examinations" shall be sent; it is by no means clear that this requisition would not be satisfied, though no jurat were sent; it is not indeed directed that they shall in the first instance be taken in writing. But, secondly, it may be collected, on the face of these examinations, that they were all, in fact, taken before the same Magistrates. The identity of names and dates makes out a prima facie case of identity of persons: then, again, they are called examinations, and are on the same paper, and sent with the order. The Court will make every fair and reasonable intendment to support the order—The Queen v. Rotherham (5).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—On considering one of the objections taken, we think that there is much more in it than at first appeared: I allude to the mode of taking the examinations. We have, first, "the examination of Sarah Sutton, the pauper, taken on oath, before us, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, &c., who, on her oath, saith," &c. To this examination there is a jurat "taken and sworn before us," with the signature of the Magistrates; and immediately following, on the same paper, we have "the examination of Patience Randall, taken on this 31st of December, who, on her oath saith," &c., and then follows the jurat, "taken and sworn before us," and the signature of the same names as the preceding examination. It is to be observed, that it is not stated, either in the body of this latter examination, or in the jurat, that such examination was taken before persons having authority to administer an oath. It is, however, contended, that this need not appear, and that a copy of the contents of the examination is substantially sufficient to satisfy the requisition of the new Poor Law Act. I am not satisfied that such is the case. In my opinion, the proper course is to set out the whole examination. We cannot assume, in this case, that this has not been done, which would be tantamount to assuming that the parties sent an imperfect copy, merely to raise the question as to how much it is necessary to send. The first examination is sufficiently set out. The second, standing alone, does not purport to be taken before two Justices; but it only shews that it was taken before two individuals. The objection has been well taken on the grounds of appeal; and I think the objection is good, and that the evidence was insufficient.

PATTERSON, J.—We must look at these examinations with the same strictness as if they were true copies. Suppose you struck out both jurats, then it would appear that the first was taken before two Magistrates; but it could not be contended that there was anything in the second examination to shew that it was so taken; and the jurats themselves do not shew it. In fact, it is only at the heading of the first examination that this appears at all. Could Patience Randall, then, be indicted for perjury on this examination? I think not. As to the second examination being on the same paper with the first, if we held the second sufficient on that ground, I do not see to what length we might not be called upon to go in any other case. The next thing we should be asked to do would be to admit two separate affidavits in a cause, merely because they were made on the same paper, though only one appeared to be made before a commissioner, and no reference made by one to the other.

WILLIAMS, J.—I was at first struck by the observation of Mr. Whitmore, that the act only required a copy of the examination to be sent, and not the whole examination itself. The case, however, treats the examination itself as the imperfect document; and the question sent to us assumes, that the fault, if any, is in the examination itself: treating it, then, as a question arising on the examination, it comes to this—would such an examination support an indictment for perjury? The examination of Patience Randall contains no reference whatever to the parties before whom the first examination was taken, nor is there any qualification shewn to exist in the parties who take such examination.

COLERIDGE, J.—I come to the same conclusion with the rest of the Court; though with great regret, and some hesitation. The safe rule, however, as it seems to me, for the Court to adopt, is to treat the objection as one taken to the examination itself. The appellants are entitled to assume that the copy is a true one. I do not go the whole length of treating such a document as this, as an order of Magistrates, as Mr. Beadon contends, for if, in general, the Magistrates were satisfied that such examinations are sufficiently distinct, the Court would uphold them; not so with orders: nevertheless, as applied to everything which gives the Magistrates jurisdiction, the same rule holds in both cases. I think as to Patience Randall's examination, there clearly is not enough of itself to shew that it was properly taken. But it is said that we must assume it to have been taken before the same persons as the former examination, because the names are the same, and it is written on the same paper as the first examination, and that the time and names are the same; but I agree with my Brother Patteson, that if we take that into account, there is no knowing where we are to stop. This is in the nature of parol evidence, and we might, by the same rule, receive parol evidence, to shew that the handwriting is the same in each case.

Indictment—Conspiracy—General Allegation—Evidence—Revenue.

An indictment charged the defendants with conspiring to cause goods which had been imported, &c., and in respect of which certain duties of customs were payable to the Queen, to be carried away from port without payment of duties, with intent to defraud the Queen in her revenue of customs. There were also counts charging the defendants generally with conspiring to defraud the Queen of duties by false and fraudulent representations of the value and nature of the goods:—Held, that the gist of the indictment being the conspiracy, the indictment was sufficiently certain, without shewing what the goods were, or what duties were payable on them.

Upon the trial, B, one of the defendants, only was present; T, the other defendant, having absconded. The evidence shewed that, under the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 52, (for the regulation of the customs;) it was the duty of T, as agent of the importer, to make certain entries, called "sight entries," upon which entries warrants would be granted for the examination of the goods by B, whose duty it would be to enter the actual contents of the cases in a book, called "the Blue Book," the examination being made in the presence of T, who would thus also become aware of the actual contents, and should make therefrom what is called "a perfect entry," and transmit it to B, whose duty it would be to compare it with the "Blue Book," and if the "perfect entry" and "Blue Book" corresponded, to write the word "correct" across the "perfect entry," when, upon payment of the duty thus ascertained, the goods would be delivered.

Evidence was given of thirteen different transactions of passing goods through the Custom House, in which both B. and T. had been concerned, the "sight entries" and "perfect entries," in all of them being proved to be in the handwriting of T, and the entries in the Blue Book, with the word "correct" written across the "perfect entries," being proved to be in the handwriting of B. All the entries were proved to be false.

It was then proposed to put in evidence a day-book of T, containing entries in his handwriting, relative to the thirteen several transactions, and shewing the amount of duties actually paid, as the importer's agent. This book had been found in the counting-house of T, who carried on business in partnership (not with B.) as Custom House agents:—Held, that the day-book was admissible in evidence.

It was also proposed to put in evidence against B. the butt or counterfoil of T's bank cheque-book, which had also been obtained from his counting-house, and which purported to shew that part of the monies of which the Customs had been defrauded in these transactions had been paid to B:—Held, that this was no act done in pursuance of the conspiracy, so as to make the entry evidence against B, and was no more than a declaration or statement by a co-conspirator to a third party, as to the result of the conspiracy.

This was an information at the instance of the Attorney General, charging the defendants with a conspiracy to defraud her Majesty of certain duties of customs.

dants did unlawfully and fraudulently conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together and, with divers persons unknown, &c., to cause and procure certain goods, wares, and merchandises, which had been theretofore imported, and brought into the port of London from parts beyond the seas, and in respect whereof certain duties of customs were then and there due and payable to our said Lady the Queen, to be taken and carried away from the said port, and to be delivered to the respective owners thereof, without payment of a great part of the duties of customs so then and there due and payable thereon as aforesaid, with intent thereby, then and there to defraud our said Lady the Queen in her said revenue of the customs. The second count charged a similar conspiracy to defraud the Crown of duties, "by false and fraudulent representations and statements of and concerning the numbers, measures, weights, and values respectively of certain foreign goods and merchandises, which had been and were theretofore imported, and brought into the said port of London from parts beyond the seas, and in respect whereof certain duties of customs were then and there due and payable to our said Lady the Queen, according to the numbers, measures, weights, and values respectively, of the said foreign goods, wares, and merchandises respectively."

The third count charged a similar conspiracy to defraud, "by fraudulently omitting and neglecting to make and give a true, full, and correct declaration and description of the particulars of the numbers, measures, weights, and values respectively, of certain foreign goods, wares, and merchandise respectively, which had been and were theretofore imported and brought into the said port of London from parts beyond the seas, and in respect whereof certain duties of customs were then and there due and payable to our said Lady the Queen, according to the numbers, measures, weights, and values respectively, of the said foreign goods, wares, and merchandises respectively." The fourth count charged, "That the defendants conspired to cheat and defraud our said Lady the Queen of divers large sums of money then being due and payable to our said Lady the Queen, in respect of the duties of customs of this realm."

At the trial, before Lord Denman, C.J. at the Sittings at Guildhall, after last Michaelmas term, the defendant Blake alone appeared, Tye having absconded. The evidence offered on behalf of the Crown shewed, that at the time of the occurrence of the transactions which gave rise to the information, Blake was one of the landing waiters at the Custom House in London, and Tye and a partner (trading under the name of F. & J. Smith & Co.) were agents at the Custom House for importers of goods, in respect of the duties payable to the Crown upon the importation. In pursuance of the act 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 62, for the general regulation of the customs, the importer of goods, or his agent, is required within fourteen days after the arrival of the ship, to deliver to the collector or comptroller, either a perfect entry of the goods imported, or if the contents of the cases are unknown, and he is therefore unable to declare the contents, then an entry by bill of lading, from which a perfect entry is subsequently made.

Where the entry is by bill of lading, the collector grants a warrant thereupon, in order that the goods may be provisionally landed, and may be seen and examined by the landing waiter, in the presence of the importer or his agent. Upon such examination of the goods, it is the duty of the landing waiter to enter in a certain book, called the "Blue Book," as each package of goods is opened and examined, a true account of the description and quantity of goods contained therein, and then return the Blue Book to the registrar, and the landing waiter should not permit the goods to be delivered until he has received a "perfect entry," signed by the proper officers, denoting that the duty upon the contents of the "perfect entry" has been paid. He then compares the "perfect entry" with his Blue Book, and if he finds them to correspond, he writes across the "perfect entry" the word "correct," with the initial letters of his name, and then delivers the goods. The "perfect entry" is made by the importer or his agent, from the account which he himself has taken upon the examination of the goods by the landing waiter, which "perfect entry," being checked by the proper officer, is passed for the duty chargeable upon such goods. It appeared that there were three teen different transactions of passing goods through the Custom House, in which both the defendants had been concerned. In all these cases, there had been a "sight entry," (or entry by bill of sight,) an entry in the "Blue Book," and a "perfect entry." The sight entries and perfect entries were in each case proved to be in the handwriting of the defendant Tye, as agent of the importer, and in each case the entry in the Blue Book was in the handwriting of the defendant Blake, as the landing waiter, and had also the word "correct," and his initials, proved to be in his writing. The several entries in the "Blue Book" and the "perfect entries" were shewn to be false, and to contain smaller quantities than the real contents of the cases. After this proof had been given, it was proposed to put in evidence the day-book of the defendant Tye, which contained entries in his handwriting relative to the several thirteen transactions, and which entries respectively shewed the amount of duty actually paid by him, as the importer's agent, with the date of each transaction, corresponding in date and amount with the perfect entry. This day-book had been found at the counting-house of Tye and his partner. It was objected, that this evidence was inadmissible against the defendant Blake, as it was said that there was nothing at that time to connect Blake with Tye, who was charged with having conspired with him. His Lordship received the evidence. It was also proposed, as part of the proof connected with the ninth transaction, to give in evidence the butt or counterfoil of Tye's bank cheque-book. This book had also been obtained from his counting-house. It appeared that the real amount of duty, payable in this case to the Crown, was 26*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.*, which sum Tye had charged and received from Messrs. Smith & Anderson, the importers, as their agent. The "Blue Book" and "perfect entry" shewed the amount payable, and paid, to have been 19*l.* 3*s.*, by which the Crown was defrauded of 7*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* In this case the "sight entry" was dated the 13th of September 1841, and the entry in the "Blue Book," the "sight entry," and the "perfect entry" were dated the 14th of September. On the counterfoil of the cheque, dated the 4th of October, was the following entry, in Tye's handwriting:—

4th Octr. 1841.
Initials, D. B.
S. & A.	£7 10 5
Gloves..	79 16 0
P. S. ..	12 12 0
111	64 2 0

The cheque itself was not produced. It was contended, that "S. & A. 7*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*" clearly referred to Smith & Anderson, and to the amount in which the Crown had been defrauded in that case. It was also objected, that this was no evidence against the defendant Blake, being a mere statement or memorandum in writing by Tye, of something done by him alone, and not any act done in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy. His Lordship received the evidence with considerable doubt as to its admissibility, and evidence was then given, tracing a note for 10*l.*, which had been given as part cash to Tye for the cheque of 82*l.*, to the possession of the defendant Blake. Blake was found guilty. Upon being brought up for judgment in Hilary term (January 25th)—

Cockburn moved for a new trial, on the ground of the improper reception of evidence, and contended, that as Tye had not been upon his trial, his ledger or day-book was not evidence against Blake, as at the time it was offered there was no conspiracy established between Blake and Tye, so as to make the act of one evidence against the other, on the ground of being an act done in furtherance of the conspiracy. He cited 1 East's P. C. 96, 2 Russell on Crimes and Misdemeanours, 570, The King v. Salter (1), The King v. Stone (2), The King v. Hardy (3). He next contended, that the writing in the counterfoil of the cheque was clearly inadmissible against Blake. Even assuming at the time it was offered that there was some evidence of a conspiracy between Tye and Blake, yet the writing upon the counterfoil of the cheque was a mere statement or memorandum of Tye's—not in any way done in furtherance of the common design, and not so receivable against Blake. That it was no more than if Tye had told a third person, that he had given Blake a sum of money on account of goods fraudulently passed at the Custom House. The cheque was not produced, though a sum of 10*l.*, alleged to have been part of the proceeds of it, were traced to Blake, which was perhaps legitimate evidence. But the objection is, that the writing upon the counterfoil was not admissible, as it was no more than a simple declaration of Tye's. He also moved in arrest of judgment. None of the counts of the indictment contain a sufficient statement of any offence punishable by law. The indictment charges generally in each count the conspiracy to procure goods which had been previously imported, and in respect of which "certain duties of customs" were due and payable to the Crown, to be carried away, &c. Now, though it may be true, that in an indictment for a conspiracy, the means may be subject of general allegation, yet enough of the nature of the offence should be shewn to make it appear whether the acts of the parties amount to a crime in law. In The King v. Horne (4), De Grey, C.J. says, "The charge must contain such a definite description of the crime, that the defendant may know what crime it is which he is called upon to answer, and that the jury may appear to be warranted in the conclusion of guilty or not guilty, and that the Court may see how to apply the punishment." Revenue duties are created by statute, and it would be no offence at common law to import, or to conspire to import, goods without the payment of such duties (5). It should, therefore, appear on the face of the indictment, whether these were goods on which customs duties were payable. Again, unless the nature of the goods is shewn, the defendant will not be able to plead autrefois acquit or autrefois convict, in the event of a second indictment for the same offence. The case of The King v. Everett (6) is precisely in point. There it was held not sufficient to allege that a party had attempted to bribe a custom-house officer to forbear to seize goods, without shewing the facts from which the duty to seize them arose, though it was alleged that it was his duty to seize goods forfeited for being illegally imported, and that the goods in question had been illegally imported and forfeited. The Court there said, it is not every man in the service of the customs, who is empowered to seize goods imported without payment of duty, and that the allegation that it was his duty to seize the goods, was an allegation of matter of law; so here, the payment of duty is matter of law, arising on the construction of particular acts of parliament. If this indictment is good, it might well be contended, that an indictment for conspiring to import goods without payment of duties, without averring that they were liable to duties, would also be good.

That was for conspiring to defraud parties of money, but the term "duties" involves a mixed question of law and fact. The objection applies equally to all the counts.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—I think that there is not the smallest ground for doubting the goodness of the indictment. The first count charges the defendants with conspiring to procure certain goods which had been imported and brought into the port of London, and were already landed, and in respect of which certain duties of customs were due and payable to our Lady the Queen, to be taken and carried away from the said port, and to be delivered to the respective owners thereof without payment to the Queen of her duties. The last count contains a general charge of a conspiracy to defraud Her Majesty of monies payable for duties, &c.; and the objection taken would apply to that count as well as to the others; but I think the indictment is perfectly good, as it is matter of evidence what the particular goods were, and to what duty they were liable. Parties may conspire together to defraud the Queen of duties payable on goods, without knowing precisely what the goods or the duties are. This is not like the case of The King v. Everett, where an indictment for bribing an officer not to do certain things, was held bad, because it was not shewn how it became his duty to do them.

(6) 8 B. & C. 114; s. c. 6 Law J. Rep. M.C. 83.

(7) 2 B. & Ald. 204.

PATTERSON, J.—The first count states that the goods were liable to duty, and the conspiracy is laid to be to defraud the Crown of the duty. Therefore, it shews the offence, which is charged as far as it can be done in a case of this kind. The gist of the offence is the conspiracy, and that is sufficiently stated. With respect to the objection that is raised as to the difficulty of pleading autrefois acquit or autrefois convict, the question must, in ninety-nine out of a hundred cases of conspiracy, be one of evidence. Suppose, for instance, the case of an indictment for a conspiracy to bring the House of Commons into contempt: in such an indictment the means need not be set out. Therefore, if there was a subsequent indictment for the same offence, the question as to what the particular charge was on the former occasion would be a matter of evidence. In cases of conspiracy, the charge is scarcely ever made with so much particularity, but that evidence of the nature of the charge would be necessary, in the event of the party wishing to plead autrefois acquit or autrefois convict.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion. In the case of The King v. Gill the indictment charged that the defendants conspired by divers false pretences and subtle means and devices, to obtain from A. divers large sums of money, and to cheat and defraud him thereof; there it was held, that the gist of the action being the conspiracy, it was sufficient to state the act and object of the conspiracy, and that the specific pretences need not be stated. The objection which has been urged against this indictment would apply to almost every case of conspiracy to defraud a third party. In the event of a plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict, the nature of the means must be supplied by parol evidence.

Rule nisi for arresting the judgment refused.

Upon a subsequent day—a rule nisi having been granted for a new trial, on the ground of the improper reception of the above evidence—

Theisiger (Solicitor General) and W. F. Pollock, now shewed cause.—First, as to the day-book of Tye. It was not necessary actually to have proved a conspiracy, before the book could be admitted, though at the time of its admission much evidence of a conspiracy had been given. Tye's handwriting to the sight entries and to the perfect entries had been proved, and Blake's handwriting to the Blue Book. The contents of the cases had been shewn to be larger than the entries in the Blue Book would make them. Those entries were therefore false, and were made from an examination of the goods, in Tye's presence, and from which examination he made the perfect entry. There was, therefore, strong evidence of concert, independent of the day-book, and that book was admissible as a further step in proof of the conspiracy, which might be established by the joint or separate acts of each conspirator. It was for the jury to say whether the acts were done to carry out the common design—The Queen v. Murphy (8). It is difficult to collect from the cases any general rule as to admissibility of evidence of this nature on indictments for conspiracy. The cases that were relied upon in moving for the rule, only shew that where the conspiracy is of a general description, as to create disaffection towards the government, or to convey treasonable intelligence to the enemy, the conspiracy of several to act in concert must be established by proof, before evidence can be given of acts done not in the presence of the prisoner. If it has not been so established, the link to connect the prisoner with the act is wanting. But here the common object had been established, and evidence of the part that each took would not therefore be rejected. Secondly, the writing upon the counterpart of the cheque was also admissible. That was made at the time the cheque was drawn, and was not a history of the cheque, but in the nature of a declaration accompanying an act. A fraud upon the government in respect of the ninth transaction had been established, and a sum less than the duty, by 7*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*, had only been accounted for, while the real importers had been charged the larger sum. It was important, therefore, to shew that Blake had received a portion of the 7*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* This was receivable upon the principle of the decision in The King v. Watson (9). Nor does it make any difference that Tye was not upon his trial (10).

Cockburn, contra, was not called upon.

(8) 3 Car. & Pay. 297.

(9) 2 Stark. N.P.C. 140.

(10) 2 Stark. on Evid. 329.

Lord DENMAN, C.J.—The rule must be made absolute for a new trial, for the improper reception of the second piece of evidence objected to. Upon the first point, the evidence was clearly receivable; it was an entry made in the course of the transaction, which could not have been proved by any other means. With regard to the other piece of evidence, I doubted much at the trial as to the propriety of its reception; but upon being much pressed to receive it by the Attorney General I did so. It was contended, that it might be considered as a necessary act, and in furtherance of the conspiracy; but it was not so, as full effect might have been given to the conspiracy without it. It is the same thing as if this conspirator had said to some one else, that he had paid Blake a sum of money to put him in possession of the fruits of the conspiracy. Upon the ground taken in Hardy's case this was not admissible. It is a mere statement of what this party was doing, and if such statements were received, they would create much embarrassment, and, in many cases, would tend to discharge the parties making them, and throw all the responsibility upon others. In Watson's case, the circumstances were very different. The papers there were intimately connected with the objects of the conspiracy. Without looking to the precise objection taken, the language of the Court there might appear too general. [His Lordship read the judgment at p. 141, 2 Stark. Rep.] The report adds, "But the Court seemed to be of opinion, that an indorsement upon the plan of the machine, which did not appear to be at all connected with the general design, was not admissible in evidence." Upon the principle, therefore, that a mere statement made by one conspirator, or an act that he may choose to do, which is not necessary to carry the conspiracy to its end, is not evidence, under these circumstances, to affect another, I am of opinion that the writing on the counterpart of the cheque was not admissible.

PATTON, J.—I am of the same opinion. With regard to the first point, it is undoubtedly true as a general proposition, that the fact of a conspiracy must be first established. But a conspiracy need not be established by proof which actually brings the parties together, but by evidence of a direct or circumstantial nature, or by proof of circumstances which lead to such a conclusion. The evidence in this case was of something done by one of the parties charged as a conspirator, tending directly towards the very act to be accomplished. It was receivable as a step to establish the conspiracy itself. But as to the second point, the counterpart of the cheque had no connexion at all with the conspiracy. The information charges the defendants with defrauding Her Majesty of certain duties. That had been all done before the cheque was thought of, which was merely a mode of dividing the profits afterwards. It is curious, that not only in The King v. Watson, but also in The Queen v. Murphy, this very same distinction is drawn; in the latter case (p. 306), evidence of what persons had said after the meeting was rejected. This was no more than a statement of one of the co-conspirators afterwards.

WILLIAMS, J.—As to the first point, no general rule can be laid down, as has been stated by the Solicitor General, when it can be said that proof of the conspiracy is completed. The case is to be made out, which cannot be done per saltum. Then, if so, the detached acts of each are admissible to establish the charge. Therefore, an entry by Tye or Blake in furtherance of the charge would be admissible. Upon the other point the authorities are equally clear to shew that the counterfoil of the cheque was not admissible. It is no more than a declaration made by the writer. But the conspiracy at that time was completed, and the declaration related only to the fruits of it.

COKERIDGE, J.—I agree with the rest of the Court upon both points. With regard to the second, it is very clear, if we keep in sight the admitted principle, which is, that acts or declarations are not receivable, unless they tend to the advancement of the common object... That assumes the object not to be then completed. If it has been accomplished, the act or statement is not receivable. This was a mere statement as to the share of the plunder. Tye makes a memorandum, part of which is "S. & A. 7l. 10s. 5d." It is just the same as if it had been an entry made in his own private memorandum-book of a transaction that had been accomplished.

SARMA v. THE CHURCHWAR-DENS AND OVERSEERS OF
THE POOR OF THE PARISH OF RUGELEY.

Workhouse—Lease—Forfeiture—Covenant—Breach of, by Operation and Compulsion of Law.

A house and some land were demised to trustees for the reception and use of the poor of the parish of R., and there was a covenant by the lessees "to use, occupy, possess, and enjoy the demised premises, for the sole use, maintenance, and support of the poor of R. aforesaid, and not to convert the building or land, or employ the profits thereof, to any other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever." The lease contained a proviso for re-entry. —Held, that the removal of the paupers from the house demised, to the Union workhouse, under an order of the Poor Law Commissioners, and a letting of the land, which had been occupied and cultivated by the paupers, at a rack-rent, was not a breach of the covenants in either of them; and, accordingly, that, at all events, the removal of the paupers, having been occasioned by compulsion of law, would work no forfeiture.

Rejection for a messuage and land in the parish of Rugeley. The following case was stated for the opinion of the Court:— By indenture of the 31st of August 1778, between the Right Hon. Henry Lord Paget, of Brandon, in the county of Stafford, of the one part, and A. Curzon, of Hagley, in the parish of Rugeley, esq., the Rev. T. A. vicar of Rugeley aforesaid, and W. A. of the parish of Rugeley, gent., and R. W. of the said parish of Rugeley, gent., trustees on the part and behalf of the inhabitants and parishioners of the parish of Rugeley aforesaid, of the other part; after reciting that the maintenance and support of the poor of the said parish of Rugeley, had for many years last past been greatly increased, and the burden thereof become extremely grievous, and difficult to be borne by many tenants and tradesmen, inhabitants of Rugeley aforesaid, and that such mischief and burden had (as it had been presumed) in a great measure arisen from the want of a proper and convenient house for the reception of the poor and needy of the parish of Rugeley, when they became subjects of relief; and also reciting that a humble address or petition from many of the inhabitants of the said parish of Rugeley was signed by them, and presented to the said Henry Lord Paget, setting forth the above grievance, and requesting his Lordship to grant to the petitioners eleven acres of land upon his Lordship's chase of Cannock Wood, to answer the above good and salutary purpose; which petition his Lordship was pleased to countenance; it was witnessed, that for the considerations aforesaid, and in consideration of the rent, covenants, &c., the said Henry Lord Paget had demised, &c. to the said A. C. T. A. W. A. and R. W. their executors, &c. all that tract or parcel of land situate, lying, and being in the parish of Rugeley, in and upon the chase of Cannock Wood, in a place there called or known by the name of Haching Hill Field, as now staked and set out, containing, by admeasurement, eleven acres of land, abutting, &c.; habendum to the said A. C. T. A. W. A. and R. W. their executors, &c.; from the 26th of March then last past, for the full end and time of 1000 years, &c., upon trust as aforesaid; reddendum the yearly rent of 5s., payment half-yearly. Covenants by the lessees for the payment of rent; and further, that they the said A. C. T. A. W. A. and R. W., or some or one of them, should or would, on or before the 24th of June next ensuing the date of the said indenture, build, or cause to be built, a house upon part of the thereby demised premises, for the reception of the poor people that should become chargeable to the parish of Rugeley, and should and would, during the continuance of the said indenture, use, occupy, possess, and enjoy the thereby demised premises, and every part thereof, for the sole use, maintenance, and support of the poor of Rugeley aforesaid, according to the true intent and meaning of the parties thereto, and should not convert the aforesaid intended building, or the lands thereby demised, or employ the profits thereof to any other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever. Proviso for re-entry in case of non-payment of the rent, or if the said A. C. T. A. W. A. and R. W. or any or either of them, their executors, &c., should sell, assign, transfer, or otherwise part with their or any of their estates, &c. in the said premises, without the licence, in writing, of the said Henry Lord Paget, his heirs, or assigns; or if the said A. C, T. A, W. A, and W. R, or any of them, their or any of their heirs, executors, &c. should not in all things well and truly observe, perform, fulfil and keep all and singular the covenants in the said indenture contained. This lease was duly executed by the parties thereto; and within the time prescribed for that purpose in the lease, a workhouse was erected on the demised land, partly by subscription and partly at the cost of the inhabitants, and the eleven acres of land were inclosed, and subdivided by fences and cultivation.

From that time, until after the day on which the order of the Poor Law Commissioners hereinafter mentioned came into operation, the workhouse so built was inhabited by paupers, under the superintendence of a governor, who resided on the premises, and the land became beneficial to the parish by furnishing employment to paupers, who cultivated it under the management of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor for the time being.

From the date of the lease until the time last mentioned the parish officers, by the permission of the lessees, exercised the sole controul over the property in behalf of the parish, and paid the rent reserved by the lease to the lessor, or his representatives, up to the 25th of March 1839, and have been ever since ready and have offered to pay the same, as it has become due, according to the terms of the lease.

By an order of the Poor Law Commissioners, bearing date the 25th of November 1836 (a copy of which was agreed to be read as part of the case) the said Poor Law Commissioners did "order and declare that certain parishes, townships, and places, among which was the parish of Rugeley aforesaid, should, on the 21st of December then next, be, and thenceforth should remain united, for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor, by the name of 'the Lichfield Union,' and should contribute and be assessed to a common fund for purchasing, building, hiring or providing, altering or enlarging any workhouse or other place of reception and relief of the poor of such parishes and places, or for the purchase of any lands or tenements, under and by virtue of the provisions of the said act, of or for such Union, or for the future upholding and maintaining of such workhouses or places aforesaid."

After the day on which the above order came into operation, until the month of May 1840, the said property was, under the controul and by the sanction of the proper authorities in that behalf, used for the poor of the union, as it had previously been for the poor of the parish. In the said month of May 1840, all the poor then upon the said property were by order of the proper and competent authorities in that behalf removed therefrom to a workhouse which had been built and provided at Lichfield for the said union. Since that period all the poor of the union have, by order of the proper authorities, been supported in the workhouse at Lichfield, and the workhouse at Rugeley has been in consequence uninhabited and locked up; a garden attached to it, and the rest of the land demised, have been and are in the possession of two several tenants at a rack rent, under the churchwardens and overseers of the parish, which rent has been and is applied in aid of the poor-rates of the parish.

The lessor of the plaintiff is the heir-at-law and legal representative of the grantor of the lease.

The question for the opinion of the Court was, whether under the above circumstances the lessor of the plaintiff had a right to re-enter, by virtue of the proviso in the lease of 1778.

Whately, for the lessor of the plaintiff.—The house is now shut up, contrary to the covenant; the lease was granted for the purpose of having a workhouse on the land demised.

[PATTESON, J.—There has been no underletting of the house; the forfeiture, if any, must be by reason of the non-inhabitaney of paupers.]

The proviso for re-entry is to be construed like any other covenant or contract—Doe d. Davis v. Elsom (1), Lucy v. Lewington (2), Bac. Abr. 'Condition,' (Q) 2, p. 161.

J. W. Smith, for the defendants.—First, there has been no breach of covenant; secondly, if there has been any breach, it has been occasioned by compulsion of law, and works no forfeiture. There has been no breach of the covenant in terms; the house has not been used for any other purpose than that for which it was originally built; though it is now locked up, it may be made again available for receiving paupers, and is, indeed, now available for receiving such as want it. Then as to the land: it is let at rack rent, and the rent employed in aid of the poor-rate. There is no covenant against underletting, though there is one against assigning. If the lessor's intention was, that it was not to be so underlet, such intention would have been expressed, and it could not indeed have been so intended, as the land in its nature is suitable to manual labour. In the phrase "employ the profits," the word "profits" does not mean the profits of the occupation, as the word "occupy" occurs in the earlier part of the covenant. The "profits" means profits in the hands of the tenant, as in 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27. In Com. Dig. tit. 'Condition,' (L) 1, it is said, "If a condition be performed as near the intent of the condition as it can be, it is sufficient." That is the case here, and forfeitures are not to be favoured. But, secondly, the compulsion of law excuses the breach of covenant—Brewster v. Kitchell (3), Com. Dig. tit. 'Condition,' (D) 1, (L) 13. The order of the Poor Law Commissioners has a statutory operation, and the removal has taken place by means over which the parish officers had no controul.

(1) Moo. & Mal. 189.

(1) 1 Vent. 175.

Whately, in reply.—The grant is made for a particular object, and the letting the land is inconsistent with that object.

Cur. adv. vult.

The judgment of the Court was afterwards delivered, by—

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—This was an action of ejectment to recover possession of a building and land demised to trustees for the parish of Rugeley, on the ground of a forfeiture by reason of a breach of a covenant contained in the lease, that the lessee should use, occupy, possess, and enjoy the demised premises for the sole use, maintenance, and support of the poor of Rugeley, and should not convert the building, or the land demised, or employ the profits thereof, to any other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever. Until the month of May 1840, the building was used as the workhouse, and the land as a garden, which was cultivated by the paupers; but at that time the paupers were removed to a union workhouse at Lichfield, in pursuance of the order of the Poor Law Commissioners, and the workhouse at Rugeley has been shut up since that time, and the garden and land has been let at a rent which has been applied in aid of the poor-rates. This is the alleged breach of covenant by which it was contended the lease was forfeited, but we are of opinion that there has not been any breach of covenant, but that it has been substantially performed. The premises never have been used for any other purpose than that of the maintenance and support of the poor of Rugeley, and although the order of the Commissioners has occasioned for a time a cessation of the actual occupation of the premises by the paupers, such an occupation, either by casual poor, or otherwise, may at any time be resumed; and though the land is not cultivated by the poor, the profits of it are applied to their maintenance. What was the precise date of the breach of covenant? To this question no satisfactory answer was given upon the argument; but if the covenant was not performed, it appears to us the performance would in this case be excused as being by act of law, and involuntary on the part of the lessee. The cases cited in argument, and to be found in Bac. Abr. tit. 'Condition,' and Com. Dig. tit. 'Condition,' and also the case of Brewster v. Kitchell, support this view of the case. Our judgment, therefore, is for the defendants.

Judgment for the defendants.

1844.
June 11.

Ex parte JACKLIN.

Master and Servant—4 Geo. 4. c. 34.
s. 1.—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.

The statute 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 1. does not authorize Magistrates to punish misconduct on the part of a servant, which amounts to a felony.

A conviction and commitment under that statute stated, that the servant had contracted to serve as a servant in husbandry, and that in his said service and employment he had been guilty of a misdemeanour and mis-carriage, in that he had purloined a quantity of barley to give to the horses under his care, contrary to the express command of his master. The evidence stated in the conviction shewed it to have been taken in the night by means of a skeleton key:—Held, that in the first place this was not shewn to be misconduct or misdemeanour in the execution of his contract of service, that contract not being particularly set forth; and, secondly, that, at all events, it was a felony over which the Magistrates had not jurisdiction.

William Jacklin had been committed to the house of correction at Louth, under the following warrant:—"Parts of Lindsey, Lincolnshire, to wit.—To the constable of Scamblesby in those parts, and the keeper of the house of correction at Louth, in those parts. Whereas information and complaint upon oath hath been made before us, John Fytche, and William T. Welfitt, Esqrs., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in and for the said parts, by T. R. Grantham, that he, the said William Jacklin, late of Scamblesby aforesaid, servant in husbandry to the said T. R. Grantham, that he, the said W. Jacklin having contracted to serve the said T. R. Grantham in the business of husbandry until May-day next, hath during his servitude been guilty of divers misdemeanors, miscarriages, and other ill-behaviour towards him, the said T. R. Grantham; and particularly on the night of the 21st day of March last, when he did purloin a quantity of barley to give to the horses under his care, contrary to his master's express commands." The warrant, after stating the apprehension of Jacklin and his appearance before the Justices, and pleading not guilty, proceeded thus: "and whereas in pursuance of the statutes in such cases made and provided, we have duly examined the proofs and allegations of both the said parties, touching the matter of the said complaint, and upon due consideration had thereof, have adjudged and determined that he, the said W. Jacklin, did contract as aforesaid, and hath in his said service and employment been guilty of divers misdemeanours, misconduct and ill-behaviour towards the said T. R. Grantham, in that he, the said W. Jacklin, did on the night of the 21st day of March last, purloin a quantity of barley to give to the horses under his care, contrary to the express commands of the said T. R. Grantham, and we do therefore hereby convict him, the said W. Jacklin, of the said offence in pursuance of the statutes in such case made and provided." The warrant then directed the removal of Jacklin to the house of correction at Louth, and his confinement there for two months, and authorized an abatement of the wages during the period of the imprisonment, and was signed and sealed by Mr. Fytche and Mr. Welfitt.

A rule had been obtained, directed to the two committing Magistrates, to Mr. Grantham, the prosecutor, and the keeper of the house of correction, at Louth, to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not issue to bring up the body of Jacklin, and the cause of his detention, or why he should not be discharged out of custody without being brought up (1). In answer to this rule, Mr. Fytche made an affidavit setting forth the information and summons, and also annexing a conviction as the foundation of the warrant. This supplied various defects upon the face of the commitment, but stated in the evidence that Jacklin had opened the granary in the night time by means of a skeleton key: in other respects the substance of the matter was the same as in the commitment.

Gunning shewed cause.—The objections that the commitment does not state where the contract was made, or that the servant was employed within the jurisdiction of the Justices, or what the evidence was, or that it was given upon oath before the prisoner, are remedied by the conviction now produced. So soon as a valid conviction for the same offence is shewn, defects of this nature in the commitment are cured, and become immaterial—Paley on Convictions, 236, The King v. Taylor (2). Then with respect to the principal objection, that the evidence shews that a felony, and not a miscarriage in his service on the part of the prisoner, has been committed, the Court will not very nicely scan the sufficiency of the evidence. So long as there is any evidence to warrant the conclusion at which the Magistrates who heard the case have arrived, the Court will not interfere. Then it was a question of fact, whether the servant did not act under a misapprehension of his right or of circumstances, and without any felonious intent. It is nowhere stated that he feloniously took the barley; and unless that is stated, the Court cannot presume a felony has been committed.

(1) This course has been adopted in several recent cases, in order to save the expense of bringing up the prisoner. If no cause be shewn, then a writ of habeas corpus must issue; but, considering that the expense of bringing up the party would form an item of damages, and also the conduct of the Magistrates, in not adopting the reasonable course of shewing cause upon such a rule, might materially influence the opinion of the jury, in the event of the warrant being held to be defective and an action being brought, it seems to be the more discreet course to shew cause.

Whitehurst. — The evidence set forth proves beyond all doubt that the subject-matter of the charge, upon which the party has been committed, was a felony. The Magistrates, therefore, had no jurisdiction when they made out this commitment, and both it and the conviction ought to be quashed. Independently, however, of this defect, there is another fatal objection, and that is, that the offence, even if it were a misdemeanour, is not shewn to have had any relation to the contract of service, nor does it appear to have been any breach of orders given him upon the subject of that service. If the terms of the contract had been set forth, and it had been shewn that he was employed as carter, it might be that it would have been a misconduct or misdemeanour in the execution of his contract of service. What were his duties is not stated. It is also submitted, that the conviction is bad, because it has not set them out. But taking the contract to be that he was to take care of his master's horses, the obtaining a skeleton key, and going in the night and taking away the barley, although for the purpose of feeding them, would not be a miscarriage or misconduct merely in the service, but in reality a felony; and the reason why the present course is preferred by the master is obvious, as it enables him to abate the wages.

COLERIDGE, J.—I do not think it is necessary you should argue the matter any further, as, in my opinion, the commitment and conviction are bad. Proceedings of this kind ought not to be dealt with capriciously, but they must, nevertheless, be so dealt with as to prevent Magistrates from bringing matters within the jurisdiction given them by statutes like the present, which really do not fall within it. Now this statute, 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 1, only extends to cases in which the servant has been guilty of some "misconduct or misdemeanour in the execution of his contract of service, or otherwise respecting the same." A summary conviction is not to be supported, because the party has committed a misdemeanour while in his service, but it must appear to be a violation of the contract. They must be confined to that, for if Magistrates, under the statute in question, punish summarily for what forms the subject of investigation before another tribunal, possibly they may inflict a more severe punishment than would have been imposed upon the defendant, if brought before the regular tribunal and convicted; or it may so happen that he was liable to some heavier punishment, or perhaps it may so happen that he would not be liable to punishment at all. For these reasons, it appears to me that the contract should be truly stated, in order that the Court may be enabled to see that the misconduct complained of was a violation of its terms. Now here I do not see that it was in any way connected with his service; but suppose that, by any intendment, I could say that the defendant appears to have had the charge of the horses, still this would amount to a felony. He has possessed himself of a skeleton key, and in the night he has entered the granary, and taken away the barley; assuming that to have been done for the purpose of feeding his master's horses, still it would amount to a felony, and not fall within the jurisdiction of the Magistrates. Under these circumstances, I think this rule ought to be absolute.

Ex parte FULLER.

Landlord and Tenant—Distress—Fraudulent Removal of Goods.

A commitment, under the statute 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. s. 4, for fraudulent removal of goods, omitted to state a complaint, in writing, by the landlord, his bailiff, agent, or servant. The order of adjudication stated the defendant to have been duly charged, in writing, before the Magistrate. The Court held the commitment to be bad.

A writ of habeas corpus had been obtained to bring up the body of John Fuller, who was a prisoner in the house of correction, at Great Stukely, in Huntingdonshire, under an adjudication, and warrant of commitment, in the following form:—

“Huntingdonshire, to wit.—The order and adjudication of T. S. Fryer, Esq., and the Rev. E. M. Peck, clerk, two of Her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace, in and for the said county of Huntingdon, residing near the place where the goods and chattels, hereinafter mentioned, were removed, and not being interested in the lands or tenements, from whence the same were removed, whose hands and seals are hereunto subscribed and set. Whereas John Fuller, late of Fenstanton, in the county of Huntingdon, hath been duly charged, in writing, before T. S. Fryer, Esq. and the Rev. J. Linton, clerk, two of Her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace, for the said county, residing near the place where the goods and chattels, hereinafter mentioned, were removed, and not being interested in the lands or tenements, from whence the same were removed, with having, on or about the 3rd day of April 1844, fraudulently and clandestinely removed and conveyed away his goods and chattels, to wit, not exceeding the value of 50*l.*, from his dwelling-house and premises, in the parish of Fenstanton, in the county of Huntingdon, to certain premises in the parish of Cottenham, in the county of Cambridge, to prevent J. Beck, of Fenstanton, aforesaid, gent. from distraining the said goods and chattels, for arrears of rent due to him for the said dwelling-house and premises, to the 25th day of March last past. And, whereas, the said T. S. Fryer, Esq., and the Rev. J. Linton, clerk, as such Justices, having summoned the said J. Fuller to appear before two of Her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace for the said county, and we, the undersigned Justices, being two of Her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace for the said county, having duly examined the fact, and all proper witnesses, upon oath, and it appearing, and being fully proved upon oath, before us, that the said John Fuller, did, on the said 3rd day of April, in the year aforesaid, so fraudulently and clandestinely remove and convey away the said goods and chattels, as aforesaid, being of the value of 10*l.*, to prevent the said J. Beck from distraining the said goods and chattels, for the said arrears of rent, contrary to the statute, in such case made and provided. We, the said undersigned Justices, do, therefore, this 29th day of April 1844, determine and adjudge that the said J. Fuller is guilty of the offence with which he is charged, as aforesaid; and he is convicted thereof. And we do hereby order and adjudge him to pay the sum of 20*l.*, being double the value of the said goods and chattels, to the said J. Beck, or to T. Alderton, his bailiff, servant, or agent, on or before the 14th day of May, in the year aforesaid. Given under our hands and seals, at St. Ives, the 29th day of April 1844.—T. S. Fryer, (l. s.) E. M. Peck, (l. s.)” “Huntingdonshire, to wit.—To the constable of St. Ives, in the county of Huntingdon, and, also, to the keeper of the house of correction, at Great Stukely, in the county of Huntingdon. Whereas, J. Fuller, late of Fenstanton, in the said county, horse-dealer, was, by an order dated the 29th day of April, A.D. 1844, under the hands and seals of T. S. Fryer, Esq. and the Rev. E. M. Peck, clerk, two of Her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace, for the county of Huntingdon, residing near the place where the goods and chattels, hereafter mentioned, were removed, and not being interested in the lands or tenements from whence the same were removed, ordered to pay the sum of 20*l.* to J. Beck, of Fenstanton, aforesaid, gent., or to T. Alderton, his bailiff, servant, or agent, on or before the 14th day of May, instant, being double the value of certain goods and chattels of the said J. Fuller, which the said J. Fuller was duly convicted of having fraudulently and clandestinely removed and conveyed away from his dwelling-house and premises, in the parish of Fenstanton, in the county of Huntingdon, to certain premises in the parish of Cottenham, in the county of Cambridge, to prevent the said J. Beck from distraining the said goods and chattels, for arrears of rent due to the said J. Beck, for the said premises. And whereas the said J. Fuller, having had notice of the said order, hath refused or neglected to pay, and hath not paid the said sum of 20*l.* pursuant thereunto, and the same hath been fully proved before us, the undersigned T. S. Fryer, Esq. and the Rev. E. Baines, clerk, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, for the said county of Huntingdon, upon the oaths of the said J. Beck and T. Alderton. And whereas it appears unto us, the said T. S. Fryer, Esq. and the Rev. E. Baines, clerk, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, for the said county of Huntingdon, by the return of T. Alderton, constable of St. Ives, in the said county, dated this 20th day of May instant, that he hath made diligent search for, but doth not know of, nor can find any goods and chattels of the said J. Fuller, by distress and sale whereof the said sum of 20*l.* may be levied, pursuant to the warrant, under the hand and seal of us, the said T. S. Fryer and the Rev. E. Baines, two Justices of the Peace for the county of Huntingdon, bearing date this 20th day of May, A. D. 1844, duly made and issued for the levying of the said sum of 20*l.*, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said J. Fuller. These are, therefore, to command you, the said constable of St. Ives, aforesaid, to apprehend the said J. Fuller, and convey him to the house of correction at Great Stukely, aforesaid, and deliver him to the keeper thereof, together with this warrant; and you, the said keeper, are hereby required to receive the said J. Fuller into the said house of correction; and there to keep him to hard labour, without bail or mainprize, for the space of six months, unless the said sum of 20*l.* so ordered to be paid, as aforesaid, shall be sooner satisfied."—Signed and sealed by T. S. Fryer and the Rev. E. Baines.

Fuller having been brought up,

Gunning moved for his discharge, on the following objections to the commitment:—First, that it did not appear to have been made by two Justices who were authorized to act under the statute: secondly, that it did not allege any rent to be due for the premises: thirdly, that it did not state that the relation of landlord and tenant existed between Fuller and Beck: fourthly, that it did not appear that any complaint, in writing, had been made by the landlord, his bailiff, servant, or agent: fifthly, that it did not appear that the removal was after the rent was due: sixthly, that it did not appear that the 20*l.* remained due, it being only alleged that it was not paid pursuant to the order: seventhly, that it was not alleged that Fuller had not goods sufficient to satisfy the distress remaining on the premises. To the adjudication, which was set forth on the affidavits, among other objections, he objected that the case was not heard by the same Justices before whom the information was laid; and also that the evidence was not set forth.

J. Henderson shewed cause.—The fourth (1) objection is untenable, inasmuch as the adjudication states that the defendant had been duly charged in writing and according to The King v. Davis (2) it would have been sufficient merely to have stated that he was duly charged in order to support it. The Court will make every fair intendment in favour of the act of the Justices; and as the defendant could not have been duly charged without that charge having been made by the landlord, his bailiff, servant, or agent, it must be assumed that the charge was made by one of them. Lord Denman, C.J., in that case observes, "As to the objection that the order does not state the name of the complainant, it is, perhaps, a sufficient answer that it does allege that, on complaint duly made, James Davies was charged." The fact of the Justices acting is sufficient to afford a presumption until the contrary is shewn, for it must be taken for granted that they would not summon the party unless a regular complaint and information were lodged. The form in the present case is that ordinarily used, and the consequence of discharging the prisoner would be to declare a vast number of commitments invalid. It is the ordinary form given in Burn's Justice. The commitment, too, need not state the complaint, provided the adjudication shews one to have been properly lodged.

COLERIDGE, J.—It is not an uncommon thing for a form to be in general use for many years, and to be regarded as perfectly good, until it happens that a blot in it at last is hit. When it is hit, however, we must, notwithstanding the inconvenience it may occasion, act upon the objection. I take it that there is no more inflexible rule, in the construction of convictions, or orders, or commitments, than that the Magistrates who make them must shew that they had jurisdiction. Then, in the present case, in order that they might possess this, a complaint in writing, by the landlord, his bailiff, servant, or agent, is required by the statutes. The commitment does not, however, shew any complaint to have been made; and, at all events, it does not shew a complaint in writing. It may, perhaps, be admitted, that it would be enough if it appeared upon the whole, taken together, that such a complaint has been made, but what is there in this case to shew it? The only argument, indeed, which can be suggested comes to this—that I am to assume a complaint was properly made, because it is improbable that the Magistrates would have acted without one. I cannot assent to that proposition; and, considering the objection to be quite fatal, I think the prisoner ought to be discharged.

(1) The other objections are set forth in order to enable Magistrates to guard against them, the forms at present in use being very defective. The judgment proceeded on the fourth, and the argument upon that alone is given. With respect to the first, J. Henderson referred to 3 Geo. 4. c. 23. s. 2. as enabling any two Justices to act, though the complaint was not lodged or the case heard before them. (2) 5 B. & Ad 561; s.c. 3 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 29.

1844. { THE QUEEN v. THE INHABITANTS OF HEANOR.*

Highway—Repair—Indictment—Costs—Statute.

Where, under the direction of Justices, pursuant to s. 95. of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, a bill of indictment is preferred for non-repair of a road, the Judge before whom the indictment is tried is bound to order payment of the costs of the prosecution, although the defendants have been acquitted, on the ground, that the road in question is not a highway.

In this case two Justices under 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 95, directed an indictment to be preferred at the Quarter Sessions for the county of Derby for non-repair of a highway.

The indictment was removed by certiorari, and tried before Tindal, C.J., at the Lent Assizes for Derbyshire, 1844.

* The editor is indebted for this report to one of the barristers concerned in the case.

Plea, not guilty.

The defence set up was, that the road in question was not a highway, and the defendants were acquitted on that ground.

Tindal, C.J. took time to consider whether he would grant the costs.

On a day in Trinity term, after the rising of the Court of Common Pleas, Willmore applied for the costs.

Whitehurst, contra.—Besides the manifest injustice of inflicting costs on an innocent party, the act empowers the Judge to grant them only in cases of indictment for non-repair of a highway. Here it was proved that there was no highway; therefore the Judge has no authority to grant costs. The point has moreover been decided in The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Chedworth (1).

Willmore, in reply.—The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Chadworth proceeded on other grounds. Several points were raised. The injustice is equal in granting costs against innocent defendants, whatever may be the ground on which they are acquitted. But it cannot be denied that the legislature clearly meant costs to be paid by defendants, acquitted on other grounds. The object was to prevent persons being deterred by the fear of afterwards paying costs from summoning parties before the Justices for the non-repair of highways. The word "highway" is to be taken in its popular meaning, that which is reputed to be a highway. There is no doubt but that this case would be described as an indictment for non-repair of a highway, and was so named and called on in court.

TINDAL, C.J.—I think that the words of the act are imperative upon me to grant the costs. The term "highway" seems not to be used in its strict legal sense, but rather to mean a road considered as a highway. The object of the legislature appears to have been to protect the prosecutor from the payment of costs in those cases where the Justices direct an indictment; to throw those expenses rather upon a public body than upon one who has been compelled, perhaps against his will, to prosecute an indictment at all.

Certificate for costs granted.

Commitment, 4 Geo. 4. c. 34—Conviction—Intendment.

Where an act of parliament gives a Magistrate a power of commitment, without a previous conviction, it should appear on the face of the warrant of commitment that the charge was heard and the evidence taken in the presence of the prisoner.

The Court will not intend a good conviction to support a bad commitment.

A writ of habeas corpus having been obtained on the part of Isaac Tordoff, directed to the keeper of the house of correction at Wakefield, in the county of York, he returned that the prisoner was in his custody on the following warrant:—

“West Riding of Yorkshire, to wit.—To George Kershaw, the constable, and to the keeper of the house of correction at Wakefield, &c.—Whereas, information and complaint hath been made before me, William Bennett Martin, Esq., one of Her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace in and for the West Riding of the county of York, by Andrew Faulds, of Horsborough, in the said West Riding, colliery proprietor, upon the oath of the said Andrew Faulds, against Isaac Tordoff, late of Stainborough, in the said West Riding, collier, for that he, the said Isaac Tordoff, having contracted with the said Andrew Faulds and others, his partners in trade, as colliery proprietors, to wit, on the 1st day of January, in the year of our Lord 1842, in the West Riding aforesaid, to serve them, the said Andrew Faulds and others, in the said capacity and employment of a collier, in the said West Riding, from thence until the end of one month after he should have given to or received from his said masters notice to quit, and leave his said masters’ service; and that the said Isaac Tordoff, in pursuance of the said contract, entered into the service of the said Andrew Faulds and others accordingly, and that afterwards he did unlawfully absent himself from his said service, without his said masters’ consent, in the riding aforesaid, to wit, on the 23rd, the 24th, the 26th, and the 27th days of February last past respectively, before the time of his said contract was completed, to wit, after the commencement of the said contract, and before the end of one month after he had given to or received from his said masters notice to quit and leave his said masters’ service, and hath from thence hitherto neglected to fulfil his said contract, against the form of the statutes in such cases made and provided; and whereas the said Isaac Tordoff, in pursuance of my warrant for that purpose, hath this day appeared before me to answer the said complaint, but hath not proved that he is not guilty of the said complaint and charge, and whereas, in pursuance of the statutes in that case made and provided, I have duly examined the proofs and allegations upon oath of both the said parties, touching the matter of the said complaint, and upon due consideration had thereof have adjudged and determined the said complaint to be true, and that he, the said Isaac Tordoff, did contract with the said Andrew Faulds and others, to serve them, the said Andrew Faulds and others as aforesaid, in the riding aforesaid, and did afterwards absent himself from the said service from the time his said contract was completed as aforesaid, to wit, on the several days aforesaid, in the year aforesaid, and I do therefore convict the said Isaac Tordoff of the said offence, in pursuance of the statutes in that case made and provided (1).

(1) 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 3. enacts that “if any servant in husbandry, or any artificer, miner, or other person, shall contract with any person or persons whomsoever to serve him, her, or them for any time or times whatsoever, or in any other manner, and shall not enter into or commence his or her service, according to his or her contract, or having entered into such service shall absent himself from his or her service before the term of his or her service shall be completed, or shall neglect to fulfil the same, or shall be guilty of any other misconduct or misdemeanour, in the execution thereof, or otherwise respecting the same, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful for any Justice of the Peace of the county or place where such servant, &c. shall have so contracted, or be employed, or be found, and such Justice is hereby authorized and empowered, upon complaint thereof made upon oath to him, by the person or persons or any of them with whom such servant, &c. shall have so contracted, &c., to issue his warrant for the apprehending such servant, &c., and to examine into the nature of the complaint; and if it shall appear to such Justice that such servant, &c. shall not have fulfilled such contract, or shall have been guilty of any other misconduct or misdemeanour as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for such Justice to

"These are therefore to command you, the said George Kershaw, forthwith to convey the said Isaac Tordoff to the said house of correction at Wakefield aforesaid, and to deliver him to the keeper thereof, together with this warrant; and I do hereby command you, the said keeper, to receive the said Isaac Tordoff into your custody in the said house of correction, there to remain and be held to hard labour for the space of three calendar months from the date hereof, and for your so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant; and whereas it has appeared to me, upon the proofs and allegations of both the said parties upon oath as aforesaid, that no wages are now or will hereafter become due to the said Isaac Tordoff from the said Andrew Faulds and others, during the period that the said Isaac Tordoff will be confined in the said house of correction as aforesaid, I have adjudged and determined that no wages are now or will hereafter become due to the said Isaac Tordoff from the said Andrew Faulds and others, during the said period that the said Isaac Tordoff will be confined in the said house of correction as aforesaid. I have not made and I do not make any order to abate a proportionable part of his wages for and during such period as he shall be confined in the house of correction as aforesaid. Given under my hand and seal, at the Court House at Barnsley, in the said West Riding of the county of York, the 6th day of March, A.D. 1844.

Bodkin (with whom were Fry and Huddleston), on a former day, moved for the discharge of the prisoner, upon the following (amongst other) objections to the commitment:—It does not appear that the prisoner was present when the witnesses against him were examined. The warrant first recites that Isaac Tordoff had not proved himself not guilty, and then goes on to add that the Magistrate had duly examined the "proofs and allegations upon oath of the parties;" but that does not amount to a statement that the party summoned was present when the complainant was personally examined on oath. The words "this day" refer to the date of the commitment.

The Court then called upon—commit every such person to the house of correction for a reasonable time, not exceeding three months."

Erle, Yardley, and Overend, in support of the commitment.—No case has gone the length of deciding that a commitment must contain every minute particular connected with the hearing. It is never stated that the party was present at each step in the case; and it is to be intended that having once appeared he continues to be present.

[PATTESON, J.—It is contended, on behalf of the prisoner, that the parties are not shewn to be present together at any time.]

The complaint upon oath by one party is made in order to obtain a warrant to compel an appearance; then the party summoned appears, and the appearance is on the same day.

[PATTESON, J.—What words are there in the commitment to shew that the complaining party was examined on oath after the appearance of the other party? Can we assume that the evidence was all given over again?]

It appears that the examination of both parties took place after appearance.

[PATTESON, J.—The warrant does not say that the Magistrate heard, but that he examined the allegations and proofs of both parties.]

True; but it goes on to say "upon oath;" and, according to the ordinary construction of the words, both the parties must be taken to have been personally present after appearance.

[WILLIAMS, J. referred to The King v. Lovett (2).]

There is nothing to shew that the examination was not in the presence of the party summoned. The King v. Thompson (3) is against the objection.

[LORD DENMAN, C.J. referred to The King v. Vipont (4), and The King v. Baker (5).]

This form agrees with those in the text books. Besides, though a conviction is not indispensable under the statute, yet it may be, and often is drawn up—Johnson v. Reid (6); and if this is looked at as a commitment, a previous good conviction will be intended. The words "I do convict" appearing in the commitment, are mere surplusage, if no conviction is necessary; and if these words are rejected, then this is a simple commitment, and sufficient as such.

[PATTERSON, J.—Is there any case in which it has been held, that where there is only a commitment, and no conviction, the commitment need not be so particular as on a conviction?]

There is no case in which it has been expressly so held, but there is no case the other way. The legislature may have here used the word "commit" advisedly, in order to deprive the parties of the power of raising objections to the form of a conviction.

[WIGHTMAN, J.—According to that argument, there need be no examination at all.]

There need be no statement of it in the commitment. If this is a conviction, the whole evidence ought to be set out, but a commitment does not require the same precision—Paley on Convictions, 236.

Cur. adv. vult.

LORD DENMAN, C.J., on a subsequent day, delivered the judgment of the Court.—We think that the warrant in this case is bad, upon the last objection taken to it. It has been properly contended, that, unless upon the face of it it appears that the evidence was taken in the presence of the prisoner, it cannot be supported; and indeed that was not disputed, but it was said, that the evidence had, in fact, been so taken, and that that fact appeared sufficiently upon the face of the warrant. Now certainly this warrant nowhere states in terms that the witnesses were examined in the presence of the prisoner; and it is to be observed, that the most general form of conviction given by any statute contains an allegation of that fact, and that no conviction has ever been upheld, in which that statement, either in express terms or equivalent language, has not been found. Reference has been already made to the cases of The King v. Vipont and The King v. Baker. There is always great inconvenience in departing from a general rule. It may be, that, in consequence of those decisions, Judges have been obliged to examine the words of each particular commitment, for the purpose of ascertaining whether any reasonable inference could be drawn from them; but, notwithstanding that inconvenience, we feel ourselves bound to abide by the authority of such cases, and we must therefore look to the form of commitment, to see whether, by reasonable intendment, the defendant has appeared to be present during the examination of the witnesses; and we are of opinion, that it does not so appear. The statement is, that, on a certain day, the prisoner appeared, and was called upon to prove that he was not guilty, which he failed in doing; then follows, in a separate clause, the recital of a "due examination of the proofs and allegations, upon oath, of both the said parties," &c., and it seems to us almost impossible not to conclude, from that language, that no voir dire examination of witnesses against the prisoner took place in his presence. It has been argued, that this is a mere warrant of commitment, which would be good if founded upon a good conviction, and that a good conviction must be presumed; but we cannot yield to that argument. The answer is, that this is a conviction; for all the necessary words to constitute a conviction appear. It must be understood that we give no judgment whatever upon the other objections raised before us, but upon this we think the prisoner is entitled to be discharged.

Commitment—Conviction—Inference of Law—Certainty—Substitution.

Where an act of parliament authorizes Magistrates to commit, if a good warrant of commitment be shewn, the Court will not inquire into the validity of a previous document under which a prisoner was in fact committed; since a conviction, if such were necessary at all, might be at any time drawn up to sustain a commitment valid in form.

A habeas corpus had been issued, directed to the keeper of the house of correction for the county of Leicester, to bring up the bodies of Joseph Richards, John Bird, James Walker, and James Bird. The keeper of the house of correction for the county of Leicester, returned that Joseph Richards and John Bird were committed and delivered into his custody, under the following warrant of commitment:—

“Leicestershire, to wit.—To the constable of Worthington, in the said county, and the keeper of the house of correction, at Leicester, in the said county. Whereas information and complaint hath been made before me, William Wootten Abney, Esq., one of her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace in and for the said county, by Benjamin Walker, of Worthington, in the said county, coal-master, upon the oath of the said Benjamin Walker, against Joseph Richards and John Bird, late of Worthington aforesaid, in the said county, colliers to the said Benjamin Walker, at his Smoile Colliery, that they, the said Joseph Richards and John Bird, have, in their said service, severally been guilty of a certain misconduct, misdemeanour, miscarriage, and ill-behaviour towards him the said Benjamin Walker, in that the said Joseph Richards and John Bird, having severally entered into their said service, have severally therein not fulfilled their contract by having, at the township of Worthington, in the said county, on the 4th day of April instant, severally neglected their work in such service, contrary to the statute. And whereas, in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided, I have duly examined the proofs and allegations of both the said parties, touching the matter of the said complaint, and upon due consideration had thereof, have adjudged and determined that they, the said Joseph Richards and John Bird, have, in their said service, been guilty of a certain misconduct, misdemeanour, miscarriage, and ill-behaviour, towards the said Benjamin Walker, in that they, the said Joseph Richards and John Bird, having severally entered into their said service, have severally therein not fulfilled their said contract by having, at the township of Worthington, in the said county, on the said 4th day of April instant, severally neglected their work in such service, contrary to the statute. And I do, therefore, convict them, the said Joseph Richards and John Bird, of the said offence, in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided. These are, therefore, to command you, the said constable, forthwith to convey the said Joseph Richards and John Bird to the said house of correction at Leicester aforesaid, and to deliver them to the keeper thereof, together with this warrant. And I do hereby command you, the said keeper, to receive the said Joseph Richards and John Bird into your custody in the said house of correction, there to remain, and severally be kept to hard labour, for the space of three months from the date hereof. And for your so doing, &c. Given under my hand and seal the 8th day of April in the year of our Lord 1844.

“(Signed) William Wootten Abney.”

There was another warrant, in exactly the same form and by the same Justice, for the commitment of one James Walker and one William Bird. The return then proceeded to state, that afterwards, and whilst the said Joseph Richards, John Bird, James Walker, and William Bird were respectively so in custody, that is to say, on the 15th day of April A.D. 1844, the said William Wootten Abney caused to be delivered to him a certain other warrant of commitment, the tenor of which was as follows:—

“Leicestershire, to wit.—To all and every constable and other officers of the peace for the said county, whom these may concern, and to the keeper of the house of correction at Leicester, in the said county. These are, in her Majesty’s name, to command you; and every of you the said officers, forthwith safely to convey and deliver into the custody of the said keeper the body of Joseph Richards, late of Worthington, in the said county, collier, being convicted before me, William Wootten Abney, Esq., one of her Majesty’s Justices of the Peace in and for the said county, upon the evidence on oath of Mr. Benjamin Walker, of Coleorton, in the said county, for that he, the said Joseph Richards, did contract with the said Benjamin Walker to serve him in the capacity of a collier for an indefinite period, determinable, nevertheless, on either of the said contracting parties giving to the other fourteen days’ previous notice of his intention to determine the said contract; and that the said Joseph Richards did enter into the service of the said Benjamin Walker, and did continue to serve him the said Benjamin Walker, and to be employed by him as a collier, under and according to the said contract, at the township of Worthington, in the said county of Leicester, so being then and there in the service of him the said Benjamin Walker, as collier, until the 4th day of April instant; and the term of the said contract being then subsisting and incomplete, he, the said Joseph Richards, did misconduct and misdeemean himself in the said service, to wit, did neglect his work, and refuse to go to it on being requested by the said Benjamin Walker so to do, whereby divers other persons employed in the same pit were prevented from proceeding with their ordinary employment, and the said Benjamin Walker sustained great damage and loss, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; for which said offence, I, the said Justice, have ordered and adjudged the said Joseph Richards to be imprisoned in the said house of correction in Leicester, in and for the said county, and there to be kept to hard labour for the space of three months; and you, the said keeper, are hereby required to receive the said Joseph Richards into your said prison, and him safely there to keep for the aforesaid term of three months, and during that time to be kept to hard labour; and for your so doing this shall be to you and every of you a sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal at Sweptone, in the said county of Leicester, this 8th day of April A.D. 1844.

The return then set out three other warrants in precisely the same terms as the preceding, for the commitment of John Bird, James Walker, and William Bird respectively; the four persons named in the last four warrants being the same persons as those named in the first two warrants.

Bodkin, Fry, and Huddleston now moved to discharge all the prisoners.—It will be said, that these latter warrants recite former convictions, and are not convicting instruments, and that the case is, therefore, distinguishable from In the matter of Tordoff(1); but if that be so, then the former warrants, under the authority of which the prisoners were sent to gaol, and which, in fact, were sent with the prisoners, are the convictions, the date, name, and offence being the same; and, according to the former case, the Court will not allow a bad conviction to operate as a good warrant. It was, no doubt, the intention of the Magistrate to substitute a formal warrant for an informal one; but in order to do this effectually, the first warrant should have been altogether withdrawn, and it should have been shewn that his intention really was to substitute the one for the other—In the matter of Elmy and Sawyer (2), Rogers v. Jones (3). Besides, if the commitment took place on the 8th of April, and was for three months, and the subsequent warrants, though dated the 8th of April, are not delivered till the 15th, and are also to detain the prisoners for three months, without saying that such imprisonment is to be calculated from the date of the warrant,—if so, it would operate from the delivery, and would authorize the detention of the prisoners for three months after they had been seven days in prison, the period of three months being the longest term of imprisonment given by the statute. Lastly, even the last warrants are bad; for it does not appear that the offence was committed at a place in which the Justices had jurisdiction. Nor does it appear that the nature of the service was such as to bring the case within the act of parliament—Lancaster v. Greaves (4).

Whitehurst, contra.—The offence is sufficiently laid within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, who is described as acting in and for the county, and it cannot be pretended that the information does not disclose an offence within the act of parliament. Then, as to the first objection: in Elmy and Sawyer's case, a power of amendment was given by the same statute which gave the power to commit, and it was not shewn that the amendment was made in pursuance of the statute. It is a fallacy to suppose that the Court will assume that the first warrant was the conviction on which the latter warrant was founded. That is not so; on the contrary, a conviction may, if necessary, be drawn up at any time to support the warrant.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We think you are right upon that point; if the latter warrants are good, the Court will not look at the former documents.

1844. { THE QUEEN v. JOHN HINDE, CORONER FOR THE COUNTY OF KENT,
May 1. { in re WEBSTER, NOWLAND AND BYRNE.

Coroner — Inquisition — Jurisdiction — Stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 12.

The coroner for the city of Rochester held an inquisition on a body, which met with death in the River Medway, such body having been brought to a spot above high-water mark, sworn to be within the county of Kent, and there viewed by a jury of the city of Rochester:—Held, that the inquisition was bad.

On a former day, three several rules had been obtained, calling on James Lewis, Esq., the coroner for the city of Rochester, to shew cause why three several writs of inquisition, brought up by certiorari, should not be quashed. The first of the inquisitions was as follows:—

“City of Rochester, in the county of Kent, to wit.—An inquisition, indented, taken for our sovereign Lady the Queen, at the Nag’s Head, in the parish of Stoke, in the county of Kent, on the 4th day of December, in the seventh year, &c., before James Lewis, gentleman, coroner of our said Lady the Queen for the said city, on view of the body of John Webster, late of Greenwich, in the said county, fisherman, now lying dead in the said parish of Stoke, in the said county, upon the oath of, &c., good and lawful men of the said city, duly chosen, and who being now here duly sworn and charged to inquire, &c., do upon their oaths say that the said John Webster, on the 30th day of November, in the year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the city aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, in Cold Mouth Creek, in the River Medway, there by the visitation of God, in a natural way, did die. In witness,” &c.

The second inquisition was headed as the former, and purported to be taken “at the house of John Bathurst, called the Nag’s Head, in the parish of St. Margaret, in the city aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on, &c., before, &c., on the body of Patrick Nowland, late a private in the 3rd regiment, now lying dead in the parish of Chatham, in the said county, upon the oath of, &c., good and lawful men of the said city, duly &c., and who being now duly sworn, &c., to inquire, &c., do, upon their oath, say that the said P. N. on the 22nd day of December, in the year aforesaid, at that part of the parish of Chatham aforesaid, which lies within the city aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the shore or bed of the River Medway, there below high-water mark was found dead, and that the said P. N. had a severe wound on his forehead left temple, apparently occasioned by a fall from a stage or platform, running into the said River Medway, on to the shore or bed of the said River Medway, at the said part of the parish aforesaid; and that the said P. N. had been for some time under the waters of the said River Medway, within the said part of the parish aforesaid, in the city aforesaid, by one or both of which before-mentioned causes the said P. N. came by his death. In witness,” &c.

The third inquisition was, “on view of the body of Edward Byrne, now lying dead at the parish of Chatham, in the said county, upon the oath, &c., who being duly sworn, &c., do, upon their oath, say, that the said E. B., on the 11th day of December, A.D. 1843, at the parish aforesaid, in the city aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, in the River Medway, there was found, suffocated and drowned, but how or by what means he came to his death, no evidence thereof does appear to the said jurors. In witness,” &c.

It appeared by the affidavits that the bodies were in each instance picked out of the Medway and brought some yards above high-water mark (but not within the limits of the city or borough of Rochester), for the purpose of being viewed by the jury; that the jury were taken by Mr. Lewis, the coroner for the city and borough of Rochester, from that city, and that the body was viewed by the jury at the spot to which it was so brought, such spot being sworn to be within the county of Kent.

The coroner for the county of Kent was in each instance the prosecutor of the certiorari.

Platt and Bodkin shewed cause.—The body is viewed by a jury of the city of Rochester, and the deceased is found to have died in the River Medway. Before the act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 12, the coroner for the county could not hold inquisitions on such bodies, where brought on shore, as the death did not happen within his jurisdiction; by the preamble of that act, it would appear that the attention of the legislature was directed to cases where the cause of death happened in one place and the death in another. Here it is doubtful whether the act in question applies, as the death in each instance took place within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, and the coroner for the city of Rochester has always been in the habit of holding inquisitions on bodies found dead in the River Medway, the jury who have viewed the body being a jury of the city.

[PATTESON, J.—In 2 Hale, P.C. 66, cited in the judgment in The Queen v. the Great Western Railway Company (1), it is said, "In ancient times, if a man were hurt in the county of A, and died in the county of B, the coroner for the county of B. could not take an inquisition of his death, because the stroke was not given in that county; nor could the coroner for the county of A. take an inquisition, because the body was in the county of B, but they used to remove the body into the county of A, for the coroner for that county there to take the inquisition."]

[COLERIDGE, J.—You do not contend that the place where the body was first brought to land was within the jurisdiction of the city of Rochester. How do you get over the express words of the act of parliament?]

Suppose a dead body first brought to land within the city of Rochester, and afterwards carried into the county of Kent, as in the case of its being taken to the hospital, which is in the county.

[PATTESON, J.—Then it must be brought back to the city, for the purpose of the inquest.]

Jervis, in support of the rule, was not called upon.

1844. } THE QUEEN v. THE INHABITANTS OF STOKE BLISS.
June 5. }

Sessions—Jurisdiction—Appeal, Entry of—Costs—Order.

Though the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 30. s. 3. empowers Justices at sessions to order the payment of costs by parties who have given notice of appeal, yet where notice of appeal against an order of removal was sent, and the appeal was afterwards countermanded, and the appeal being entered by the respondents, the Sessions, by their order, confirmed the order of removal, and also directed the payment by the appellants of the respondents' "costs and charges of attending the sessions to support their said order,"—Held, that the order of confirmation being bad, the order as to costs, being ancillary to the order of confirmation, was bad also.

At a General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, holden at Stafford, the 2nd of January 1844, the following order was made, confirming an order of two Justices, for the removal of Ann Wall and her illegitimate child from the parish of Kingswinford, in the county of Stafford, to the parish of Stoke Bliss, in the county of Hereford:—
"Upon motion of counsel for the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Kingswinford, in the county of Stafford, and upon proof of notice of appeal, &c., and no one appearing on behalf of the appellants, to prosecute their appeal, it is ordered that the said order made by the said Justices be and the same is hereby confirmed; and it is further ordered that the churchwardens and overseers of the parish of Stoke Bliss do and shall forthwith pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Kingswinford, the sum of 15*l.* 10*s.*, for costs and charges, which they have incurred, and been put unto in attending the court this day, to support their said order."

(1) 3 Q.B. Rep. 338; s. c. 11 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) M.C. 86.

In Easter term, a rule nisi was obtained, calling on the respondents to shew cause why the said order should not be quashed for the insufficiency thereof, and the following facts appeared on the affidavits:—The order of removal was served on the 17th of October 1843, notice and grounds of appeal were served in time for the Epiphany sessions 1844; on the first day of the sessions (Tuesday, January 2), the respondents received a letter from the attorney, for the appellants, inclosing a copy of a notice of countermand of the appeal, and stating that the delay had arisen in consequence of the absence of a material witness, and that if any removal took place they should give fresh grounds of appeal, as the paupers belonged to a third parish, which fully appeared from the grounds of appeal as already sent. The practice of the Staffordshire sessions is, that notice of countermand of any appeal must be given not later than the Monday before the sessions; and if given later, the appellants are in such case liable by the practice of the court to pay costs to the respondents for their failure to try the appeal. On the third day of the sessions, the 4th of January, the respondents, having entered the appeal, applied for the costs incurred in preparing to try the appeal and incident thereto, and upon due proof of notice and grounds of appeal, and notice of countermand, the Sessions made the above-mentioned order.

Whitmore and Allen shewed cause.—The order as to the costs is good. The power of the Sessions to grant costs to respondent parishes is given by stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 30. s. 3 (1). In this case a notice of appeal had been given and was proved at the sessions, though the appeal was not prosecuted. It is true that it was not competent to the respondents to enter the appeal, and therefore the Justices at sessions had no power to confirm the order; yet they had jurisdiction to give the costs, and the respondents were fairly entitled to them.

(1) Which empowers Justices at quarter sessions, "upon any appeal before them, there to be had, for or concerning the settlement of any poor person, or upon any proof before them, there to be made, of notice of any such appeal to have been given by the proper officer to the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of any parish or place, though they did not afterwards prosecute such appeal, shall at the same quarter sessions award and order, to the party for whom and in whose behalf such appeal shall be determined, or to whom such notice did appear to have been given as aforesaid, such costs and charges in the law as by the said Justices in their discretion shall be thought most reasonable and just, to be paid by the churchwardens, overseers of the poor, or any other person against whom such appeal shall be determined, or by the person who did give such notice as aforesaid."

Cooke, contra.—The respondents had no right to appear at the January sessions; no appeal was entered, and there are, since the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 76, two periods for appealing, one when the order of removal is received, and one when the actual removal takes place.

[PATTESON, J.—But not two appeals. Suppose you do not choose to appeal after the actual removal?]

Then probably the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 30. would give the respondents a right to costs, but that statute does not tie the appellants down to any particular session.

[COLERIDGE, J.—The order is quite independent of the ultimate result of the appeal.]

Then, secondly, if so much of the order of Sessions, as confirms the order of Justices, is bad, which is admitted, then that part which gives costs to respondents "for attending to support their order," cannot stand.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—The appellant parish in this case give a notice of appeal, which they afterwards countermand, at the same time telling the respondents that they mean to resist the order. The order is afterwards confirmed on the entry of the appeal by the respondents, and it is contended, that notice of appeal having been given, the statute 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 30. gives the Sessions power to award costs as against the parish giving such notice, though they had no power to confirm the order of removal. It seems to me that if the order was made in the alternative contemplated by the statute, it might be good; but it also seems clear that the Sessions in this case intended to confirm the order, and to give the costs of confirmation. Now they had no power to confirm the order, and such confirmation, therefore, falls to the ground; and if so, that part which relates to costs, being ancillary to the confirmation, cannot stand.

PATTESON, J.—The order is attempted to be supported in respect of the costs only; but we must look at the entire judgment to which the costs are incidental. I am far from saying that if the order had been confined to giving the respondents the costs of the day, it might not have been supported, as it does not appear to me that the effect of the new Poor Law Act would be to introduce any new practice in that respect.

WILLIAMS, J.—It cannot be said that the respondents were not entitled to some costs, but I, for one, am not sorry to decide on the documents which are laid before us, without referring to the affidavits, and I cannot but see that this is an order for confirmation of an order of removal, and must be so taken. As to the costs, the order is to compensate for expenses incurred in respect of the order of removal; the order as to the costs then is made to depend on the confirmation, and falls together with it.

COLERIDGE, J.—I am of the same opinion. I do not say that this was not the right time for making a proper application for costs; or that such an order might not be, under certain circumstances, severable; but in this case, in the form in which the order is drawn, I do not see how the latter part could stand alone. If so, one part is not separable from the other. The question is one of construction, and we must take the whole document together. It appears to me that the Sessions have thought that they had jurisdiction to confirm the order, and having accordingly confirmed it, they have proceeded to give costs, as ancillary to the judgment of confirmation; and as the confirmation cannot be supported, the order is bad altogether.

Highway—Surveyor—5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50
—Trespass—Jurisdiction.

Trespass does not lie against a surveyor of highways, for entering lands and cutting drains under the powers of the Highway Act, without tendering amends for the injury done. The Justices, at special sessions, are the only persons to ascertain and settle the amount of damages to be paid.

* Reported by H. S. Selfe, Esq.

NEW SERIES, XIII.—MAG. CAS.

And the surveyor is not bound to have the amount of damages ascertained within twenty-one days of his committing the injury.

Trespass quare clausum fregit.

Plea—Not guilty, by statute.

At the trial, before Tindal, C.J., at the last Spring Assizes for the county of Warwick, it appeared that the defendants, who were the surveyors of the district, had on the 24th of March 1843, entered the close of the plaintiffs, which adjoined the highway, and had opened a drain therein, for the purpose of carrying off the water from the highway. Notice of action was given on the 8th of April 1843. No evidence was given whether any special sessions had intervened between the 24th of March and the commencement of the action. No satisfaction or tender of satisfaction to the plaintiffs for the damage done was proved. Upon these facts, the Lord Chief Justice directed a verdict for the defendants, leave being reserved to the plaintiffs to move to enter a verdict with 40s. damages, if the Court should be of opinion, that the defendants were not justified, under the general Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50.

A rule nisi was obtained accordingly in Easter term last, by—

Channell, Serj., against which,—

Adams, Serj. (Hayes with him,) now shewed cause.—By the 45th section of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, the Justices of the Peace, within their respective divisions, are required to hold not less than eight nor more than twelve special sessions, in every year, for the purposes of the act. By sections 54. and 67. of the same act, it is provided, that the damages for injury done by the surveyors acting under the act, shall be settled and ascertained by order of the Justices at a special sessions for the highways. And it was held in Boyfield v. Porter (1), which was decided upon corresponding sections of the old Highway Act, 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. ss. 27. & 29, that there is no other mode of ascertaining what the amends are to be except by going before the special sessions. Here, the injury alleged was done under the act. But it did not appear in this case, that any special sessions were held between the 24th of

(1) 13 East, 200.

March and the commencement of the action. It was impossible, therefore, to ascertain what the damage was; and, consequently, impossible to tender it. Further, it was for the plaintiffs, who complain of damage done to their lands, to go before the Justices, in order to have the amount ascertained. The surveyors are not bound to make the inquiry; for non constat that cutting a drain was an injury to the plaintiffs. Even, however, if it was the duty of the defendants to go to the sessions for the purpose, there was no laches on their part, for they never had the opportunity of so doing. And even assuming that the defendants had an opportunity of going to the sessions, and failed to do so, this does not make them trespassers. The Highway Act gives them a licence to enter the land and make the drain, and a mere non-feazance subsequently cannot make them trespassers ab initio. There is no limitation in the act as to the time when the Sessions are to decide the amount of injury done.

Manning, Serj. (Mellor with him,) contra.—It is true, that in Boyfield v. Porter the Court held, under the old Highway Act, that the jury, at the trial, could not decide the amount of the damage done, or the sufficiency of the amends tendered. This was a hardship on persons whose lands had been taken by surveyors; and, therefore, under the new Highway Act, different words are introduced; the 67th section enacting, that surveyors are to “make drains, &c., upon paying,” &c. The word “upon” was not in the section of the former act, on which Boyfield v. Porter was decided, and its introduction shews the intention of the legislature, that amends should be tendered at the time the damage is done. It is a condition precedent to the doing of the injury, or at least is concurrent with the entry. But supposing the payment not to be a condition precedent, then the object of the legislature in requiring, in the 109th section, that twenty-one days’ notice of action should be given, could only be to enable the surveyors to go within that time before the Justices, and ascertain the amount of damage to be tendered. They commit what is prima facie a trespass; they defend themselves under the statute: it is for them, therefore, who have done the injury, to take the steps to bring themselves within the protection of the statute. If they fail to do so, they are trespassers ab initio, and liable in the present form of action—Lister v. Lobleigh (2), and Paddock v. Forrester (3), were referred to.

Cur. adv. vult.

TINDAL, C.J.—It appears to me that the proper construction of the 67th section of the general Highway Act, does not make the ascertainment of the damage done, and tender of payment of the sum so ascertained, conditions precedent to the exercise of the powers used by the defendants on the present occasion. The object of the entry by the defendants upon the land of the plaintiffs was to let off the water, which had accumulated upon the highway, and which was a nuisance; and under the 67th section power is given to the surveyor “to make drains, &c. as he shall deem necessary in and through any lands adjoining or lying near to any highway.” Then follow the words “upon paying the owner or occupier of such lands or grounds for the damages which he shall sustain thereby.” Taking it most favourably for the plaintiffs, and stopping at these words, without referring to the words which follow, the prima facie interpretation of the section is, that the payment shall be concurrent with the entry for the purpose of making the works. But it is most clear that it would be neither practicable nor possible for the surveyors, before ascertaining what injury has been sustained, to pay for an unknown quantity of damage. And therefore, without looking to the remaining words of the section, or to the 54th section, to which they refer, I should have thought the payment for the damage was necessarily a condition subsequent to the infliction of the injury. But the section does not stop there. It goes on to say, the damages “to be settled and paid in such manner as the damages for getting materials in inclosed lands or grounds are herein directed to be settled and paid:” treating the settlement as one thing, the payment as another, immediate or not, just as the Magistrates shall order. Now, the words of the 54th section are “making such satisfaction for the materials which may be got or taken away, and also for the damage done to such lands, &c. as shall be settled and ascertained by order of the Justices at a special session for the highways." I cannot see any material distinction between the words of the 67th section "upon paying for the damages which he shall sustain thereby," and those used in the 54th section "making such satisfaction for the damage done to such lands." Now, the case of Boyfield v. Porter, which was decided on the act of 13 Geo. 3. c. 78, shews, that the Justices form the only tribunal to judge of the amount of injury sustained. The Court, in Boyfield v. Porter, held, that it was unnecessary to shew whether the amends offered were or were not sufficient to compensate for the damage done, because the jury could not try that question, which the act of Geo. 3. in terms directed should be left entirely to the Justices in petty sessions. The only question therefore, is, whether there is any material difference between the old Highway Act, the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. ss. 27. & 29, and the corresponding sections of the present general Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. If we look at the words of those sections, the language seems to be substantially the same in both acts. Except that in the former act, there was interposed a power of an immediate agreement with the party injured, the power of settling the damage done is the same in both acts. The case of Boyfield v. Porter therefore must decide the present case. It has been also said, that even if the payment for the damage sustained be a condition subsequent, at all events the defendants ought to have ascertained the amount, and paid it before action brought. But I see nothing in the act to limit the time for the ascertainment of the damage. It may be done this very day; or the plaintiffs may now make application to the Justices at the next special sessions for the highways.

COLTMAN, J.—I am of the same opinion. I think the payment not a condition precedent to the inflicting of the damage. It is true the 29th section of the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. says, "the said surveyor making such satisfaction," &c., and the 67th section of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. is "upon paying for the damages," &c. And, undoubtedly, the word "upon" has at first the appearance of making the payment a condition precedent. But the decision in Boyfield v. Porter is so consistent with reason and the necessities of the case, that I should require far more evidence of the intention of the legislature to make the payment by the surveyors a condition precedent to the power they have of entering lands under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, than I can see used in that act, before I could so hold. Then it is said, that the defendants were bound to go before the Justices to ascertain the damage done by them. This argument is rested on the 109th section of the act, and it is contended, that the defendants are not protected in this action of trespass, unless they tendered sufficient satisfaction before action brought. But, I think, this is not the proper construction of the statute. There are cases, undoubtedly, in which satisfaction must be tendered. Those are, where a party, believing himself to be acting within the act, has not properly pursued its powers and provisions; but here the defendants acted strictly within the act; and in such a case, I think it unnecessary they should tender amends. To hold that they were bound to do so would involve this absurdity, that they would be bound by law to do that which they had not the power to do, for there might be no special sessions held within twenty-one days, at the expiration of which the action might be brought. It is unnecessary to decide, whether the surveyors or the party complaining of injury is bound to originate the inquiry before the Justices.

CRESSWELL, J. concurred.

1844. }
June 5. } THE QUEEN v. ROSE.

Rate—Highway Rate—Woods, Rateability of—Meaning of Words "usually rated" in 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 27.

The words "usually rated" to the highways in 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 27, must be construed to mean such as have been usually actually rated in the parish for which the rate is made.

And the Sessions are right in inquiring only whether such woods were usually rated, in point of fact, at the time of the passing of that statute, and not whether such woods were "rateable," or whether they were usually rated in other parishes.

On appeal by H. P. Powys against a rate made by Thomas Rose, surveyor of the highways in the parish of Whitchurch, in the counties of Oxford and Berks, dated 10th of November 1843, wherein he was rated (inter alia) for "woodland 48l." the Sessions amended the rate by striking out the above item, subject to the opinion of this court on the following

CASE.

The appellant from the year 1838, up to and at the time of the making of the rate appealed against, was the occupier of certain timber woods within the parish of Whitchurch, the same not being saleable underwood within the intent and meaning of the act of the 43rd Eliz., and being property which at the time of the passing of the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, and also at the time of the making of the said rate was not liable to be rated and assessed to the relief of the poor. From the year 1809, down to and including the year in which the said act of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. was passed, the said timber woods had not been rated to the highways of the said parish of Whitchurch. Since the passing of that statute the appellant, as surveyor of the highways under the last-mentioned statute for the year 1840, rated himself in respect of the said timber woods, and paid such rate. Timber woods of a similar description to those occupied by the appellant have always been rated to the repairs of the highways in the majority of the parishes in the county and neighbourhood, but in some they have not been so rated since the year 1809. It was admitted, that if the appellant was rateable in respect of the woods in question the amount of the rate was fair, and the only question between the appellant and respondent was, whether the appellant was rateable in respect of such timber woods. If the Court should be of opinion that the appellant was so rateable, the order of Sessions was to be quashed. If the Court should be of opinion that the appellant was not so rateable, then the order of Sessions to be confirmed.

Walesby, in support of the order of Sessions.—The Sessions find expressly that these woods have not been usually rated.

The Court then called on—

Keating and Plaine, contra.—It may be true that the woods in question may not have been usually rated in this particular parish, but the question is, whether the words "usually rated" in stat. 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 27. (1), have not a more general signification, and it is found by the Sessions that timber woods of this description have been always rated to the highways in the majority of parishes in the county and neighbourhood. By the law as it stood under 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. s. 30, "all occupiers of lands, tenements, woods, tithes, and hereditaments," were rateable to the highways, and the stat. 34 Geo. 3. c. 74. s. 4. regulates the proportion of statute labour to be performed by occupiers of the same description of property, and it cannot be said that any local practice is to controul the general words of an act of parliament. These words, therefore, must have been rateable at the time of the passing of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 30. If so, does the 27th section of that act exempt them? The 33rd section gives an exemption in respect of property, the owner or occupier of which had, previous to the passing of the act, been legally exempt from the performance of statute duty, but it is not found as a fact that the appellant was so exempt, nor does he dispute the rate on that ground; and this rate has been, in fact, persevered in down to the year 1840, the statute in question having passed in 1835. The fact of their not having been rated from 1809 to 1835, can be accounted for by referring to a case of Aubrey v. Fisher (2), but that case turned upon the rateability of such woods as saleable underwoods.

[PATTESON, J.—The very words of the statute seem to contemplate that some woods are not rateable.]

[COLERIDGE, J.—Your argument assumes that "rateable" and "rated" must necessarily mean the same thing.]

The word "rated" must refer to statute duty, from which no description of wood was exempt before the passing of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50.

[PATTESON, J.—Suppose all the woods in a given parish were rateable before the

(1) Which enacts, "that a rate (for the purposes of the act) shall be made, assessed, and levied by the surveyor upon all the property now liable to be rated and assessed to the relief of the poor; provided that the same rate shall also extend to such woods, mines, and quarries of stone, or other hereditaments as have been heretofore usually rated to the highways."

act, and new woods planted after it passed, would they be rateable?]

[LORD DENMAN, C. J.—The Sessions have found the fact of rating as to these particular woods.]

Walesby, contra.—The term “rated” is not synonymous with “rateable.” The plain words of the statute must be adhered to, and there is no inconsistency in the construction contended for by the respondents.—(He was then stopped.)

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—We are called upon to put a construction on the 27th section of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, and that it is not possible to do satisfactorily. The difficulty is, that that section seems to assume that some particular woods were not rated to the highways at the time the act passed, whereas all woods were then by law rateable to the highways. I do not see what we can do in such a case, but to take the words in their ordinary sense, and say that “rated” must mean actually rated, and that, in the particular parish; and the fact that these woods were not rated at the time the act passed, has been found by the Sessions. This is a construction that the words of the statute will bear, though it is not very satisfactory to come to such a conclusion.

PATTESON, J.—I am also of opinion that by the word “rated” must be understood actually rated, though it may be difficult to say what was the exact meaning of the legislature. At all events, here we have the fact found, that since the year 1809, no rate to the highways has been made on these woods.

WILLIAMS, J.—We can only adopt Mr. Keating’s construction, by holding the word “rated” to mean “rateable.” We must, however, adhere to the words of the statute, and the question becomes one of fact which the Sessions have found.

COLERIDGE, J.—I agree, but not without doubt. It is difficult to say what construction to put on a modern act of parliament so full of words as this is. It seems to me that we are safe in adopting a literal construction, and the rule we lay down is certainly the most easy of application.

Order of Sessions confirmed.

June 26. } ANOTHER.

Bastard—Order of Affiliation—Jurisdiction—Sureties, Tender of—Waiver of Objection.

Where the putative father of a bastard child, being served with a notice of an application at petty sessions for an order on him to reimburse the guardians for the maintenance and support of the child, attended at the sessions, and procured an adjournment of the case; and afterwards, at the subsequent petty sessions, applied to have the case heard at the Quarter Sessions, and tendered sureties, but the Justices having decided on proceeding with the case, he cross-examined the witnesses, and made his defence:—Held, that though the Justices might have been wrong in proceeding with the case, the party had waived the objection to the jurisdiction by what he had done.

A rule nisi had been obtained, calling on the Rev. J. Clarke and the Rev. W. P. Thomas, clerks, Justices of the Peace of the county of Somerset, to shew cause why a writ of certiorari should not issue, to remove into this court a certain order or judgment, and other proceedings made and taken by and before them at a petty session, held January 4, 1844, at Wellington, in and for the said county, on the application of the guardians of the Wellington union, for an order on H. B. Bellett, as the putative father of a bastard child, born of Sarah Twose, single woman, to reimburse the said union for the maintenance and support of the said child. It appeared from the affidavits, that Bellett having been duly served with a notice of the intended application by the guardians, attended at the petty sessions on the 7th of December, when in consequence of the absence of Bellett’s attorney, it was agreed, that the case should be postponed, and it was accordingly postponed to the next petty sessions, held on the 10th of January. On that day Bellett attended, and tendered two sureties, in conformity with 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85. s. 3, and stated that he was desirous that the case should be heard at the next Quarter Sessions. The Justices, however, decided that the hearing was to be proceeded with before them, on the ground that it had already been entered upon when the hearing was adjourned; and evidence having been accordingly given by the guardians, Bellett cross-examined the witnesses, and addressed the Court in answer to the charge, and the Justices ultimately made the order.

Godson and Pashley now shewed cause.—The statute 2 & 3 Vict. c. 85. s. 3, provides, that “if the party charged shall declare to the Justices in petty session, that he is desirous that the charge shall be heard at the Quarter Sessions of the Peace then next, and shall then and there enter into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties, &c., then the Justices shall not proceed further to hear the charge.” The jurisdiction of the Justices in petty sessions, therefore, is not ousted until the recognizance is entered into, which was not done in this case.

[COLERIDGE, J.—But suppose the Justices refuse to take the recognizance?]

Then the party should get a mandamus.

[PATTESON, J.—Would not the tender of the recognizance take away the jurisdiction?]

At all events, the party has waived the objection, by proceeding with the case—Brunskill v. Giles (1), Farwig v. Cockerton (2), Cooze v. Neumegen (3), The Queen v. the Justices of Cheshire (4). Here, the party, finding the decision against him, lies by for three months, so as to prevent a fresh order being made, and then applies for a certiorari.

Carrow, contra.—What was the situation of the party after the adjournment? He had clearly a right to claim to be heard at the Quarter Sessions. If so, he is still in the same situation. The admission or proof of the notice was not such a hearing as to prevent the jurisdiction of the Justices being taken away by an application for a removal—The King v. Lord Hastings (5). It is not contended, that if there had been anything amounting to a hearing, the application for a removal was in time; but the conduct of the party, when he found the Justices determined to hear the case, in doing all in his power to prevent the order being made will not prejudice him—Lawrence v. Willcock (6), and Lesmore v. Beadle (7).

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—It appears to me, that this party cannot now say that the petty sessions had not jurisdiction over this matter. He first applies for an adjournment, and then he comes and tenders a recognizance. If he had come away when the recognizance was refused, and the Magistrates had proceeded with the case, the question would have been different; but he does go on with the case. I think he has waived the objection by what he has done.

PATTESON, J.—I think this rule should be discharged, on the ground that the objection was waived.

COLERIDGE, J.—I think this was a clear waiver of the objection. The cases of Lawrence v. Willcock and Lesmore v. Beadle are distinguishable. There, the objection was altogether wanting. Here, it was competent to the party to review the jurisdiction, by consenting to have the case proceeded with.

Rule discharged.

Bridge—Costs—Indictment—Statute.

Indictment against the defendants, at the Quarter Sessions for the county of Merioneth, for not repairing a common and public bridge, called Pont Cleifion, situate and being in the parish of Mallwyd, in the said county, being a common highway for all, &c.

Plea, by the inhabitants of the county, except the hundred of Mawddwy hereinafter mentioned, that the county of Merioneth, from time immemorial, has been divided into divers, to wit, six hundreds, called, &c., (the hundred of Mawddwy being one), and that the inhabitants of the hundred of Mawddwy have from time whereof, &c., been used and accustomed to repair and amend, and still of right ought to repair and amend the several bridges situate, lying, and being in the said hundred, independently of the inhabitants of the other hundreds of the said county; and that the said bridge is situate and lies within the said hundred of Mawddwy, and that the inhabitants of the said county ought not to be charged, &c. Verification.

Replication, that the inhabitants of the hundred of Mawddwy from time whereof, &c., have not been used and accustomed to repair, &c.

The indictment, having been removed into this court by certiorari, was tried before Gurney, B. at the Merionethshire Summer Assizes 1843, and the defendants were found guilty.

Costs were applied for on the part of the Crown, under 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 98 (1), and the learned Judge, being of opinion that the defence was frivolous, made a certificate under the above statute, ordering the inhabitants of the county of Merionethshire to pay costs to the prosecutor.

(1) Which enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful for the Court before whom any indictment shall be preferred for not repairing highways, to award costs to the prosecutor, to be paid by the person so indicted, if it shall appear to the said Court that the defence made to such indictment was frivolous or vexatious."

Sect. 5. provides, that in the construction of the act the word "highways" shall be understood to mean all roads and bridges not being county bridges.

Sect. 1. repeals the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78.

A rule nisi having been obtained for setting aside the certificate,— Welsby now shewed cause.—The certificate cannot be supported under the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, which, by sect. 5, is applied to bridges (not being county bridges); yet it is good under the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. s. 1. (2) That section must be considered as incorporating in the statute the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. s. 64, which gives a similar power as to costs—The Queen v. Pembridge (3), The Queen v. Preston (4).

Godson and Hodges, contra.—The 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. was the general Highway Act, and that is expressly repealed by the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. The certificate was granted under the 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, which, it is admitted, does not apply to the case. The 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. being repealed, the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. is the only act which applies to the case. The effect of the repeal of 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. must be, to repeal all such portions of it as are referred to in other acts; besides, if any part of 13 Geo. 3. was kept alive at all, it only operates with reference to the improved and widened bridges mentioned in the act, but there is nothing to shew that this was such a bridge. Besides the order made by the Magistrates to indict (which was the foundation of the whole proceeding) was made under 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 95.

(2) Which enacts, "that the several powers and authorities vested by the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78, in the surveyor of highways, as well for getting materials as for removing all nuisances and annoyances from bridges and roads, shall be vested in the surveyors of county bridges, and the roads at the ends thereof; and the several penalties, forfeitures, matters and things in the said act contained, relating to highways, shall be, and the same are hereby extended and applied, as far as the same are applicable, to such bridges, and the roads at the ends thereof, as fully and effectually as if the same and every part thereof were herein repeated and re-enacted."

13 Geo. 3. c. 78. s. 64, contained a power for the Judge to make an order for costs in the same terms as those contained in 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. s. 98.

(3) 3 Gale & Dav. 5; s. c. 12 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) Q.B. 47.

(4) 7 Dowl. P.C. 593.

LORD DENMAN, C.J.—There is, no doubt, a difficulty in reconciling these enactments. The Judge acted under the 98th section of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, and it is clear that that act has repealed the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78, and it is equally clear that that act itself does not apply to county bridges, and it is put as if the act had said that a certificate might be given in the case of all bridges except county bridges. But then there is another act of parliament, namely, the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59, which, after referring to the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78, extends to county bridges all the penalties, forfeitures, matters, and things in the said act contained, relating to highways, as far as the same are applicable to such bridges, as fully and effectually as if the same were therein re-enacted. Supposing, then, that the late act does not apply, does not the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. keep alive the power of the Judge to certify? I think it must be so: for if the 13 Geo. 3. s. 78. were set out in the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59, instead of being merely referred to, then it is clear that a power of awarding costs against the inhabitants would have been given. The only doubt then is, whether the words “penalties, forfeitures, matters, and things,” are to be considered as including an indictment for not repairing a highway. Now I do not see what can come more properly within that provision than an indictment of this sort, and the defence to it. My opinion then, though not without some doubt, is, that the words of the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. s. 1. kept alive the power of the Judge to certify, and that the rule must be discharged.

PATTESON, J.—I certainly feel great difficulty in this case. It is clear that the 98th section of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50. does not apply, because the interpretation clause excludes county bridges; but we find an act of parliament, 13 Geo. 3. c. 78, which has a section (sect. 64.) which applies to highways; then comes another act, 43 Geo. 3. c. 59, by which all penalties, forfeitures, matters and things in the former act relating to highways are extended and applied to county bridges, &c., as fully and effectually as if the same were therein repeated and re-enacted. To give a proper sense to these words, it is contended that this act must be read as if the whole of the 13 Geo. 3.

c. 78. were set out in it; if so, cadit quæstio, for it is admitted that the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. is not repealed. But it is said, on the other side, that the act of 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. is not now to be read as if those words were in it, but that they were to have effect so long as the 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. was itself in force, and no longer. Now, I do not think that that can be so, for what meaning would there be given to the words “repeated and re-enacted”? If then the 64th section is considered as repeated and re-enacted, and therefore now in force with respect to county bridges, the Judge was, under it, empowered to certify.

WILLIAMS, J.—It is impossible to give a decided opinion on this case. The only thing that is quite clear is, that the late act has no bearing whatever on the question, for it expressly excludes county bridges from its operation. But a question is made, whether where a particular act of parliament is expressly repealed, it can be treated as virtually kept alive in another act of parliament; that difficulty is met by saying that it is expressly done, and the object must have been to save the trouble of incorporating the words in an act of parliament, already sufficiently lengthy.

COLERIDGE, J.—This is certainly a question of some difficulty, but I think that the more it is considered the more it will appear that our decision is right. If the certificate could be sustained before the passing of 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 50, it would be so sustained by the united operation of 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. and 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. What has been then the effect of the late act? If the certificate was only sustainable by reason of 13 Geo. 3. c. 78. it is a nullity; but if it is sustainable by reason of 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. it will stand good. If then we are to read the 43 Geo. 3. c. 59. as if certain portions of the former act were actually inserted in it, there will be enough to support the certificate. The words of the act of 43 Geo. 3. are not restricted to certain bridges thereafter to be made; if that had been the case, the question would have been different, but the words are general, relating to all county bridges. We must, therefore, hold the certificate to be good.

A habeas corpus having been obtained, directed to the keeper of the house of correction at Derby, for bringing up the body of Edwin Copestick, the following warrant of commitment was returned:—"Derbyshire, to wit. To G. P, the constable and the keeper, &c. Whereas information and complaint hath been made before me, W. W. A, Esq., one of her Majesty's Justices, &c., by J. D, agent of C. Granville, of Swandlincote, in the said county, upon the oath of the said J. D, against Edwin Copestick, late of Swandlincote aforesaid, in the said county, servant to the said C. Settlement by Rating—Appeal.

It is not enough to state as a ground of appeal, or in an examination, that the pauper had occupied a house and paid one or more of the parochial rates or taxes in respect of such house, without also stating that he was "charged with" such rates or taxes.

On appeal against the order of two Justices removing James Walker from the parish of St. Olave, Southwark, to the parish of St. Mary Magdalen, Bermondsey, both in the county of Surrey, the Sessions quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court on the following

CASE.

The examination on which the removal was made, shewed a settlement of the pauper in the appellant parish by renting a tenement: The fourth ground of appeal was, "that the said J. Walker, in or about the month of May 1841, became tenant of and rented of one Mr. Goddard, a house situate, &c. in the parish of A, and occupied the same for seven months, and paid one or more of the parochial rates or taxes in respect of the said house, and thereby gained a settlement in the said parish of A." The respondents, at the hearing, having proved a settlement in the appellant parish, as stated in the examination, the appellants proposed to prove the settlement in the third parish, under the fourth ground of appeal: the respondents, however, objected to the appellants going into such proof, because such ground of appeal was insufficient in not stating that the pauper was even rated to or charged with any parochial rates or taxes. The Sessions, being of opinion that the statement in the fourth ground of appeal was sufficient, quashed the order, subject to the opinion of this Court on the sufficiency of the said fourth ground of appeal.

Wallinger, in support of the order of Sessions.—It is objected that it is not said in the ground of appeal that the party was "charged with" the parochial taxes, as well as that he paid them; but it is stated that he paid the parochial taxes in respect of the house, situate in the parish, of which he is stated to have been the tenant; he must, therefore, have been charged with them; it is not necessary that his name should appear in the rate.

[PATTESON, J.—There must be a rating of some person in respect of the house.]

In St. Mary-le-More v. Heavytree (1), it seems to have been thought sufficient to rate the house, without stating the name of the occupier. In The King v. Edgbaston (2), the question was as to which party was in fact rated. In The King v. Rainham (3), it appeared that the pauper, in fact, was not rated at all.

[COLERIDGE, J.—How does it appear that any rate was made during this party's occupation? He might have paid a rate directly after he came.]

That will not be assumed, and it is not contended that any one else was in fact rated.

LORD DENMAN, J.C.—We cannot make any assumption one way or the other: the order must be quashed.

PATTESON, J., WILLIAMS, J., and COLERIDGE, J. concurred.

Montagu Chambers and Corner, contra, were not called upon.

Order of Sessions quashed.

Wallinger also took a preliminary objection to the return to the certiorari, on the ground that the writ directed the Justices to return all orders, &c. relating to an appeal by "the inhabitants of St. Mary, Bermondsey," whereas the order of Sessions shewed that the appeal was by "the churchwardens and overseers of St. Mary, Bermondsey." The Queen v. Colbeck (4), The King v. Heddingham Sible (5), The Queen v. Barking (6), The King v. Plint (7), The King v. Newton (8).

Montagu Chambers, contra.—The Court will not now entertain an objection to the certiorari—The Queen v. Fordham (9).

Criminal Information—Time of moving for.

The applicant for a criminal information must make his motion either in the term immediately succeeding the time when the circumstances come to his knowledge, or so early in the next term as to afford the defendant a reasonable opportunity to shew cause in that term.

F. V. Lee moved for a criminal information against Mr. Harris, the mayor of Abingdon, upon affidavits which stated that an information was laid before him on the 30th of January last, under the 57 Geo. 3. c. 93, and 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 17, charging a person with having extorted from one Westbrook, the complainant, 2s. 3d. for a warrant of distress, 2s. 6d. for an appraisement stamp, and 6d. for an appraisement, when no appraisement had been made and no stamp used. The summons was issued on the 6th of February, and the case was heard on the 13th of that month, when the charge was dismissed, an appraisement on a stamp being produced. It had been subsequently ascertained that Harris, in the interval between the lodging of the information and the hearing, had gone with an attorney's clerk named Godfrey and induced the appraiser to make out the appraisement on a stamp. The complainant had first received the intelligence about the 10th of April, and on the 4th of June he sent copies of the affidavits, on which this motion was made, to Harris. No reason was assigned for this delay.

WIGHTMAN, J.—I have always understood the rule to be, that a party applying for a criminal information must come either in the same term as that in which he obtains intelligence of the matter, or within such a period in the succeeding term that the person against whom the application is made may shew cause against it in that term. Now here the applicant does not come promptly; he

An accusation of this kind is not to be kept hanging over a man's head the whole of the long vacation. According to the rule of practice, a party making an application like this must either come in the term after he knows of the matter, or within such time in the next term that the accused may be reasonably called upon to shew cause. Mandamus—Order of Removal—Appeal after quashing prior Order—Poor.

An order of removal having been quashed generally by the Sessions, and a fresh order obtained upon appeal against the latter order, the appellants produced the record of the sessions quashing the prior order between them and the respondents. The respondents then tendered evidence to shew that that order had been quashed under a written general consent, on account of a defect in form, which the Sessions refused to hear:—Held, that they were bound to hear the evidence, and that a mandamus might issue to compel them to do so.

An order of two Justices, dated the 2nd of May 1843, having been made for the removal of Harriet Royle, widow, and her three children, from the parish of Cwm, in Flintshire, to the parish of Llangeniew, in Denbighshire, the latter parish gave notice of appeal, and stated the following as one of the grounds:—"That the said order is bad and inoperative, because it was obtained and made after a previous order of removal for the said H. Royle and her children from your said parish of Cwm to our said parish of Llangeniew, dated on or about the 5th of December 1842, and under the hands and seals of H. L. T. and E. L, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace, &c., had been obtained by and on behalf of your said parish of Cwm, and served upon the parish officers of our said parish of Llangeniew, and which said last-mentioned order was duly appealed against by our said parish of Llangeniew, and was by an order of the Court of Quarter Sessions, holden in and for the county of Flint, on, &c., duly quashed upon the said appeal, and which said order of Sessions was obtained on behalf of our said parish, by virtue of a written consent and notice, dated, &c., under the hands of the then churchwardens and overseers of your said parish of Cwm. And neither in the written consent and notice, nor in the said order of Sessions, in any manner is it specified or stated that the said last-mentioned order of removal was to be or was quashed for any defect of form, but the said Court of Quarter Sessions, by virtue of the said written consent and notice, ordered the same to be quashed generally, which said decision was and is conclusive between your said parish of Cwm and the said parish of Llangeniew, as to the settlement of the said H. Royle and her children, unless upon some new ground of settlement or removal, arising since the said order of Sessions was made." When the appeal came on to be heard at the Sessions, the respondents relied upon a settlement obtained prior to the first order of removal, mentioned in the grounds of appeal, and the appellants relied on this ground of appeal as an estoppel. The sessions book was produced thereupon, in which the prior order was stated to have been quashed, and the appellants then tendered evidence to shew that that order was quashed on account of the examination on which it was founded of H. Royle, consisting of hearsay evidence, and consequently merely for want of form. The attorney for the respondents was prepared to prove, that previously to the trial of the former appeal, he called on the attorney for the appellants, and stated, that having discovered the examination to be defective in this respect, the respondents were willing to abandon their order: that a form of abandonment and consent was then drawn up in writing, and it was agreed that the attorney for the appellants should attend at the sessions, and get the order quashed. The respondents further asserted, that they consented to the order being quashed only on the understanding that it was to be quashed for want of form. The reception of this evidence was objected to by the appellants, and the Sessions held it to be inadmissible, as there was no entry on their record, that the former order was quashed for want of form. The last order was therefore quashed, subject, however, to a case which was drawn up in such a form that the opinion of the Court would not have been final. A rule for a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal having been obtained,—

Hayes shewed cause, but, after stating the facts, referring to The Queen v. the Justices of Kesteven (1), he was stopped by Coleridge, J., who called upon—

Townsend to support the rule.—The respondents, in this instance, have pursued the course suggested by this Court, in a variety of cases, of abandoning the former order, when it was discovered to be founded on mere parol testimony, and procuring a fresh one. Then the Sessions were wrong in refusing to admit evidence to shew that the former order was quashed merely for defect of form. According to The King v. Wheelock (2), they were bound to receive that evidence, and, having refused to hear it, this Court will compel them to do so by mandamus. The Queen v. the Justices of Lancashire (3), and The Queen v. Perranzabuloe (4), confirm the ruling in The King v. Wheelock, which is directly in point. Had they heard the evidence, and decided on its effect, the case would have been different; and The Queen v. the Justices of Kesteven differs from the present case in that respect, inasmuch as there the Court actually heard the appeal. Under those circumstances, this Court would not interfere, since they would be, in effect, deciding on the effect of evidence. That distinction is pointed out in the judgment. The Sessions have not here stated that the explanation was sufficient or insufficient, but simply have refused to hear the case, which they had no right to do.

[COLERIDGE, J. to Hayes.—Do you mean to contend that the Sessions were right in refusing to hear evidence to shew the circumstances under which the former order was quashed?]

Hayes.—The evidence tendered was inadmissible, and the Sessions were right. The consent to quash was in writing, and that being the agreement between the parties, it could not be varied by parol evidence, which would have been the case if the term “not on the merits” could be imported. The record, too, of Sessions could not be explained; and no case has gone so far as to say that such evidence could affect it. At all events, the Sessions were the proper judges as to that—The Queen v. Churchknowle (5).

[COLERIDGE, J.—This is not like The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Charlbury and Walcott (6), in which the Sessions admitted the evidence, but held the defect pointed out to be merits; for they have shut themselves out from hearing anything. You are assuming a state of facts; but the Sessions having heard nothing, know nothing respecting them. Shew me that the Sessions heard the case, and, though wrong in their decision, I cannot interfere, as this is not a court of appeal.]

This Court will not interfere where Justices have decided evidence not to be admissible, which, in fact, is admissible; and that is the only effect of the decision. In the present case, they have heard and adjudicated upon that question—The King v. the Justices of Carnarvon (7), The King v. Freeston (8).

COLERIDGE, J.—I wish very much that this case had not been argued before me sitting alone, as it comes very near to the dividing line. I shall, however, try to decide it upon broad principles; and if I am wrong in this particular case, I shall do no great harm. The question is, whether the Court of Quarter Sessions have heard the case. If they have, I cannot interfere; but if they have refused to hear it, then this Court will put them in motion. Now, the facts are these :—The former order having been quashed, the respondents procured a fresh one, and upon appeal against that, the former order is put in their way. That order was quashed generally ; and it was contended that this entry by the Sessions was conclusive, and the Justices were of that opinion. In this respect, I think that they were wrong, and that it was open to the other side to shew the former order to have been quashed not on the merits, and that the Sessions were bound to receive evidence to shew the precise ground. It is, however, said, on the other side, that the facts would not prove that it was quashed for want of form, and that the agreement to quash, being general, and in writing, could not be explained. We must, however, look at the substance, and not at the form of the matter. What passed at the prior sessions was behind the back of the respondents, against whom the order was made. The motion and consent were handed in as a matter of course, and the Sessions knew nothing of it, and exercised no discretion upon the subject. Looking at the substance therefore, not at the mere form, it is evident on what footing the former order was quashed. These facts, however, the Sessions have refused to hear, in order to explain the general entry ; and not having done so, I think they must be compelled to hear them. When they have indeed heard both sides, it may be that they may say that the former order was not quashed for mere informality, and then we cannot disturb their decision. The fault lay in their refusing to hear the evidence at all ; for had they done that, we could not have interfered, and then the case would have resembled The Queen v. the Inhabitants of Charlbury and Walcott. Whatever may be the result, it appears to me that the Sessions ought to be compelled to hear the evidence ; and, therefore, this rule must be made absolute.

Rule absolute.

1844. { THE QUEEN v. THE MAYOR OF June 10. { THE BOROUGH OF NEW WINDSOR.

Corporation — Borough Rate — Special Overseer under 1 Vict. c. 81. s. 3.—Refusal to pay Illegal Rate—Mandamus.

The council of the borough of W, pursuant to a report of the Finance Committee, voted and ordered a rate of 6d. in the pound on the rateable property in the borough, in the following proportions :—Parish M, 519l. 3s. ; parish N, 119l. 2s. ; parish O, 31l. 11s. 6d. ; and special overseers, in pursuance of stat. 1 Vict. c. 81, were appointed under the corporate seal for making and collecting the rate of 519l. 3s. in the parish M. These special overseers made a rate of 7d. in the pound, calculated to produce 618l. 4s. 7½d. :—Held, that such rate was illegal, and that a parishioner who had been omitted from the burgess list, by reason of his refusal to pay it, was entitled to a mandamus to the mayor to insert his name thereon under the stat. 1 Vict. c. 78. s. 24.

CONNECTED WITH

THE DUTIES AND OFFICE OF MAGISTRATES:

FROM TRINITY TERM 1843, TO MICHAELMAS TERM 1844.

Acknowledgments — Relief by placing pauper in establishment for maintenance of poor situate out of the parish, not relief out of the parish, or evidence of admission that pauper was settled in relieving parish, 39

Amendment — of venue in margin and body of indictment, 40

Appeal — As to propriety of Sessions quashing order of removal "not upon the merits," where respondents give notice of abandoning order of removal on the ground that examinations are defective, offering to pay costs, &c. 5

— Quashing order of removal not upon the merits, 19

— Where Sessions right in deciding that their first judgment was conclusive without considering whether it was right or wrong, where, on appeal, they quashed order of removal, generally, without going into the evidence, on the ground that examinations, accompanying order, were defective and insufficient, by reason of an omission, which they judged material, and which defect and omission had been specifically pointed out in the statement of grounds of appeal; and another order of removal of pauper, from respondent to appellant parish, was then made, and that order was appealed against, on the ground that the former judgment of the Sessions was conclusive as to the settlement, and at trial of second appeal, respondents tendered evidence to shew that first order was quashed on a preliminary objection to the sufficiency of the examination, and that the merits were not gone into, and Sessions held, that former judgment was conclusive, and refused to hear the evidence, and quashed the order, 19

— Sessions not bound to quash order absolutely, but may quash "not upon the merits;" and Queen's Bench will not entertain question, whether objection went to merits of settlement, though that question is raised on case, Sessions having found in terms that they quashed not on the merits, 22

Appeal — Where parish is incorporated under 22 Geo. 3. c. 28, notice of must be signed by guardian, and he must describe himself therein as such, and not as an overseer, 39

— No objection to notice of, against order of removal, that it does not mention names of Justices who made the order, 41

— Order of Sessions quashing order of removal, on ground that examinations do not disclose any evidence of chargeability, not conclusive of settlement of pauper; and at subsequent sessions ground on which former order was quashed may be shewn. Question of chargeability a question on the merits; i. e. on the merits as they exist at the time of removal, and does not affect the goodness or badness of settlement, 47

— Insufficient statement of renting tenement, consisting of keeping of a cow, for not stating it was to be pasture-fed, 49

— Where notice and statement of grounds of, purport to be signed by one churchwarden and two overseers, one of those who sign as overseers being the same person who has signed as churchwarden, respondents cannot set up as an objection to hearing of appeal, the irregularity in the appointment of officers of appellant parish, that parish being bound by the notice, 54

— Examination sets out a settlement by hiring and service, and also several instances of relief given by appellant parish to pauper and his family, while residing in respondent parish. Ground of appeal that pauper never acquired settlement in said parish of E. (appellant parish) either by hiring and service with said J. S. (the master), or by any other means. Upon hearing, respondents give no evidence of actual settlement, but prove instances of relief set out in examination; appellants at liberty to shew that they had given the relief under a mistake, 75

— Question, whether statement of grounds of appeal contains sufficient particularity for Sessions to determine; and where they have decided it to be insufficient to let appellants into their case, Q.B. will not grant mandamus to Quarter Sessions to enter continuances and hear appeal; overruling The Queen v. the Justices of Carnarvonshire, 2 Q.B. Rep. 325; and The Queen v. the Justices of the West Riding, ibid. 331. Course to be taken by Justices where question as to grounds of appeal being sufficiently particular is doubtful, 78

Appeal—Signature of grounds of, by W. R. T. G. and, for W. H., W. P., "churchwardens and overseers" of parish A. (which formed part of a union,) and J. E., "guardian," insufficient; it not appearing that W. H. had given W. P. H. authority to sign for him: notice not helped by signature of guardian; guardian under Poor Law Amendment Act not having any authority for such a purpose, 86

— Right of appellants to have appeal entered after notice of supersedeas and tender of two guineas costs, notwithstanding rule of sessions, that 30s. only shall be allowed on appeals against order of removal, 114

— Sessions bound to hear evidence from respondents to shew that prior order had been quashed by consent, on account of a defect in form, where order of removal having been quashed generally by Sessions, and fresh order obtained, upon appeal against latter order, appellants produced record of the Sessions quashing prior order between them and respondents, 163

— See Costs.

Apprenticeship—Examination of pauper, stating that he was put out an apprentice by covenant indenture, describes notice of binding with sufficient particularity, as distinguished from binding by parish, 49

Bail—Refusal of application to admit to bail where true bill for murder found against prisoner, but trial postponed in consequence of absence of material witnesses for prosecution. Semble—Court will in no case admit to bail where true bill for capital offence found by grand jury, 113

Baron and Feme—Invalidity of order of removal, separating wife from husband, 107

Bastard—Churchwardens and overseers parties liable to pay costs, and a mandamus to compel Quarter Sessions to make order for costs, where churchwardens and overseers of the parish of O, in city of Exeter, applied at Sessions for order of filiation upon putative father of bastard child chargeable to the parish of O, and application was resisted in limine, on ground, that by local act of parliament, certain persons were incorporated for the management of the poor of the city of E, and that application should have been made by them, and not by churchwardens and overseers; and Quarter Sessions, being of that opinion, made no order of filiation, but refused to order that costs of party should be paid by churchwardens and overseers of O. Application and its dismissal, a sufficient hearing of application within 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 73, 7

— Dismissal of application for order of filiation, by reason of notice not being proved to be signed by a majority of guardians, not a hearing so as to entitle putative father to costs, under proviso in sect. 73. of 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, 111

Bastard—Person charged as putative father not entitled under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84, to declare to the Justices in petty sessions, under section 3, that he is desirous that the charge should be heard and determined at the Quarter Sessions, after some witnesses have been examined, and the case has been partly heard, by his consent and in his presence. Where order to pay an amount bad, as being made for a time exceeding six calendar months next preceding the hearing of application, contrary to section 73. of Poor Law Act. Whether affidavits tendered to shew that the order for payment was bad, as there were no churchwardens for the township of R, the order reciting the application to have been made by the churchwardens and overseers of the township, can be received, as they do not go to oust the Magistrates of jurisdiction. But, held—per Patteson, J., and Williams, J., (Lord Denman, C.J. dubitante), that order was sufficient, even though there were no churchwardens for the township, 116

— Objection to jurisdiction of Justices, waived, where putative father, being served with notice of application at petty sessions for order to reimburse guardians for maintenance, attended at sessions, and procured an adjournment of the case; and afterwards, at subsequent petty sessions, applied to have case heard at Quarter Sessions, and tendered sureties, but, Justices having decided on proceeding, cross-examined witnesses, and made his defence, 157

Bridge—Sufficiency of indictment charging prescriptive liability of township to repair bridge, where township have widened part of bridge. Semble, per Lord Denman, C.J. and Patteson, J., widening of bridge only in the nature of repair, and does not so far alter character of bridge as to enable township to throw repair of new part upon the county, 9

— Power of Judge to certify for costs in case of indictment for non-repair of county bridge, kept alive by 43 Geo. 3. c. 69, 158

Calico Printer. See Master and Servant.

Case—Court of Quarter Sessions ought not simply to state facts, and ask opinion of Court, as a jury, upon them; but, having drawn their own conclusion from facts, may ask whether, in the opinion of this Court, the facts will warrant their finding, 61

— Where Quarter Sessions have dismissed appeal against order of removal, and granted case, which applicants for case have not brought up, Court will not, at their instance, unless under special circumstances, grant mandamus to the Court of Quarter Sessions, to enter continuances and hear appeal, 78

Certiorari—Affidavit of service of notice stating that deponent served "J. S. Esq. and T. H. M. Esq., two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace" for the West Riding, insufficient, by reason of its not stating that the Justices so served were two of the Justices before whom order of Sessions was made; and rule for quashing certiorari made absolute, special case being already set down for argument in the Crown paper, where Court of Quarter Sessions having confirmed an order of removal, subject to a case, a notice of intention of appellant parish to apply for a certiorari, was addressed to "J. S., Esq., and T. H. M., Esq., two of Her Majesty's Justices and keepers of the peace" for the West Riding of the county of York, 26

Certiorari—Fresh writ not issuable where certiorari quashed for above reasons, and more than six months have elapsed from making the order, 28

— Necessary that notice previous to applying for, under 13 Geo. 2. c. 18. s. 5, should be, in the first place, sworn to have been given to two Justices, before whom the order was made. Omission in this respect cannot be supplied by a subsequent affidavit, 46

Chargeability—Insufficient evidence of, in examination, 74

Commitment—Warrant of, directing gaoler to imprison party for three months, omitting day of the month on which it was granted, bad, 16

— on a conviction, must recite a conviction for an offence over which committing Magistrate had jurisdiction; and Court will not presume a conviction to be good, which, according to recital, shews a want of jurisdiction. Commitment under 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 29. s. 26, reciting a conviction, that defendant "did unlawfully kill and carry away one fallow deer, the property of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, against the form of the statute," bad, for omitting to state that the deer was in the uninclosed part of some forest, chase, or purlieu, 43

— under 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 2, stating that defendant, a miner, had contracted to serve A. B, but omitting to state "in the employment of a miner," bad. Commitment, under that statute, alleging complaint of master on oath, and then reciting that the Magistrate had duly examined the proofs and allegations of both parties touching the matter of complaint, and adjudging it to be true, bad for want of averment that latter examination was on oath, 46

— for refusing to give sureties to keep the peace may be made to the house of correction, 52

— Invalidity of commitment, setting forth order of Quarter Sessions, confirming conviction under 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1, and directing gaoler to detain parties at the expiration of the period of imprisonment awarded for their offence, until they shall find sureties and enter into recognizances that they shall not offend again for the space of one year from the conviction, instead of that they shall not so offend again. Where certiorari taken away from defendant, but not from prosecutor, Court will assume that warrant of commitment contains a true recital of conviction, unless it is brought before Court by prosecutor, though the recital shews conviction to be bad, 65

— Invalidity of commitment, under 11 Geo. 2. c. 19. s. 4, for fraudulent removal of goods, for omitting to state complaint, in writing, by landlord, his bailiff, agent, or servant, though order of adjudication states defendant to have been duly charged, in writing, before the Magistrate, 141

— Necessity, where act of parliament gives Magistrates a power of commitment, without a previous conviction, that it should appear on face of warrant of commitment that charge was heard and evidence taken in presence of prisoner. Court will not intend a good conviction to support a bad commitment, 145

Commitment—Where validity of previous document, whereon prisoner was in fact committed, not inquired into, if good commitment shewn on return to habeas corpus, 147

— What must be stated in commitment, under 4 Geo. 4. c. 34. s. 2, 161

Conspiracy—As to sufficiency of indictment charging that defendants did unlawfully combine, conspire, confederate, and agree together, to cheat and defraud certain liege subjects of our Lady the Queen, being tradesmen (not naming them), of divers large quantities of their goods and chattels; and as to looking to overt acts, in aid of charging part of indictment. Count, charging such conspiracy, and then setting out several overt acts, alleged to have been done in pursuance of the conspiracy, namely, the purchase, by one of the defendants, of goods of several tradesmen (naming them) upon credit, and of other tradesmen, whose names were unknown, with direction, that the goods should be delivered at the house of that defendant; that no payment was ever made for them; the pretence that certain debts were due from that defendant to the others (setting out the debts); that actions, on account of these fictitious debts, were commenced against such defendant by the others, and judgments signed for want of plea, and writs of f. fa. sued out upon the judgments, by virtue of which, the goods and chattels so fraudulently obtained were taken in execution; concluding with an averment, that so the defendants did cheat and defraud the tradesmen who supplied the goods, &c., good on motion in arrest of judgment, &c., 118 — Indictment charging defendants with conspiring to cause goods which had been imported, &c., and in respect of which certain duties of Customs were payable to the Queen, to be carried away from port without payment of duties, with intent to defraud the Queen in her revenue of Customs; and containing counts charging defendants generally with conspiring to defraud the Queen of duties by false and fraudulent representations of the value and nature of the goods, sufficiently certain, without shewing what the goods were, or what duties were payable on them. Distinction as to the admissibility of evidence of entries made by co-conspirator, in pursuance of conspiracy and made after the conspiracy has been completed, s. g. the entries in day-book of a custom-house agent, an alleged co-conspirator, relative to transactions, amount of duties actually paid on passing goods through the Custom House, and the butt or counterfoil of his cheque-book, 131

Conviction—No intendment of good conviction to support bad commitment, 145

— See Game.

Coroner—Inquisition bad, where coroner for city of Rochester held inquisition on a body, which met with death in the River Medway, had been brought to spot above high-water mark, sworn to be within the county of Kent, and was there viewed by jury of city of Rochester, 150

Costs—Meaning of "hearing" under 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76, so as to entitle alleged father of bastard to costs, 7, 111

— Order of confirmation bad, and order as to costs, being ancillary thereto, bad also, under 8 & 9 Will. 3. c. 30. s. 3, where notice of appeal against order of removal was sent, and appeal was afterwards countermanded, and being entered by respondents, Sessions confirmed order of removal, and also directed payment by appellants of respondents' "costs and charges attending the sessions to support their said order," 151

— Power of Judge to certify for, on indictment for non-repair of county bridge, 158

Criminal Information—Refusal of rule for words spoken of a Magistrate, charging him with oppression in his office; they not being spoken at the time he was acting in his office, and not therefore amounting to an immediate obstruction of the administration of justice, 105

— When application for, must be made, 162

Deer Stealing. See Commitment.

Depositions—Under section 3. of stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 114, persons committed to prison for re-examination, on charges of felony, not entitled to demand copies of depositions. Right to copies does not attach until prisoner is held to bail, or committed to prison for trial. Duty of Magistrate to complete and sign depositions as soon as they are taken, 67

Disorderly House—Action, founded on 25 Geo. 2. c. 36, by one of two inhabitants who had given information, &c. to the parish constable of A. R. keeping a disorderly house, in consequence of which A. R. was indicted and pleaded guilty to the charge, properly brought against two defendants, who, though not overseers at the time of the trial of A. R., were overseers at the time A. R. was brought up for judgment. Sufficient to shew demand on, and refusal by defendants to pay plaintiff reward of 10*l*. to entitle him to maintain action against them for the double penalty, although there were also churchwardens, upon whom no demand had been made. Quære, whether churchwardens are overseers within the stat. 25 Geo. 2. c. 36, 122

Evidence—Upon indictment against inhabitants of township, charging them with repair of bridge, by prescriptive liability, declaration of inhabitant of township admissible against township, on ground that he is party to record, although he be not a rated inhabitant, 9

— Where workman hired for a year to work at a particular trade, under a written agreement, which says nothing as to any periods of absence allowed to the workman, parol evidence may be given that it is the custom of the particular trade for the workmen employed in it to take certain holidays, and to absent themselves on such occasions from their work without the permission of their masters, 41

— See Appeal. Conspiracy.

Examination—Setting forth prior order of removal to appellant township, which had been suspended, but not shewing that former order had been served, or pauper removed; ground of objection, that examination was bad on the face of it, for not shewing these facts. Decision by the Sessions that this objection was valid, a decision on the merits of the settlement, 38

Examination—Sufficiency of, in describing nature of binding pauper apprentice, 49

— Sufficiency of examination of pauper, stating "When I was about fifteen years of age, I went to work at Messrs. C. & D.'s factory, called Ringley Mills, in O, in the township of P. It was about the latter end of the year 1828. There was a custom in the mill, requiring the workpeople to give a fortnight's notice before leaving their employment. I remained in the employment more than two years, during the whole of which time I resided in O, in the said township of P, and slept there: I worked under the custom as to giving notice. The works consisted of two mills, adjoining each other. When I wanted to leave the first mill (in which I had been working about a year) to go to the other mill, I was compelled to serve [sic] a fortnight's notice before leaving. The second mill was under a similar custom; and after I had worked in it better than a year, I had a dispute with the overlooker, and wanted to leave at once, but was not allowed. The overlooker afterwards gave me a fortnight's notice, at the end of which time I left the factory," &c.,—with reference to objections made at Sessions, that examination was insufficient, as no general or yearly hiring was stated, or could be implied from it; that it did not state that the party was hired at all, nor with whom he purported to make a contract, nor that he made any contract at all; and that there was no allegation in examination that the paupers were settled in appellant township: the grounds of appeal being, first, that examination does not shew any settlement in township of P; secondly, that it does not contain any legal evidence of settlement of person removed; thirdly, that it is bad upon the face of it, and does not warrant any order of removal; fourthly, that it does not state sufficient facts to shew that the pauper gained a settlement by hiring and service in P; fifthly, that there was no such hiring and service at Messrs. C. & D.'s factory, or residence in the township of P, as in examination alleged; sixthly, that pauper was not legally settled in township of P, 61

— Insufficient evidence of chargeability, where pauper in her examination stated, "I and my children are inhabitants of the parish of A, and are chargeable to the said parish of A;" and the relieving officer stated, "I am one of the relieving officers of the Barnstaple Union, and administer the relief ordered to the paupers of the said parish of A. The said A. F. (the pauper) and her four children (naming them) are now chargeable to the said parish of A," 74 — Course to be taken by Sessions where objections as to particularity doubtful, 78

— Insufficiency of, to shew settlement by renting tenement, by reason of omitting to shew rent paid for a whole year, or by tenant, or the whole rent paid, 88

NEW SERIES, XIII.—MAG. CAS.

Examination—Heading of examination sufficient on which to make order to remove wife (without her husband) and four children to wife's maiden settlement, where heading was:—The examination of J. M. of &c., taken upon oath at &c., before us, &c., touching the place of his lawful settlement; the examination then shewing an inquiry as to place of settlement of J. M. and that no settlement of his could be discovered; and then disclosing maiden settlement of L. M. his wife; examinations stating diligent inquiry made, in all likely places, to ascertain settlement of the father and mother of J. M. and his settlement, or the place of his birth, but that settlement of neither could be ascertained; and then shewing the maiden settlement of wife, to which place order removed herself and children, not defective in not excluding, as the place of birth of J. M. Scotland, or Ireland, or either of the isles of Man, Jersey, and Guernsey, though, if his birth had taken place in either of those countries or islands, he would have been liable to have been passed there with his wife and such children as had not gained a settlement in England, under 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 40. s. 2, 107

— Copies of all examinations sent, under 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. s. 79, must shew on the face of them that they were taken before two Magistrates; and it is not sufficient that the Magistrates who take the first examination (which sets out their character as such) sign their names to the subsequent examinations, 128

— See Appeal. Settlement. Tenement.

Friendly Society—Society established for the purpose of lending the money raised by the contributions of its members to the members themselves, not a friendly society within 10 Geo. 4. c. 56. and 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 40, 70

Game—Semble, conviction under statute 9 Geo. 4. c. 69. s. 1. ought to state that defendant entered or was in the close for the purpose of taking game there, and it is not sufficient to follow the words of the statute, 16

— Information under section 9. of 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 65, "Staffordshire, to wit.—Be it remembered, that on &c., at &c., Sir O. Count, stating that defendants, together with other evil-disposed persons, &c., unlawfully did endeavour to excite Her Majesty's subjects to disaffection, &c., no place being stated, bad in arrest of judgment, there being no words of reference to the venue in the margin, and defect not cured by the statute, 33

By this Act,

After reciting that by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 40, it was enacted, that it should be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings for the time being, and they were thereby authorized and empowered, by and with the consent and approbation in writing of the Lord High Treasurer, or of the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Treasurer of the United Kingdom, or any three or more of them, notwithstanding any provisions, restrictions, or clauses contained in any Act or Acts of Parliament relating to Her Majesty's Land Revenue, from time to time to borrow and take up at any rate of interest not exceeding 5l. per cent. per annum, and on such terms and conditions as they should think proper, such sum or sums of money as the said Commissioners, with such consent and approbation as aforesaid, should judge necessary for the purpose of carrying into effect and completing the several improvements and new streets authorized and directed to be made by them by the several Acts therein recited or referred to, on mortgage of all or any part or parts of the houses, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments of or belonging to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, within the county of Middlesex and city of London, or either of them, (other than royal palaces and parks,) and for securing the repayment of the sum or sums so to be borrowed, or any part or parts thereof, with interest for the same, with such consent and approbation as aforesaid, to grant, demise, or mortgage all or any part or parts of the same houses, buildings, lands, tenements, and hereditaments respectively unto any person or persons, body or bodies corporate, who should lend and advance such sum or sums of money respectively, his, her, or their heirs, executors, or administrators, successors or assigns, or to whom he or they or any such body should appoint, for any term of years, so that every such grant, mortgage, or security were made with a proviso or condition to cease and be void when such sum or sums of money thereby to be secured, and the interest thereof, should be fully paid and satisfied: And that doubts are entertained whether the said recited Act extends to empower the Governor and Company of the Bank of England and certain other public companies and corporations to advance and lend monies to the said Commissioners on the security of the said land revenues of the Crown, the said Governor and Company of the Bank of England and other public companies and corporations not being expressly named and empowered in and by the said recited Act; and it would facilitate the raising of such monies if such doubts were removed:—

i. That it shall be lawful for the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and for any person whomsoever, and any bodies politic or corporate or companies whatsoever, to advance and lend from time to time to the Commissioners for the time being of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings, any sum or sums of money, or any part or parts of the capital or other monies or funds of or belonging to such governor or company, person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, or companies respectively, which the said Commissioners, by and with the consent and approbation in writing of the Lord High Treasurer or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Treasurer, of the United Kingdom, or any three or more of them, shall from time to time judge necessary, for the purpose of carrying into effect and completing the several improvements and new streets authorized and directed to be made by them by the said several Acts in the said recited Act of 4 & 5 Vict. c. 40, recited or referred to, on mortgage of all or any part or parts of the houses, buildings, land, tenements, and hereditaments of or belonging to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, within the county of Middlesex and city of London, or either of them, (other than royal palaces and parks), so as that all such loans be made with the approbation of the said Lord High Treasurer, or Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Treasurer, or any three or more of them, to be signified by his or their warrant or warrants for that purpose, notwithstanding anything contained to the contrary in an Act, 5 & 6 Will. & M. c. 20, intituled, 'An Act for granting to their Majesties several Rates and Duties upon Tonnage of Ships and Vessels, and upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors, for securing certain Recompences and Advantages in the said Act mentioned to such Persons as shall voluntarily advance the Sum of One million five hundred thousand Pounds towards carrying on the War against France,' or in any other Act or Acts: Provided also, that the sum to be advanced by the Bank of England under the provisions of this Act shall not exceed in the whole the sum of 250,000*l*.

ii. That the Commissioners for the time being of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings shall be and they are hereby constituted a corporation for the purposes of this Act, as well as for the purposes of the said recited Act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 40, and may have such seal as in the said recited Act is mentioned; and that all and singular the powers, provisions, exemptions from stamp duties, and enactments in the said recited Act contained with respect to monies borrowed and mortgages made under the authority of the said recited Act, and the application of such monies, shall, so far as the same are applicable, extend to all monies to be borrowed and mortgages to be made under the authority of this Act; and that all sum and sums of money which by the said recited Act are made applicable to the repayment of monies borrowed on the credit of the land revenues of the Crown, under the powers and provisions of the said recited Act, and the interest thereof, shall equally be applicable and be applied in repayment of any sum or sums of money which may be borrowed on the credit of the land revenues of the Crown under the powers and provisions of this Act, and the interest thereof.

iii. Provided and enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners for the time being of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings in all respects to make and grant such leases and agreements for leases, and to accept a surrender of any lease or leases granted or to be granted of any hereditaments comprised in any mortgage made or to be made in pursuance of the said recited Act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 40, or of this Act, and on any such surrender to grant any other lease or separate leases of the hereditaments so be surrendered, for any term which they are or may be authorized to grant, in all respects whatsoever as they could have done if such mortgage or mortgages had not been made, and the said last-mentioned Act and this Act had not passed, so as the rent to be reserved in respect of any hereditaments to be comprised in any new lease to be made in pursuance of any surrendered lease be not less in amount than the rent which was reserved by the surrendered lease, or when more than one lease shall be granted of any hereditaments comprised in a lease which shall have been surrendered so as the aggregate amount of rents to be reserved by the separate leases shall not be less in amount than the rent reserved by the lease so surrendered.

iv. That the person or persons, bodies or body, to whom any such mortgage as aforesaid has been or shall be granted shall (in respect of such leases so to be granted, and during the continuance of such mortgage securities,) have such and the same powers of distress, entry, or otherwise, for the recovery of the rents by any such leases so to be granted, reserved, and shall have the full benefit of the covenants in such leases to be contained, and on the part of the lessees to be performed, as they would have had if they had been parties to such leases, and the rents and rights of distress and entry had been reserved to them, and the covenants entered into with them in all respects whatsoever, but not so as to give any subsequent mortgagee any right or priority over the prior mortgagee.

v. That the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings shall once in every year, until the several improvements and new streets hereinbefore referred to are completed, report to the Commons House of Parliament the progress made by the said Commissioners in the execution of such improvements and new streets respectively, the monies raised and received by them for the purposes thereof, and the expenditure of the same, and the balance, if any, remaining unexpended at the date of each report, and also the number and extent of houses and other property still remaining to be purchased in each line of improvement, and the estimated cost thereof, and the funds applicable to the purchase of the same.

vi. That this Act or any part thereof may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in the present session of Parliament.

and it was thereby also enacted, that the sole liberty of representing or performing, or causing or permitting to be represented or performed, in any part of the British dominions, any dramatic piece or musical composition, should endure and be the property of the author thereof and his assigns for the term in the said Copyright Amendment Act provided for the duration of the copyright in books, and that the provisions therein enacted in respect of the property of such copyright should apply to the liberty of representing or performing any dramatic piece or musical composition; and that under or by virtue of the four several Acts next hereinafter mentioned, (that is to say,) 8 Geo. 2. c. 13, 7 Geo. 3. c. 38, 17 Geo. 3. c. 57, 6 & 7 Will. 4. c. 59, (and which said four several Acts are hereinafter, for the sake of perspicuity, designated as the Engraving Copyright Acts;) every person who invents or designs, engraves, etches, or works in mezzotinto, or chiaro-oscuro, or from his own work, design, or invention, causes or procures to be designed, engraved, etched, or worked in mezzotinto or chiaro-oscuro any historical print or prints or any print or prints of any portrait, conversation, landscape, or architecture, map, chart, or plan, or any other print or prints whatsoever, and every person who engraves, etches, or works in mezzotinto or chiaro-oscuro, or causes to be engraved, etched, or worked, any print taken from any picture, drawing, model, or sculpture, either ancient or modern, notwithstanding such print shall not have been graven or drawn from the original design of such graver, etcher, or draftsman, is entitled to the copyright of such print for the term of twenty-eight years from the first publishing thereof; and by the said several Engraving Copyright Acts it is provided, that the name of the proprietor shall be truly engraved on each plate, and printed on every such print, and remedies are provided for the infringement of such copyright: and that under and by virtue of 38 Geo. 3. c. 71, and 54 Geo. 3. c. 56, (and which said Acts are, for the sake of perspicuity, hereinafter designated as the Sculpture Copyright Acts,) every person who makes or causes to be made any new and original sculpture, or model or copy or cast of the human figure, any bust or part of the human figure clothed in drapery or otherwise, any animal or part of any animal combined with the human figure or otherwise, any subject, being matter of invention in sculpture, any alto or basso relievo, representing any of the matters aforesaid, or any cast from nature of the human figure or part thereof, or of any animal or part thereof, or of any such subject representing any of the matters aforesaid, whether separate or combined, is entitled to the copyright in such new and original sculpture, model, copy, and cast, for fourteen years from first putting forth and publishing the same, and for an additional period of fourteen years in case the original maker is living at the end of the first period; and by the said Acts it is provided, that the name of the proprietor, with the date of the publication thereof, is to be put on all such sculptures, models, copies, and casts, and remedies are provided for the infringement of such copyright: And that the powers vested in Her Majesty by the said International Copyright Act are insufficient to enable Her Majesty to confer upon authors of books first published in foreign countries copyright of the like duration, and with the like remedies for the infringement thereof, which are conferred and provided by the said Copyright Amendment Act with respect to authors of books first published in the British dominions; and the said International Copyright Act does not empower Her Majesty to confer any exclusive right of representing or performing dramatic pieces or musical compositions first published in foreign countries upon the authors thereof, nor to extend the privilege of copyright to prints and sculpture first published abroad; and it is expedient to vest increased powers in Her Majesty in this respect, and for that purpose to repeal the said International Copyright Act, and to give such other powers to Her Majesty, and to make such further provisions, as are hereinafter contained:—

It is Enacted,

- I. That the said recited Act herein designated as the International Copyright Act shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

to be named in such order, the authors, inventors, designers, engravers, and makers thereof respectively, their respective executors, administrators, and assigns, shall have the privilege of copyright therein during such period or respective periods as shall be defined in such order, not exceeding, however, as to any of the above-mentioned works, the term of copyright which authors, inventors, designers, engravers, and makers of the like works respectively first published in the United Kingdom may be then entitled to under the hereinbefore recited Acts respectively, or under any Acts which may hereafter be passed in that behalf.

III. That in case any such order shall apply to books, all and singular the enactments of the said Copyright Amendment Act, and of any other Act for the time being in force with relation to the copyright in books first published in this country, shall, from and after the time so to be specified in that behalf in such order, and subject to such limitation as to the duration of the copyright as shall be therein contained, apply to and be in force in respect of the books to which such order shall extend, and which shall have been registered as hereinafter is provided, in such and the same manner as if such books were first published in the United Kingdom, save and except such of the said enactments, or such parts thereof, as shall be excepted in such order, and save and except such of the said enactments as relate to the delivery of copies of books at the British Museum, and to or for the use of the other libraries mentioned in the said Copyright Amendment Act.

IV. That in case any such order shall apply to prints, articles of sculpture, or to any such other works of art as aforesaid, all and singular the enactments of the said Engraving Copyright Acts and the said Sculpture Copyright Acts, or of any other Act for the time being in force with relation to the copyright in prints or articles of sculpture first published in this country, and of any Act for the time being in force with relation to the copyright in any similar works of art first published in this country, shall, from and after the time so to be specified in that behalf in such order, and subject to such limitation as to the duration of the copyright as shall be therein contained respectively, apply to and be in force in respect of the prints, articles of sculpture, and other works of art to which such order shall extend, and which shall have been registered as hereinafter is provided, in such and the same manner as if such articles and other works of art were first published in the United Kingdom, save and except such of the said enactments or such parts thereof as shall be excepted in such order.

V. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any order of Her Majesty in Council, to direct that the authors of dramatic pieces and musical compositions which shall after a future time, to be specified in such order, be first publicly represented or performed in any foreign country to be named in such order, shall have the sole liberty of representing or performing in any part of the British dominions such dramatic pieces or musical compositions during such period as shall be defined in such order, not exceeding the period during which authors of dramatic pieces and musical compositions first publicly represented or performed in the United Kingdom may for the time be entitled by law to the sole liberty of representing and performing the same; and from and after the time so specified in any such last-mentioned order the enactments of the said Dramatic Literary Property Act and of the said Copyright Amendment Act, and of any other Act for the time being in force with relation to the liberty of publicly representing and performing dramatic pieces or musical compositions, shall, subject to such limitation as to the duration of the right conferred by any such order as shall be therein contained, apply to and be in force in respect of the dramatic pieces and musical compositions to which such order shall extend, and which shall have been registered as hereinafter is provided, in such and the same manner as if such dramatic pieces and musical compositions had been first publicly represented and performed in the British dominions, save and except such of the said enactments or such parts thereof as shall be excepted in such order.

VI. Provided and enacted, That no author of any book, dramatic piece or musical composition, or his executors, administrators, or assigns, and no inventor, designer or engraver of any print, or maker of any article of sculpture, or other work of art, his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall be entitled to the benefit of this Act, or of any Order in Council to be issued in pursuance thereof, unless, within a time or times to be in that behalf prescribed in each such Order in Council, such book, dramatic piece, musical composition, print, article of sculpture, or other work of art, shall have been so registered, and such copy thereof shall have been so delivered as hereinafter is mentioned; (that is to say), as regards such book, and also such dramatic piece or musical composition (in the event of the same having been printed), the title to the copy thereof, the name and place of abode of the author or composer thereof, the name and place of abode of the proprietor of the copyright thereof, the time and place of the first publication, representation, or performance thereof, as the case may be, in the foreign country named in the Order in Council under which the benefits of this Act shall be claimed, shall be entered in the register book of the Company of Stationers in London, and one printed copy of the whole of such book, and of such dramatic piece or musical composition, in the event of the same having been printed, and of every volume thereof, upon the best paper upon which the largest number or impression of the book, dramatic piece, or musical composition shall have been printed for sale, together with all maps and prints relating thereto, shall be delivered to the officer of the Company of Stationers at the Hall of the said company; and as regards dramatic pieces and musical compositions in manuscript, the title to the same, the name and place of abode of the author or composer thereof, the name and place of abode of the proprietor of the right of representing or performing the same, and the time and place of the first representation or performance thereof in the country named in the Order in Council under which the benefit of the Act shall be claimed, shall be entered in the said Register Book of the said Company of Stationers in London; and as regards prints, the title thereof, the name and place of abode of the inventor, designer, or engraver thereof, the name of the proprietor of the copyright therein, and the time and place of the first publication thereof in the foreign country named in the Order in Council under which the benefits of the Act shall be claimed, shall be entered in the said register book of the said Company of Stationers in London, and a copy of such print, upon the best paper upon which the largest number or impressions of the print shall have been printed for sale, shall be delivered to the officer of the Company of Stationers at the Hall of the said company; and as regards any such article of sculpture, or any such other work of art as aforesaid, a descriptive title thereof, the name and place of abode of the maker thereof, the name of the proprietor of the copyright therein, and the time and place of its first publication in the foreign country named in the Order in Council under which the benefit of this Act shall be claimed, shall be entered in the said register book of the said Company of Stationers in London; and the officer of the said Company of Stationers receiving such copies so to be delivered as aforesaid shall give a receipt in writing for the same, and such delivery shall to all intents and purposes be a sufficient delivery under the provisions of this Act.

VII. Provided and enacted, That if a book be published anonymously it shall be sufficient to insert in the entry thereof in such register book the name and place of abode of the first publisher thereof, instead of the name and place of abode of the author thereof, together with a declaration that such entry is made either on behalf of the author or on behalf of such first publisher, as the case may require.

VIII. That the several enactments in the said Copyright Amendment Act contained with relation to keeping the said register book, and the inspection thereof, the searches therein, and the delivery of certified and stamped copies thereof, the reception of such copies in evidence, the making of false entries in the said book, and the production in evidence of papers falsely purporting to be copies of entries in the said book, the applications to the Courts and Judges by persons aggrieved by entries in the said book, and the expunging and varying such entries, shall apply to the books, dramatic pieces, and musical compositions, prints, articles of sculpture, and other works of art, to which any Order in Council issued in pursuance of this Act shall extend, and to the entries and assignments of copyright and proprietorship therein, in such and the same manner as if such enactments were here expressly enacted in relation thereto, save and except that the forms of entry prescribed by the said Copyright Amendment Act may be varied to meet the circumstances of the case, and that the sum to be demanded by the officer of the said Company of Stationers for making any entry required by this Act shall be 1s. only.

IX. That every entry made in pursuance of this Act of a first publication shall be prima facie proof of a rightful first publication; but if there be a wrongful first publication, and any party have availed himself thereof to obtain an entry of a spurious work, no order for expunging or varying such entry shall be made unless it be proved to the satisfaction of the Court or of the Judge taking cognizance of the application for expunging or varying such entry, first, with respect to a wrongful publication in a country to which the author or first publisher does not belong, and in regard to which there does not subsist with this country any treaty of international copyright, that the party making the application was the author or first publisher, as the case requires; second, with respect to a wrongful first publication either in the country where a rightful first publication has taken place, or in regard to which there subsists with this country a treaty of international copyright, that a court of competent jurisdiction in any such country where such wrongful first publication has taken place has given judgment in favour of the right of the party claiming to be the author or first publisher.

XI. That the said officer of the said Company of Stationers shall receive at the Hall of the said company every book, volume, or print so to be delivered as aforesaid, and within one calendar month after receiving such book, volume, or print shall deposit the same in the library of the British Museum.

XII. Provided and enacted, That it shall not be requisite to deliver to the said officer of the said Stationers Company any printed copy of the second or of any subsequent edition of any book or books so delivered as aforesaid, unless the same shall contain additions or alterations.

XIII. That the respective terms to be specified by such Orders in Council respectively for the continuance of the privilege to be granted in respect of works to be first published in foreign countries may be different for works first published in different foreign countries and for different classes of such works; and that the times to be prescribed for the entries to be made in the register book of the Stationers Company, and for the deliveries of the books and other articles to the said officer of the Stationers Company, as hereinbefore is mentioned, may be different for different foreign countries and for different classes of books or other articles.

That after the passing of this Act every person, on beginning to occupy a factory, shall within one month send, addressed "To the Office of the Factory Inspectors, London," a written notice, containing the name of the factory, the place, township, parish, and county where it is situated, the post office to which he desires his letters to be addressed, the nature of the work, the nature and amount of the moving power, and the name of the firm under which the business of the factory is to be carried on.

VIII. That after the passing of this Act any inspector shall have power to appoint a sufficient number of persons practising surgery or medicine to be certifying surgeons, for the purpose of examining persons who shall be brought before them to obtain the surgical certificates of age required by the Factory Act and by this Act, and of giving the said certificates, and shall from time to time make regulations for their guidance, and shall in every such appointment specify the factories or district for which each surgeon is appointed, and may from time to time annul any such appointment, and in like manner make another or others; but every appointment of a certifying surgeon, and every order annulling such appointment, may be revoked by the Secretary of State, on appeal made to him for either purpose; and the inspector of the district shall make known the name of the certifying surgeons so from time to time appointed or discontinued to the occupiers of the factories in that district in such manner as to him shall seem fit; but no surgeon, being the occupier of a factory, or having a beneficial interest in any factory, shall be a certifying surgeon.

IX. That the certificates of age required by the Factory Act or by this Act, herein called surgical certificates, shall be given according to the form and directions contained in the Schedule (A.) annexed to this Act; and the certificates given by any such certifying surgeon shall be as valid as if countersigned by an inspector, Justice of the Peace, or burgh magistrate; and the name of every person for whom a certificate of age is required by the Factory Act or by this Act, and the date of the first day of employment or re-employment of such person, shall be registered in the form and according to the directions given in the Schedule (B.) annexed to this Act, before it shall be lawful to employ such person in a factory: Provided always, that no surgical certificate shall be required for any young person above the age of sixteen years.

X. That no such surgical certificate given by any person who is not an appointed certifying surgeon shall be of any force, unless it is given by a person duly authorized by an University or College, or other public body having authority in that behalf, to practise surgery or medicine, and countersigned, according to the form and directions given in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, by some Justice of the Peace, not being the occupier of a factory, and not being the father, son, or brother of the occupier of a factory; and no person shall countersign any such surgical certificate in the absence of the person named therein, or without proof that the person brought before him is the same to whom the certificate was granted.

xI. That no person shall grant any surgical certificate required by the Factory Act or by this Act, except upon personal inspection of the person named therein; and no certifying surgeon shall examine any person for the purposes of this Act, or sign or issue any such surgical certificate, elsewhere than at the factory where such person is to be employed, unless for special cause, to be allowed by an inspector; and if a certifying surgeon shall refuse to grant a certificate of age for any person presented to him for such examination, he shall give, when required, instead of such certificate, a paper specifying under his hand the reasons for such refusal, in the form and directions given in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed.

xII. That if the occupier of a factory shall agree in writing with the certifying surgeon of a district for the payment to be made by the occupier of the factory to the certifying surgeon for the examination of persons for whom surgical certificates are required by the Factory Act or by this Act, and if the terms of such agreement shall be in conformity with such regulations for the guidance of the surgeons as shall be made by the inspector of the district, and shall be countersigned by the inspector in token of such conformity, all penalties which may be incurred by any party for breach of such agreement may be recovered as other penalties under this Act may be recovered, and shall be applied as other penalties under this Act are directed to be applied, and no such agreement shall be liable to any stamp duty.

xIII. That an inspector shall fix the amount of fees to be paid by the occupier of a factory, and the times when such fees shall be paid to the certifying surgeon, and also the times when such certifying surgeon shall visit a factory, provided he shall be required to fix such fees and visits by the occupier of a factory; and the fees so to be fixed by the inspector shall not in any case where the surgeon shall examine more than one person exceed 1s. for each person who shall be presented to him at the factory by the mill owner or his agent to be examined, together with 6d. for every half mile that the distance of the factory from the residence of such surgeon shall exceed one mile; and such fees, including mileage, shall not be less than 1s. and shall in no case exceed 5s. for any one visit, except when upon such visit the certifying surgeon shall examine for the said certificates of age more than ten persons who may be brought before him as aforesaid, in which case he shall receive 6d. for each person that he may so examine, instead of all other fees; and in any case where a factory is situated within the distance of one mile from the residence of a certifying surgeon the fee for such factory shall not exceed 2s. 6d. for each visit, except when at any one visit he shall examine for the said certificates of age more than five persons who may be brought before him as aforesaid, in which case he shall receive 6d. for each person that he may so examine, instead of all other fees; and no certifying surgeon shall receive more than 6d. for any certificate which he may be allowed by an inspector, as hereinbefore provided, to sign or issue otherwise than at the factory where the person is to be employed; and the occupier of any factory shall pay such fees to the certifying surgeon at the time of signing such certificates, or at any other time when he may be directed by the inspector to do so; and the occupier of such factory may deduct the fee or any part thereof, not exceeding in any one case the sum of 3d., from the wages of the person for whom the certificate may have been granted; but in any case where such agreement as aforesaid has been executed between an occupier of a factory and the certifying surgeon the amount named in such agreement shall be instead of the fees fixed by any inspector in virtue of this Act: Provided always, that no certifying surgeon shall be required to visit any factory situated within three miles of his residence oftener than once in each week, or to visit any factory situated at a greater distance than three miles oftener than once in every fortnight, unless with the consent of the occupier of the factory.

xIV. That no person who shall be employed in a factory at the time when this Act shall come into force under a surgical certificate granted under the Factory Act shall be required to have a new surgical certificate, in the form and manner provided by this Act, so long as he shall continue in the same factory; but every inspector and sub-inspector may annul any surgical certificate granted under this Act, and any surgical certificate granted before the passing of this Act, by writing across the surgical certificate the word "Annulled," with his name, and the date of annulling such certificate; provided that in either case he shall have reason to believe the real age of the person mentioned therein to be less than that mentioned in the certificate, or provided the certifying surgeon of the district shall, upon reference made to him, deem such person to be then of deficient health or strength, or by disease or bodily infirmity incapacitated for labour, or liable to be injured by continued employment; and no certificate so annulled shall be valid in respect of the person named therein for the purposes of this Act from the day when the certificate shall have been so annulled; and the production of the certificate shall be evidence that the certificate was annulled on the day so stated.

xV. That in case any person shall be desirous of proving the real age of any person for whom a certifying surgeon shall have refused to grant a certificate of age for the purposes of this Act, or whose surgical certificate any inspector or sub-inspector shall have annulled, the inspector or sub-inspector shall, on demand, give to such person a requisition under his hand, in a form to be approved of by the inspectors and by the registrar general, for the production of a duly certified copy of the entry of the birth or baptism of such person; provided the party demanding the same shall declare the names of such person and of his parents, with the place where and the year in which he was born or baptized, which particulars shall be set forth in the requisition; and every party to whom such requisition shall have been given shall be entitled, upon payment of 1s., to receive, on personal application, or on application in writing, in such form and under such regulations as shall be approved of by the inspectors and registrar general, from any minister, registrar, or other person having the care of any register of births or baptisms in which the birth or baptism of such person is entered, a duly certified copy of the entry in such register, which shall be indorsed on the aforesaid requisition, and shall be signed by the minister, registrar, or other person having charge of such register; and such payment of 1s. shall be instead of all other fees or payments to which such minister, registrar, or other person shall be entitled; and if the said certified copy proving the age of the person named therein to be such as to entitle him to have the surgical certificate required shall be produced to the certifying surgeon of the district, he shall examine the same, and if it shall appear to him that the said certified copy has not been altered or falsified in any manner, the certifying surgeon shall thereupon, without further fee or reward, give a surgical certificate in the form provided for that case in Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, and shall write the word "examined" upon the certified copy of the entry of the birth or baptism which he shall have received, with his signature, and the date of such signature, and shall send such certified copy by the post to the sub-inspector of the district, who shall send a receipt for the same by post to the said surgeon, and shall keep such certified copy of the entry of the birth or baptism, for future reference, if necessary; and if any inspector of factories shall require a certified copy of the entry of the birth of any person employed in any factory from the office of the registrar general, he, or any person deputed by him, shall, on producing a requisition in the form hereinbefore provided, be entitled to examine the indexes to the registers in the general register office, and to receive such certified copy indorsed on the requisition without the payment of any fee; but no certified copy of the entry of any birth or baptism issued in consequence of any such requisition hereinbefore provided shall be admissible in evidence in any court or for any purpose, save for the purposes of this Act: Provided always, that in those cases in which a surgical certificate shall have been refused or annulled in consequence of deficient health or strength, or by reason of disease or bodily infirmity, the inspector or sub-inspector shall not sign the requisition hereinbefore mentioned, and such person shall not be employed on proof of real age only.

xvi. That before employing any person requiring a surgical certificate under the Factory Act as amended by this Act the occupier of the factory shall obtain the surgical certificate, save as hereinafter excepted, and shall keep, and be bound to produce every such certificate, when required, to the inspector or sub-inspector; and no surgical certificate shall be valid except for employment at the factory for which it was originally granted, or, if granted by a certifying surgeon, at any other factory in the occupation of the same person who is occupier of the factory for which the certificate was originally granted, provided such other factory be in the district of the certifying surgeon who granted the certificate, and the certificate be produced in the factory where the person named in the certificate is at work; and the certifying surgeon, as often as he shall visit a factory for the purpose of granting certificates, shall enter in the register of workers the date of his visit, and the other particulars set forth in the form and according to the directions given in Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed.

xvii. Provided and enacted, That no occupier of any factory shall be liable to any penalty for employing any person in any manner not contrary to the other provisions of the Factory Act as amended by this Act, without a surgical certificate, for any time not exceeding seven working days, or, when the certifying surgeon shall reside more than three miles from the factory, for any time not exceeding thirteen working days, provided all surgical certificates for that factory be granted only by the certifying surgeon appointed for that factory; but this enactment shall not be construed to dispense with the certificate of school attendance, or to authorize the employment of any person in respect of whom the certifying surgeon shall have refused to grant such surgical certificate.

xviii. That after the passing of this Act it shall not be necessary to limewash the walls of any mill, factory, or building, or to whitewash the ceilings of any rooms therein, otherwise than is hereinafter provided; and that all the inside walls, ceilings, or tops of rooms, whether plastered or not, and all the passages and staircases of every factory, which shall not have been painted with oil once at least within seven years, shall be limewashed once at least within every successive period of fourteen months, to date from the period when last whitewashed; and all the inside walls and ceilings or tops of rooms in which children or young persons are employed, and which are painted with oil, shall be washed with hot water and soap once at least within every successive period of fourteen months, as aforesaid.

xix. That after the expiration of six months from the date of this Act coming into operation no child or young person shall be employed in any part of a factory in which the wet-spinning of flax, hemp, jute, or tow is carried on, unless sufficient means shall be employed and continued for protecting the workers from being wetted, and where hot water is used, for preventing the escape of steam into the room occupied by the workers.

xx. That no child or young person shall be allowed to clean any part of the mill-gearing in a factory while the same is in motion for the purpose of propelling any part of the manufacturing machinery; and no child or young person shall be allowed to work between the fixed and traversing part of any self-acting machine while the latter is in motion by the action of the steam-engine, water-wheel, or other mechanical power.

xxi. That every fly-wheel directly connected with the steam-engine or water-wheel or other mechanical power, whether in the engine-house or not, and every part of a steam-engine and water-wheel, and every hoist or teagle, near to which children or young persons are liable to pass or be employed, and all parts of the mill-gearing in a factory, shall be securely fenced; and every wheel-race not otherwise secured shall be fenced close to the edge of the wheel-race; and the said protection to each part shall not be removed while the parts required to be fenced are in motion by the action of the steam-engine, water-wheel, or other mechanical power for any manufacturing process.

xxii. That if any accident shall occur in a factory which shall cause any bodily injury to any person employed therein which shall have been of such a nature as to prevent the person so injured from returning to his work in the factory before nine of the clock of the following morning, the occupier of the factory, or in his absence his principal agent, shall within twenty-four hours of such absence send a notice thereof in writing to the surgeon appointed to grant certificates of age for the district in which the factory is situated, in which notice the place of residence of the person injured, or the place to which he may have been removed, shall be stated; and the surgeon shall send a copy of such notice to the sub-inspector of the district by the first post after the receipt thereof.

xxiii. That if a certifying surgeon shall receive notice as aforesaid that an accident has occurred which has caused bodily injury to any person employed in a factory for which he has been appointed to grant certificates of age, and that it has been of such a nature as to have prevented the person so injured from returning to his work in the factory the following morning, he shall with the least possible delay proceed to the said factory, and make a full investigation as to the nature and cause of such bodily injury, and shall within the next twenty-four hours send to the inspector of the district a report thereof, a copy of which report, together with any other information which he may receive respecting the said accident, the inspector of the district shall send to the office of the factory inspectors as soon as conveniently may be; and the certifying surgeon, for the purpose of such investigations only, shall have the same power, authority, and protection as an inspector, and shall also have power to enter any room in any building to which the injured person may have been removed; and for such investigation the said surgeon shall receive a fee not exceeding 10s., or such part thereof, not being less than 3s., as the inspector of the district may consider a reasonable remuneration to the surgeon for his trouble, which fee shall be paid as other expenses incurred under this Act.

XXIV. That one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, on the report and recommendation of an inspector, may empower such inspector to direct one or more actions to be brought in the name and on behalf of any person who shall be reported by such inspector to have received any bodily injury from the machinery of any factory, for the recovery of damages for and on behalf of such person.

XXV. That any damages which shall be recovered in any action so directed to be brought shall be paid, as soon after they are received as conveniently may be, to the person in whose behalf they have been recovered, or shall be otherwise settled for the use and benefit of the said person in such manner as shall be approved of by the Secretary of State; and in case a verdict shall be found for the defendant, or judgment shall be recovered against the plaintiff, or the plaintiff shall be nonsuited, the defendant shall have the like remedies for his costs against the inspector as he might have had against the plaintiff; and all charges and expenses incurred in bringing any such action, beyond what are recovered from the defendant, and not otherwise provided for, shall be paid as other expenses incurred under this Act are to be paid.

XXVI. That the hours of the work of children and young persons in every factory shall be reckoned from the time when any child or young person shall first begin to work in the morning in such factory, and shall be regulated by a public clock, or by some other clock open to the public view, to be approved of in either case in writing under the hand of the inspector or sub-inspector of the district.

XXVII. That registers shall be kept in the factory to which they relate, by the occupier of every factory, according to the forms and directions given in Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed; and every inspector shall have power to require such occupier to send to him, in such manner as may be directed in the requisition, any extracts from such registers, and any other information with relation to the persons employed in the factory, which may be requisite to facilitate the performance of the duties of such inspector in any inquiry made under the authority of the Factory Act or of this Act; but no information so sent by the occupier of any factory which is not contained in the registers, certificates, and other documents required by this Act to be received or kept shall be admissible in evidence in any proceeding against him for the recovery of any penalty; and the registers, certificates, and other documents required by this Act to be received or kept shall be forthwith produced to the inspector or sub-inspector, on his demanding to examine the same at any time when the factory is at work.

XXVIII. That it shall not be necessary to hang up in any mill or factory any copy of any abstract of the Factory Act, or of any regulations made in pursuance of the said Act, other than is hereinafter provided; and that such abstract of the Factory Act as amended by this Act as shall be directed by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall be fixed on a moveable board, and be hung up as soon as received by the occupier of the factory or his agent in the entrance of the factory, and in such other places as the inspector or sub-inspector of the district may direct; and notices of the names and addresses of the inspector and sub-inspector of the district in which the factory is situated, of the name and address of the surgeon who grants certificates of age for the factory, of the clock by which the hours of work in the factory are regulated, of the times of beginning and ending daily work of all persons employed in the factory, and any alteration thereof, of the times of the day and amount of time allowed for their several meals, of all time lost which is intended to be recovered, and of all time which shall be recovered, together with every other notice required by this Act, written or printed in legible characters, and fixed on moveable boards, (each particular notice being signed by the occupier of every factory or his agent,) shall be hung up in the entrance of the factory, where they may be easily read by the persons employed in the factory, and in such other places as the inspector or sub-inspector of the district may direct, and whence they shall not be removed while the factory is at work; and in case any such abstract of the Factory Act as amended by this Act, or notice, shall become illegible in any part, the occupier of the factory shall cause a new copy thereof to be provided and hung up as aforesaid; but the notice of lost time need not remain after the whole of the lost time intended to be recovered shall have been recovered; and every notice required to be hung up shall be in the forms and according to the directions given in the Schedule (C.) hereunto annexed.

XXIX. That every child who shall have completed his eighth year, and shall have obtained the surgical certificate required by this Act of having completed his eighth year, may be employed in a factory in the same manner and under the same regulations as children who have completed their ninth year; but no child under eight years of age shall be employed in any factory.

XXX. That no child shall be employed in any factory more than six hours and thirty minutes in any one day, save as hereinafter excepted, unless the dinner time of the young persons in such factory shall begin at one of the clock, in which case children beginning to work in the morning may work for seven hours in one day; and no child who shall have been employed in a factory before noon of any day shall be employed in the same or any other factory, either for the purpose of recovering lost time or otherwise, after one of the clock in the afternoon of the same day, save in the cases when children may work on alternate days, or in silk factories more than seven hours in any one day, as hereinafter provided.

XXXI. That in any factory in which the labour of young persons is restricted to ten hours in any one day it shall be lawful to employ any child ten hours in any one day on three alternate days of every week, provided that such child shall not be employed in any manner in the same or in any other factory on two successive days, nor after half-past four of the clock in the afternoon of any Saturday: Provided always, that the parent or person having direct benefit from the wages of any child so employed shall cause such child to attend some school for at least five hours between the hours of eight of the clock in the morning and six of the clock in the afternoon of the same day on each week day preceding each day of employment in the factory, unless such preceding day shall be a Saturday, when no school attendance of such child shall be required: Provided also, that on Monday in every week after that in which such child began to work in the factory, or any other day appointed for that purpose by the inspector of the district, the occupier of the factory shall obtain a certificate from a schoolmaster, according to the form and directions given in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, that such child has attended school as required by this Act; but it shall not be lawful to employ any child in a factory more than seven hours in any one day, until the owner of the factory shall have sent a notice in writing to the inspector of the district of his intention to restrict the hours of labour of young persons in the factory to ten hours a day, and to employ children ten hours a day; and if such occupier of a factory shall at any time cease so to employ children ten hours a day he shall not again employ any child in his factory more than seven hours in any one day until he shall have sent a further notice to the inspector in the manner hereinbefore provided.

xxxii. That no female above the age of eighteen years shall be employed in any factory save for the same time and in the same manner as young persons may be employed in factories; and that any person who shall be convicted of employing a female above the age of eighteen years for any longer time or in any other manner shall for every such offence be adjudged to pay the same penalty as is provided in the like case for employing a young person contrary to law: Provided always, that nothing herein or in the Factory Act contained as to certificates of age shall be taken to apply to females above the age of eighteen years.

xxxiii. That no time lost by accident or otherwise in any factory shall be made good or worked up by extension of ordinary hours of labour, save as is hereinafter provided; and that in any factory in which any part of the machinery is moved by the power of water the time which shall have been lost by stoppages from want of water, or from too much water, may be recovered in manner following, within six months next after the stoppage, between the hours specified in the Factory Act as those within which time lost by drought or excess of water may be recovered; and in order to recover time so lost any child or young person may be employed one hour in each day more than the time to which the ordinary daily labour of children and young persons respectively is restricted by law, except on Saturday; but it shall not be lawful so to recover any lost time until a notice shall have been sent by post to the sub-inspector of the district in which the factory is situated, stating the intention so to recover time that has been lost, nor unless a notice according to the form and directions given in the Schedule (C.) to this Act annexed shall have been previously fixed up in the entrance of the factory, and in such other places as an inspector or sub-inspector may direct; and such notice shall be kept so fixed up during the whole time while the lost time is in course of being recovered; and such notice shall be kept in a book as directed in the said Schedule (C.); nor shall lost time be so recovered on two successive days, unless the amount of time recovered on any one day shall be inserted before nine of the clock in the morning of the following day in the last-mentioned notice.

xxxiv. That in any factory in which any part of the machinery is moved by the power of water, when the stream is so diminished by drought or swollen by flood during any part of the day that any part of the manufacturing machinery driven by the water-wheel has been stopped by reason of such drought or flood, the young persons who would have been employed at such machinery may recover such lost time during the night next following the said day, unless the said day be Saturday: Provided always, that no such young person shall be employed during any twenty-four consecutive hours for a greater number of hours than that to which the ordinary daily labour of such young persons in factories is otherwise restricted by law; and that no young person so employed in the night shall work more than five hours, without an entire cessation from work of at least thirty minutes; but it shall not be lawful to recover any such lost time unless a notice according to the form and directions given in the Schedule (C.) to this Act annexed shall have been previously fixed up in the entrance of the factory, and in such other places as an inspector or sub-inspector may direct, and unless such notice be kept so fixed up during the whole time while the lost time is in course of being recovered; and such notice shall be kept in a book as directed in the said Schedule (C.) xxxv. That no child or young person shall be employed in a factory, either to recover lost time or for any other purpose, on any Saturday after half-past four of the clock in the afternoon.

xxxvi. That the times allowed for meal times as provided by the Factory Act shall be taken between the hours of half-past seven in the morning and half-past seven in the evening of every day, and one hour thereof at the least shall be given, either the whole at one time or at different times, before three of the clock in the afternoon; and no child or young person shall be employed more than five hours before one of the clock in the afternoon of any day without an interval for meal time of at least thirty minutes; and during any meal time which shall form any part of the hour and a half allowed for meals no child or young person shall be employed or allowed to remain in any room in which any manufacturing process is then carried on; and all the young persons employed in a factory shall have the time for meals at the same period of the day, unless some alteration for special cause shall be allowed in writing by an inspector.

xxxvii. That each of the halfholidays required by the Factory Act to be given shall comprise not less than one half of the day, and during such time no young person shall be employed in the factory; and that at least four of such half holidays shall be given between the fifteenth day of March and the first day of October in each year to every young person who shall be employed in the factory during the whole of such period; but no cessation from work shall be deemed a half holiday, unless notice of such half holiday, and of the time of such cessation from work, shall have been fixed up on the preceding day in the entrance of the factory, and in any other place that the inspector or sub-inspector may direct; and that in addition to such eight half days no child or young person shall be allowed to work in any factory on Christmas Day or Good Friday, in England or Ireland; and in Scotland no child or young person shall be allowed to work on any day the whole of which is set apart by the Church of Scotland for the observance of the sacramental fast in the parish in which the factory is situated.

xxxviii. That, save as herein otherwise provided, the parent or person having any direct benefit from the wages of any child employed in a factory shall cause such child to attend some school on the day after the first employment of such child, and thenceforth on each working day of every week during any part of which the said child shall continue in such employment; so that on every such day, except in the cases herein after provided, such child shall attend school during at least three hours after the hour of eight of the clock in the morning and before the hour of six of the clock in the evening: Provided always, that any child attending school after one of the clock in the afternoon shall not be required to remain in school more than two hours and a half on any one day between the 1st of November and the last of February, and no child shall be required to attend school on any Saturday, and the non-attendance of every such child shall be excused on every day on which such child shall be certified by the schoolmaster to have been prevented by sickness or other unavoidable cause from attending the school, and during any holiday or half holiday authorized by this Act, or by consent in writing of the inspector of the district in which the factory is situated, or, where the school-room is situated within the outer boundary of the factory at which such child is employed, on every day on which the school shall be closed in consequence of the said factory ceasing to be at work during the whole day.

XXXIX. That no schoolmaster's tickets or vouchers shall be required or valid other than is hereinafter provided, and that the occupier of every factory in which a child is employed shall on Monday in every week after the first week in which such child began to work in the factory, or on any other day appointed for that purpose by an inspector, obtain a certificate from a schoolmaster, according to the form and directions given in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, that such child has attended school as required by this Act during the foregone week; and such occupier shall keep such certificate for six months after the date thereof, and shall produce the same to any inspector or sub-inspector when required during such period, and shall, when required by the inspector for the district, pay to the schoolmaster of such child, or to such other person as the said inspector may direct, towards the expenses of educating such child, such sum as the inspector may require, not exceeding 2d per week, and shall be entitled to deduct from the wages payable to such child any such sum as he shall have been required to pay for such expenses, not exceeding the rate of one twelfth part of the weekly wages of such child: Provided always, that if an inspector, on his personal examination, or on the report of a sub-inspector, shall be of opinion that any schoolmaster who grants certificates of the school attendance of children employed in a factory is unfit to instruct children, by reason of his incapacity to teach them to read and write, from his gross ignorance, or from his not having the books and materials necessary to teach them reading and writing, or because of his immoral conduct, or of his continued neglect to fill up and sign the certificates of school attendance required by this Act, the inspector of the district may annul any certificate granted by such disqualified schoolmaster, by a notice in writing addressed to the occupier of the factory in which the children named in the certificate are employed, or his principal agent, setting forth the grounds on which he deems such schoolmaster to be unfit; and after the date of such notice no certificate of school attendance granted by such schoolmaster shall be valid for the purposes of this Act, unless with the consent in writing of the inspector of the district; but no inspector shall annul any such certificate unless in the aforesaid notice he shall name some other school situated within two miles of the factory where the children named in the certificate are employed: Provided also, that any schoolmaster whose certificate shall have been annulled, or the occupier of the factory in which the children named in the said certificate are employed on behalf of the schoolmaster, may appeal to the Secretary of State against such decisions of the inspector, and the Secretary of State may, if he think fit, rescind such decision: provided also, that every inspector shall in his annual report to the Secretary of State for the Home Department state the instances (if any) in which he shall have had occasion to annul any such certificate, together with the reasons which he has in each case assigned for so doing.

XL. That so much of the Factory Act as limits the time for preferring complaints for offences against the said Act, and as requires any written notice to be given of the intention to prefer any complaint for such offence, and as fixes any penalty or punishment for offences against the said Act, and as relates to the procedure for convicting any person of any offence against the said Act, and for levying or inflicting the penalty or punishment imposed, and for appealing against any such conviction, and as specifies the circumstances under which any penalties and punishments shall not be levied or inflicted, and as relates to the application of penalties, shall be repealed.

XLI. That the occupier of any factory in which any offence against this Act has been proved to have been committed, and for which a pecuniary penalty may be imposed, shall in every case (save as hereinafter provided) be deemed in the first instance to have committed the offence, and shall be liable to pay the penalty; but any occupier who shall have been proceeded against by any inspector or sub-inspector shall be entitled, upon complaint or information duly made by such occupier, to have any agent, servant, or workman whom he shall charge as the actual offender brought by summons before the Justices at the time appointed for hearing the complaint made against him by the inspector or sub-inspector; and if after the commission of the offence has been proved the occupier of the factory shall prove, to the satisfaction of the Justices, that he had used due diligence to enforce the execution of the Act, and that the said agent, servant, or workman had committed the offence in question, without his knowledge, consent, or connivance, the said agent, servant, or workman shall be convicted of such offence, and shall pay the penalty instead of the occupier of the factory; and the payment of such penalty and costs shall be enforced against the agent, servant, or workman in like manner as penalties are made recoverable by this Act: Provided always, that when it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the inspector or sub-inspector, at the time of discovering the offence, that the occupier of the factory had used all due diligence to enforce the execution of this Act, and also by what person such offence had been committed, and also that it had been committed without the personal consent, connivance, or knowledge of the occupier, and in contravention of his orders, then the inspector or sub-inspector shall proceed against the person whom he shall believe to be the actual offender in the first instance, without first proceeding against the occupier of the factory.

XLII. That notice in writing of an intention to prefer a complaint that a child or young person had been employed in a factory in which sufficient means had not been employed or continued for protecting the workers from being wetted, or for preventing the escape of steam into the room occupied by the workers, or that any part of the aforesaid machinery, hoist or tangle, or wheel-race, has not been securely fenced, shall be given four days at least previous to the day fixed for hearing the complaint; and if the party complained against intend to bring forward any millwright or other person skilled in the construction of the aforesaid machinery as a witness at the hearing of the case, he shall give notice in writing of such intention to the inspector or sub-inspector who shall be the complainant forty-eight hours previous to the day fixed for hearing the case.

XLIII. That if an inspector or sub-inspector shall observe in a factory any part of the machinery of any kind or description, or any driving strap or band, not securely fenced, which he shall deem likely to cause bodily injury to any person employed in such factory, he shall give notice in writing to the occupier of such factory or his agent of such part of the machinery, or such strap or band, as he shall deem to be dangerous, according to the form and directions given in Schedule (D.) to this Act annexed; and the occupier of the factory, or his agent, shall sign a duplicate copy of such notice in acknowledgment of his having received it: Provided always, that upon an application in writing made by the occupier of the factory, within fourteen days after he shall have received such notice, two arbitrators skilled in the construction of the kind of machinery to which such notice refers shall be appointed, one of whom shall be named by the occupier of the factory in the aforesaid application, and the other by the inspector of the district, with the least possible delay after he shall have received such application; and the said arbitrators shall proceed to examine the machinery alleged to be dangerous within fourteen days of the appointment of the arbitrator named by the inspector; and if the arbitrators so appointed shall not agree in opinion the said arbitrators shall choose a third arbitrator possessing a similar knowledge of machinery; and if the said arbitrators, or any two of them, shall sign an opinion in writing addressed to the inspector of the district, that it is unnecessary or impossible to fence the machinery, or strap or band, alleged in the notice to be dangerous, the inspector of the district on receipt of the same shall cancel the said notice; and if the decision of the arbitrators shall be that it is unnecessary or impossible to fence the machinery so alleged to be dangerous the expense of such reference shall be paid as other expenses under this Act, but if the decision of the arbitrators shall be that it is necessary and possible to fence the said machinery, then the expenses of the reference shall be paid by the occupier of the factory, and shall be recoverable as the penalties under this Act are recoverable.

XLIV. That all complaints for offences against this Act shall be preferred within two months next after the commission of the offence, except in the case of complaints for offences punishable at discretion by fine or imprisonment, or for working on Christmas-day, Good Friday, or the sacramental fast days, or for not giving all or any of the eight half days for holidays required to be given, in each of which cases the complaints may be preferred within three months next after the commission of the offence; and no person shall be liable to a larger amount of penalties for any repetition from day to day of the same kind of offence than the highest penalty hereinafter named for such offence, unless such repetition of offence shall have been committed after a complaint shall have been made for the previous offence, and except also for offences of employing two or more children or young persons contrary to law.

XLV. That all complaints for the enforcement of any penalty under this Act shall be heard and determined by two or more Justices of the Peace acting for the county or other jurisdiction wherein the offence was committed, or for any adjoining county or jurisdiction, with the like authority as though the cause of complaint had arisen within such adjoining county or jurisdiction, provided that the place of hearing the complaint in such other county or jurisdiction be not more than five miles from the place where the offence was committed; and the Justices by whom any person shall be fined for any offence against this Act may order that such person shall pay the penalty, and also the reasonable costs and charges of such proceedings and conviction, either immediately or within such time as the said Justices shall think fit; and in default of payment thereof any Justice may cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party convicted, together with the reasonable costs and charges of such conviction, distress and sale, by warrant under the hand and seal of any such Justice; and where the warrant of distress is directed against the goods and chattels of any person being the occupier of a factory it shall be lawful under such warrant to distrain any goods and chattels found in the said factory which would be liable to be distrained for rent in arrear.

XLVI. That in England and Ireland a summons for an offence against this Act shall be issued by any Justice, upon complaint being made to him in writing by an inspector or sub-inspector, or upon oath before him by any other person, that to the best of the knowledge and belief of the inspector, sub-inspector, or such other person such an offence has been committed, and in Scotland a summons for an offence against this Act shall be issued by any Justice upon complaint being made to him in writing by an inspector or sub-inspector, or by the procurator fiscal, or by any person having a title and interest to prosecute with the concurrence of the procurator fiscal, that to the best of the knowledge and belief of such inspector, sub-inspector, procurator fiscal, or other person such an offence has been committed; and in every such prosecution in Scotland the proceedings shall be summary, and it shall not be necessary to take down in writing more than the substance of the evidence; and no higher or other fees shall be allowed in Scotland to the clerk of court or constables than are allowed to be paid to the sheriff clerk and sheriff officers in causes and prosecutions under the authority of 10 Geo. 4. c. 55.

XLVII. That every person who shall be summoned to answer any complaint shall be bound to appear at the time and place mentioned in the summons, and to produce before the Justices then and there present every register or other account, paper, or notice required by law to be kept by him or his agent, which shall be mentioned in the summons; and if he shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of due service of the summons) the Justices may either hear and determine the case in his absence, or issue their warrant, as hereinafter provided, for enforcing his attendance, and the attendance of any witness who shall refuse or neglect to appear.

XLVIII. Declared and enacted, That it shall be no objection to the competency of any inspector or sub-inspector to give evidence as a witness in any prosecution under this Act that it is brought at the instance of such inspector or sub-inspector.

XLIX. That any Justice of the Peace, upon any complaint under this Act, may summon any witness to appear and give evidence at a time and place appointed for hearing such complaint, and by warrant under his hand and seal may require any person to be brought before the Justices by whom the complaint shall be heard who shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place appointed in any summons, proof upon oath being first given of personal service of the summons upon the person against whom such warrant shall be granted, and may commit any person coming or brought before such Justices who shall refuse to give evidence to the county prison or prison of the place where such offence was committed, there to remain for any time not exceeding one month, or until such person shall sooner submit himself to be examined; and in case of such submission the order of any Justice shall be a sufficient warrant to any gaoler or prison keeper for the discharge of such person.

L. That every inspector and sub-inspector shall be empowered to summon any person whom he shall charge with having offended against this Act, and also all witnesses who may be needed to give evidence concerning the charge; and every such summons shall be of the same effect as if issued by a Justice of the Peace after complaint upon oath before him, and shall be enforced in like manner, and the like proceedings may be had thereupon, as if complaint upon oath had been made before such Justice for such offence; and every constable and other peace officer to whom any such summons shall be directed shall be bound to take charge of and to serve such summons, and in default thereof shall be liable to be punished as if the summons had been issued by a Justice of the Peace; and every such summons of an offender or witness may be in the form provided in each case, and given in the Schedule (D.) hereunto annexed; and when an inspector or sub-inspector shall summon an offender he shall give to the same constable or peace officer a statement of the offence alleged to have been committed, who shall deliver it to a Justice of the Peace usually acting for the division in which the case is to be heard, or to the clerk of any such Justice, at least twenty-four hours before the period named in the summons for the appearance of the party charged with such offence.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Any officer who may convene or confirm courts-martial for the Queen's troops, or for the East India Company's troops, may convene or confirm courts-martial for any troops under his actual command.
2. Offenders may be tried wheresoever they may be serving or the offence may have been committed.
3. Her Majesty may authorize commanders-in-chief to delegate power of confirming sentences of general courts-martial.
4. No other confirmation necessary, except in certain cases.
5. Confirmation of sentences of death on commissioned officers.
6. Act not otherwise to affect laws now in force.
7. Act to extend only to the East Indies.

By this Act,

After reciting that doubts have arisen as to the proper authority by which, in certain cases, courts-martial may be appointed and convened, and the sentences thereof confirmed, in the East Indies and elsewhere; and it is important to the maintenance of good order and military discipline that such doubts should be removed:—

It is Enacted,

1. That, any law, custom, usage, statute, regulations, articles of war, or warrant to the contrary notwithstanding, any general or other officer who may from time to time have power to appoint or convene general or district or other courts-martial for the trial of offences committed by any of the officers or soldiers in the service of Her Majesty, or by any of the officers, soldiers, or followers in the service of the East India Company, not being natives of the East Indies or other places within the limits of the said Company's charter, or by any of the officers, soldiers, or followers in the service of the said company, being natives of the East Indies or other places within the limits aforesaid, shall, without any further or other authority or warrant, have power and authority to appoint or convene general or district or other courts-martial (as the case may be) to be holden for the trial of offences committed by any officer, soldier, or follower in any of the said services, who may be under the actual command or who may be or come within the local limits of the command of such general or other officer, although the power of such officer as to appointing or convening courts-martial might but for this Act extend to one or more of the said services only, or to some only of the forces belonging to any one or more of such services: and that in like manner any general or other officer who may from time to time have power to confirm sentences of general or district or other courts-martial for the trial of offences committed by any of the officers or soldiers in the service of Her Majesty, or by any of the officers, soldiers, or followers in the service of the East India Company, not being natives as aforesaid, or by any of the officers, soldiers, or followers in the service of the East India Company, being such natives as aforesaid, shall, without any further or other authority or warrant, have power and authority to confirm sentences of general or district or other courts-martial (as the case may be) held for the trial of any officer or soldier or follower in any of the said services, who may be under the actual command or who may be or come within the local limits of the command of such general or other officer, although the power of such officer, as to confirming the sentences of courts-martial, might but for this Act extend to one or more of the said services only, or to some only of the forces belonging to any one or more of such services.

II. That the said several powers may be exercised as aforesaid to whichever of the presidencies of Fort William, Fort Saint George, or Bombay the offender may belong, or whether the general or other officer appointing or convening the court-martial, or confirming the sentence, may be the officer commanding in chief in India, or at the presidency to which the offender may belong, or at any other presidency, or may hold his command or his power to appoint, convene, or confirm the sentences of courts-martial from or under the officer commanding in chief in India, or at the presidency to which the offender may belong, or at any other presidency, or may hold such command or power from or under any other authority whatsoever, or whether the offence shall have been committed before or after the officer appointing or convening the court or confirming the sentence shall have taken the command, or before or after the offender shall have been under the command of such officer, or before or after the offender shall have been or shall have come within the local limits of the command of such officer, or wheresoever, whether within the presidency to which the offender may belong, or within any other presidency, possessions, or territories under the government of the said company, or on the high seas, or elsewhere, the offender may be serving, or the offence shall have been committed, or the court-martial shall be appointed, convened, or held.

III. That, any articles of war or usage to the contrary notwithstanding, Her Majesty may grant warrants under her sign manual severally empowering the officer commanding in chief the forces in India, and the general or other officer commanding the forces at each or any of the presidencies of Fort William, Fort Saint George, and Bombay for the time being, to authorize any general or other officer not below the rank of a field officer, having the command of any body of the troops of Her Majesty or of the said company serving in the possessions or territories which are or may be under the government of the said company or elsewhere, to confirm the sentences of general courts-martial which shall be holden for the trial of offences committed by any officer, soldier, or follower of or belonging to such troops; and the officer commanding in chief the forces in India, or the general or other officer commanding the forces at any of the said presidencies, being so empowered, may authorize any such general or other officer to confirm such classes of sentences only, or sentences passed for such classes of offences only, or on such classes of persons only, as he may think fit, reserving to himself the power of confirming sentences in all such cases as such general or other officer may not be authorized to confirm, or may think fit to send for the decision of such officer commanding in chief the forces in India, or of such officer commanding the forces at one of the said presidencies.

IV. That when, by any Act of Parliament or articles of war, the sentence of a court-martial is not to be carried into execution until confirmed by the general or other officer commanding in chief at the presidency in the territories subordinate to which the offender shall have been tried, with the concurrence of the Governor General in council, or governor in council, or governor of such presidency, it shall not be necessary, in any such case, that a sentence so confirmed, with such concurrence, should, in addition, be reported to or approved or confirmed by the general or other officer commanding in chief the forces of the presidency to which the offender may belong; and the officer confirming the sentence, with such concurrence, and in all other cases the officer authorized under the provisions in this Act contained to confirm the sentence of any court-martial, shall have power to cause the same to be put into execution, or to suspend, mitigate, or remit the same.

V. That nothing in this Act contained shall empower any person not otherwise duly authorized in that behalf to confirm any sentence of death, transportation, or cashiering on any commissioned officer employed upon Her Majesty's staff, or serving in any of Her Majesty's regular regiments; and that nothing in this Act contained shall empower any officer, other than those hereinafter mentioned, to confirm the sentence of death, transportation, or cashiering on a commissioned officer of the East India Company's service; (that is to say,) the general or other officer commanding in chief at the presidency within which, or in territories subordinate to which, the offender shall have been tried, or the general commanding in chief the army to which the division, brigade, or party in which the offender may be serving shall belong or be attached.

VI. Provided and enacted, That, save as hereinbefore is expressly provided, this Act shall not alter or affect the laws, statutes, regulations, articles of war, usages, or customs which now are or hereafter may be in force with respect to Her Majesty's forces or the forces of the said East India Company, whether natives or not of the East Indies, or other places within the limits of the said Company's charter: Provided also, that this Act shall not be construed as declaring or interpreting the extent of Her Majesty's royal prerogative, or the meaning of any former Act or of any article of war.

VII. That the provisions of this Act shall apply to all such persons as may from time to time be liable to martial law under the provisions of any Act of Parliament or articles of war, and who may from time to time be serving or may be or come within the limits of the charter of the East India Company, construing the same as extending to all places and seas eastward of the Cape of Good Hope to the Straits of Magellan.

VIII. That, so far as regards officers and soldiers in Her Majesty's service, this Act shall continue in force so long only as there may be in force some Act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters.

XI. That whenever any of the said several companies of goldsmiths or guardians aforesaid shall have reasonable or probable cause to suspect that any dealer in gold and silver wares hath concealed or deposited in any house, shop or place, or hath possession of any wares of gold or silver which ought to be marked with any of the marks provided or used or to be provided or used by any of the said companies of goldsmiths or guardians respectively, for marking or stamping gold or silver wares, and not so marked, or hath concealed or deposited as aforesaid, or hath possession of any such forged or counterfeited die or other instrument, or any ware of gold or silver, or ware of base metal, having thereupon any mark of any such forged or counterfeited die or other instrument as aforesaid, or having thereupon any forged or counterfeited mark of any die or other instrument provided or used or to be provided or used as aforesaid, or any mark which shall have been so transposed or removed thereto as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace having jurisdiction where any or either of such offences shall be suspected to be committed, and such Justice is hereby required, upon information or complaint made of any such reasonable or probable cause of suspicion, by or on behalf of any of the several companies of goldsmiths or guardians aforesaid, and upon the oath of one or more credible person or persons (which oath such Justice is hereby empowered and required to administer), to grant a warrant under his hand directed to any one or more of the officers of any of the several companies of goldsmiths or guardians aforesaid, together with any constable or other peace officer named in such warrant, authorizing and empowering such officer of the said companies respectively, and such constable or other peace officer as aforesaid, with necessary and proper assistance, to enter in the day time into any such house, shop, or place as aforesaid, or any other house, shop, or place of any such suspected person, and to search the same, and to seize and take away every such forged or counterfeited die or other instrument, and every such ware as aforesaid, which shall there be found; and all constables and other peace officers shall and they are hereby required to be aiding and assisting in the execution of every such warrant as aforesaid; and every such forged and counterfeited die or other instrument, and every such ware as aforesaid, so there found, seized, and taken, shall and may be dealt with as hereinafter is provided: Provided always, and it is hereby declared, that nothing in this Act contained shall authorize the search for or seizure of any wares which by the laws now in force are not required to be marked or stamped by any of the companies of goldsmiths or guardians aforesaid, or any of the wares following; namely, watch rings, watch keys, watch hooks, earrings, necklaces, eyeglasses, spectacles of gold, shirt pins or studs, bracelets, head ornaments, waist buckles.

goldsmiths or guardians aforesaid as being of base metal, and fraudulently marked, every such ware so broken and defaced shall be melted and the metal thereof shall be sold and disposed of, and the produce thereof shall be entered in the book of account of receipts and payments relating to the assay office belonging to the said company by whom or by whose officer such ware shall have been so seized or taken, and shall be applied towards defraying the general expenses of the assay office of such company, and in the prosecution of offenders under this Act; and, save and except as aforesaid, every such ware so seized and taken, or broken and defaced, shall be given back to the dealer from whom it shall have been so seized and taken.

XIII. That all actions and prosecutions which shall be brought or commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance or under the authority of this Act shall be commenced and prosecuted within three calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and shall be brought and tried in the county or place where the cause of action shall arise, and not elsewhere; and notice in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one calendar month at least before the commencement of the action; and the defendant in such action may plead the general issue, and give this Act and any other matter or thing in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if the cause of action shall appear to arise from any matter or thing done in pursuance and by the authority of this Act, or if any such action shall be brought after the expiration of such three calendar months, or shall be brought in any other county or place than as aforesaid, or if notice of such action shall not have been given in manner aforesaid, or if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action commenced, or if a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court after such action commenced, by or on behalf of the defendant, the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or if the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or shall discontinue any such action, or if, on demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall recover his full costs of suit as between attorney and client, and shall have the like remedy for the same as any defendant may have for cost of suit in other cases at law; and although a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant, unless the Judge before whom the trial shall be had shall at the time of such trial certify in writing his approbation of the action, and of the verdict obtained thereupon.

And for the better interpretation of this Act, and to avoid the frequent use of divers terms and expressions,—

It is Enacted,

XIV. That the following terms and expressions shall have the several interpretations hereinafter respectively set forth; (that is to say,) the term "base metal" shall mean any metal whatsoever other than gold or silver of the respective standards required by law; and the term "dealer in gold or silver wares" shall mean and include every goldsmith and silversmith, and every worker, maker, and manufacturer of and trader and dealer in gold or silver wares; and the term "die" shall mean and include any die, plate, tool, or instrument whatever, by means whereof any mark can or shall be made upon any metal whatsoever; and the term "Her Majesty" shall mean and include Her Majesty, her heirs and successors; and the term "mark" shall mean and include any mark, stamp, or impression of and made with any die or other instrument, or produced by any other means whatsoever upon any metal whatsoever; and the term "ware" shall mean and include any plate, vessel, article, or manufacture of any metal whatsoever; and whenever in this Act, with reference to any person or matter, or thing, or to any persons or matters or things, the singular or plural number or the masculine gender only is expressed, such expression shall be understood to include several persons or matters or things as well as one person or matter or thing, and one person, matter, or thing as well as several persons or matters or things, females as well as males, bodies politic or corporate as well as individuals, unless it be otherwise specially provided, or the subject or context be repugnant to such construction.

And after reciting that all gold wares of the standard or fineness of twenty-two carats of fine gold in every pound troy assayed by any of the said companies of goldsmiths and guardians are by certain statutes now in force required to be marked with the same mark as that with which all silver wares of the standard or fineness of eleven ounces and two pennyweights, assayed as aforesaid, are required to be marked, (that is to say,) with the figure of the lion passant, in order to denote the standards thereof respectively, whereby great facilities to frauds are afforded, and extensive frauds have been committed by dealers in gold and silver wares; and it is expedient that all gold wares of the standard or fineness aforesaid, and so assayed as aforesaid, should be marked by a different mark, to denote the standard thereof, from the mark so used for the said silver wares as aforesaid:—

It is Enacted,

XV. That from and after the 1st of October 1844 there shall be struck or marked by the said company of goldsmiths in London, and by the several companies of goldsmiths in the cities of York, Exeter, Bristol, Chester, and Norwich, and the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and the company of guardians of the standard of wrought plate in the town of Birmingham, upon all gold wares of the standard or fineness of twenty-two carats of fine gold in every pound troy, brought to them respectively to be assayed, the mark of a crown and the figures 22, instead of the mark of the lion passant.

XVI. That the rules, directions, powers, privileges, pains, penalties, forfeitures, causes, matters, and things enacted or provided in and by any of the laws and statutes of this realm now in force in relation to the mark of the lion passant on gold wares of the standard or fineness of twenty-two carats in the pound troy, and assayed as aforesaid, and also in relation to the die used for making the said mark of the lion passant, shall extend to, and be continued, applied, practised, and put in execution in all cases relating to the said mark of a crown and the figures 22 hereby directed to be used for the gold wares aforesaid, and also relating to the said die to be used for making the said mark, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same rules, directions, powers, privileges, pains, penalties, forfeitures, causes, matters, and things were again particularly repeated and enacted in and by the present Act, anything in the statutes now in force or any of them contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

XVII. That this Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

XVIII. That this Act shall come into operation on the 1st of October 1844.

XIX. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed during this present session of Parliament.

By this Act,

After reciting that divers statutes have been from time to time made in the Parliaments of England, Scotland, Great Britain, and Ireland respectively prohibiting certain dealings in wares, victuals, merchandise, and various commodities by the names of badgering, forestalling, regrating, and engrossing, and subjecting to divers punishments, penalties, and forfeitures persons so dealing: and that it is expedient that such statutes, as well as certain other statutes made in hindrance and in restraint of trade, be repealed: And that an Act of the Parliament of Great Britain was passed in the 12 Geo. 3. c. 71, intituled 'An Act for repealing several Laws therein mentioned against Badgers, Engrossers, Forestallers, and Regraters, and for indemnifying Persons against Prosecutions for Offences committed against the said Acts,' whereby, after reciting that it had been found by experience that the restraint laid by several statutes upon the dealing in corn, meal, flour, cattle, and sundry other sorts of victuals, by preventing a free trade in the said commodities, have a tendency to discourage the growth and to enhance the price of the same, which statutes, if put in execution, would bring great distress upon the inhabitants of many parts of this kingdom, and in particular upon those of the cities of London and Westminster, sundry Acts therein mentioned, and all the Acts made for the better enforcement of the same, were repealed, as being detrimental to the supply of the labouring and manufacturing poor of this kingdom: And that, notwithstanding the making of the first-recited Act, persons are still liable to be prosecuted for badgering, engrossing, forestalling, and regrating, as being offences at common law, and also forbidden by divers statutes made before the earliest of the statutes thereby repealed: For remedy thereof, and for the extension of the same remedy to Scotland and to Ireland,—

It is Enacted,

By this Act,

After reciting that by 6 Geo. 4. c. 37, certain duties of Excise were granted and made payable upon vinegar or acetous acid, or liquors prepared or preparing for vinegar or acetous acid, brewed or made in any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for sale : And by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 44, certain duties of Excise were granted on the fluxed materials or metal, or other preparations made for the purpose of making flint glass, and certain drawbacks were allowed on flint glass for and in respect of which such last-mentioned duties had been duly charged, and which should be exported to foreign parts : And that it is expedient that the said duties upon vinegar or acetous acid or liquors prepared or preparing for vinegar or acetous acid, should cease and determine, and that the said duties and drawbacks on flint glass should be repealed, and other duties and drawbacks in respect thereof should be granted and allowed in lieu thereof:—

It is Enacted,

I. That from and after the passing of this Act all and singular the duties of Excise now payable on vinegar or acetous acid, or liquors prepared or preparing for vinegar or acetous acid, brewed or made in any part of Great Britain or Ireland, shall cease and determine, and be no longer levied or collected, paid or payable; and the several Acts, enactments, clauses, provisions, and regulations for securing, levying, or collecting the duties on vinegar or acetous acid, or liquors prepared or preparing for vinegar or acetous acid, shall not, from and after the passing of this Act, be enforced or executed, save and except for the purpose of recovering any duties incurred or charged before the passing of this Act, or any arrears thereof, or any fine, penalty, or forfeiture for the breach of any of the said clauses, enactments, provisions, or regulations committed previous to the passing of this Act, but all such duties, and arrears, fines, penalties, and forfeitures, shall and may be recovered, levied, enforced, and applied in the same manner and by the same powers and authorities as if this Act had not been passed: Provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to cancel and remit so much of the aforesaid duties which shall have been charged on any maker of vinegar or acetous acid, not being pyroligneous acid, for sale between the 5th of July 1843 and the day of the passing of this Act, as shall not exceed the sum to which such duties would amount if the same had been charged and made payable on the stock of such vinegar or acetous acid in the hands of the maker thereof, as taken by the proper officer of Excise, on the 1st of June 1844.

II. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall extend or be deemed or construed to extend in any manner to interfere with the licences now required by law to be taken out by makers of vinegar or acetous acid for sale; and every person who shall make, prepare, extract, distil, rectify, purify, or sell any liquors prepared or capable of being used or applied to the purposes of vinegar or acetous acid made for sale, not being a dealer in, retailer, or seller of such vinegar or acetous acid only, shall be deemed and taken to be a vinegar maker, and shall take out the licence now required by law in such respect, under the same rules, regulations, provisions, penalties, and forfeitures as such licences are now granted and held under.

III. Provided and enacted, That every such maker of vinegar or acetous acid for sale as aforesaid shall make entry by delivering a true and particular account in writing of every house, building, room, place, still, vessel, and utensil intended to be used by him for the making or keeping of any vinegar or acetous acid for sale, in such form and manner as directed by an Act, 7 & 8 Geo. 4. c. 53, intituled, 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to the Collection and Management of the Revenue of Excise throughout Great Britain and Ireland,' and by another Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 51, intituled, 'An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Collection and Management of the Revenue of Excise,' and by another Act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 20, intituled, 'An Act to alter and amend certain Laws relating to the Collection and Management of the Duties of Excise,' and shall in such respect be subject to all and singular the rules, regulations, penalties, and forfeitures by the said last-mentioned Acts imposed on persons required to make entry, and not making entry, of any house, building, or place, vessel or utensil, required by any Act or Acts relating to the revenue of Excise.

IV. Provided and enacted, That every such maker of vinegar or acetous acid for sale as aforesaid who shall have, possess, or use at or upon his or her entered place or places for making vinegar, any still for distilling, rectifying, or purifying vinegar or acetous acid, or any liquor or materials prepared or preparing for making vinegar or acetous acid, shall have and use such still only under and subject to such rules and regulations as the Commissioners of Excise shall from time to time direct and order in such respect, on pain of forfeiting 100*l*.

V. That from and after the 5th of July 1844 the duties and drawbacks now payable on flint glass shall cease and determine, and be no longer paid or payable, save and except as to any arrear of such duties which shall have been charged or become due, or any penalty or forfeiture which shall have been incurred by the commission of any offence in respect thereof under the laws of Excise, or the payment of any drawback which shall become payable in respect of any flint glass exported before the said 5th of July 1844; and that in lieu of the said duties there shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid throughout the United Kingdom the rates and duties of Excise hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) for every 100 lb. weight avoirdupois, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity, of the fluxed materials or metal or other preparations whatever, by what name soever the same may be called or known, which shall be made for the purpose of making flint glass, the sum of 2*s*. 6*d*. and 5 per cent. additional thereon; and that in lieu of the said drawbacks there shall be allowed and paid the following drawback; (that is to say,) for every 100 lb. weight avoirdupois, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity, of flint glass, for or in respect of which, or of the materials, metal, or other preparation from which the same shall have been made, all Excise duties payable thereon shall have been duly charged, and which shall be exported to foreign parts, the sum of 6*s*. 3*d*., and 5 per cent. additional thereon.

VI. That the said duties and drawbacks on flint glass by this Act granted and allowed shall be under the management of the Commissioners of Excise, and shall be charged, raised, levied, sued for, collected, and applied, allowed and paid, and accounted for in the same manner, as other duties and drawbacks under the management of the said Commissioners under the provisions of this Act, and the general or special provisions, clauses, enactments, regulations, pains, penalties, and forfeitures contained in any Act or Acts relating to the collection and management of the Revenue of Excise.

And after reciting that by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 44, it is enacted, with reference to the account or return directed by that Act to be made out as a charge of duty on every maker of glass, "that for making out the said account or return in respect to flint glass an account shall at the end of every round or period of six weeks be taken and made out by the officer of Excise of the whole quantity of flint glass for or in respect of which any maker of flint glass shall have been charged with duty upon the fluxed materials or metal or other preparations from which such flint glass as aforesaid shall have been made, after deduction of the gauged weight of all fluxed materials, metal, or other preparations taken account of by the officer, and laded out of the pot, according to the provisions of this Act, and of the whole weight of manufactured flint glass and glass wares weighed by such maker of flint glass within such round or period of six weeks as aforesaid; and if upon such account being taken and made out as aforesaid the weight of such manufactured flint glass and glass wares as aforesaid shall exceed the quantity of such flint glass as aforesaid with which such maker of flint glass shall have been so charged with duty after such deduction as aforesaid, by any quantity greater than the quantity of 40 per centum of or upon the whole quantity of such flint glass as last aforesaid, such maker of flint glass shall be charged with and pay the duty of 2*d.* per pound upon each and every pound weight of such excess, over and above any duty which such maker of flint glass shall have paid or may have been charged with upon the fluxed materials or metal or other preparations from which such glass as aforesaid shall have been made." And that by the reduction and alteration of the duties on flint glass by this Act it is necessary to amend the above-mentioned clause:—

It is Enacted,

VII. That from and after the said 5th of July 1844 every maker of flint glass shall be charged with and pay the duty of $\frac{1}{4}$ and 5 per centum thereon, instead of 2*d.* per pound and 5 per centum thereon imposed by an Act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 17, intitled, 'An Act for granting to Her Majesty Duties of Customs, Excise, and Assessed Taxes,' upon each and every pound weight of such excess, as in the said Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 44, is mentioned.

And after reciting that by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 44, it is further enacted, "that no drawback shall be allowed or payable on chandelier or ornamental drops of less weight than one ounce each, nor on any glass buttons or glass beads, nor on any flint glass goods or wares which shall not be good, fair, and merchantable articles, perfectly manufactured of metal, fully and properly fluxed or fused and finished, by all rough, waste, and useless parts being removed therefrom, and of such quality as to be worth at least 5*d.* per pound, exclusive of the duty, if made for or if the same had been made into articles for home consumption, and which shall not have been previously in use;"

It is Enacted,

VIII. That from and after the said 5th of July 1844 so much of the said recited Act as requires, for the purpose of obtaining a drawback, that any flint glass goods or wares shall be of such quality as to be worth at least 5*d.* per pound, exclusive of the duty, shall be repealed.

And after reciting that by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 44, it is further enacted, "that it shall not be lawful for any maker of flint glass, or any other person, to open or flatten out any shade or cylinder made of white or uncoloured flint glass, except as hereinafter provided, on pain of forfeiting all flint glass so opened or flattened out, and 100*l.*: Provided always, that makers of flint glass may open out and flatten cylinders of white or uncoloured glass into plates, such plates, when opened and flattened out, not being of less thickness than two tenth parts of an inch nor of greater dimensions than fourteen inches square;"—

It is Enacted,

IX. That from and after the said 5th of July 1844 so much of the said Act as is above recited shall be repealed.

X. That from and after the said 5th of July 1844 it shall not be lawful for any maker of flint glass, or any other person, to open or flatten out any shade or cylinder, whether made of coloured or uncoloured flint glass, or to cast or press or otherwise manufacture any flint glass into panes or plates which shall be of the dimensions of six inches in length by four inches in breadth, or which shall exceed such dimensions either in length or in breadth, on pain of forfeiting all such flint glass, and the penalty of 100*l.*, for every such offence: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed or construed to prevent any maker of flint glass or other person from manufacturing flint glass into lenses, or into prisms for deck lights, or illuminators for lanterns, or finger plates for doors, as such articles are commonly now so called and manufactured by makers of flint glass, provided the same are not manufactured by the opening or flattening of any shade or cylinder of such glass.

XI. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be deemed or construed to affect a certain provision contained in the said Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 44. s. 92, whereby it is enacted that it shall be lawful for the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury from time to time to dispense with or alter the whole or any part of the said regulations, or to remit the whole or any part of the duty, and to prescribe such other conditions and securities as they may judge necessary or expedient, for the improvement or better preparation and selection of glass fitted for the purposes of optical instruments or for the purposes of science.

And after reciting that it is expedient that provision should be made for allowing the makers of flint glass to make and store glass not to be sold or sent into consumption until after the said 5th of July 1844, when the duty now payable on flint glass is to cease and determine, and the new duty hereby imposed is to commence and take effect:—

It is Enacted,

XII. That every maker of flint glass who shall intend to make any flint glass wares or commodities, not to be sold or sent into consumption before the 6th of July 1844, shall give three hours previous notice of such his intention in writing to the proper officer of Excise, before storing any such glass, and in such notice shall specify some separate and secure room or store, to be approved of by the Commissioners of Excise or their officers, for the keeping therein of all such flint glass wares and commodities as are intended to be so stored; and such maker of flint glass may from time to time, when giving notice for charging the pots in his glass house, also give like notice in writing to the proper officer of Excise that all the flint glass to be made in that journey is flint glass not to be sold or sent into consumption until after the 5th of July 1844, and that he is desirous of storing the same, and all such glass shall be made under the regulations and shall be charged with the duties now in force; and as often as any notice for weighing such glass shall be given the officer of Excise, having received such notice, shall attend and weigh and take an account of all such glass in the weighing room, and such account having been taken all such glass shall be forthwith removed into the re-weighing room, there to remain for the time required by law, and shall then be deposited and stored in the separate room or store approved of by the Commissioners of Excise or their officers, under the locks and keys of the officers of Excise, and otherwise secured in such manner as the Commissioners of Excise shall direct:

and all such flint glass shall be kept so stored and secured until on or after the 6th of July 1844, on which day the proper officers of Excise shall weigh and take an account of all the said glass which shall have been so stored and secured as aforesaid; and if upon such account the whole quantity of glass shall be found in the stock of the maker thereof stored and secured as aforesaid, and the officers of Excise shall be satisfied that it is the same glass which was so made, and that no part thereof has been sent into consumption, or any addition made thereto, or any alteration therein, the Commissioners of Excise are hereby authorized and empowered to allow to the respective makers of such glass the difference in the charge of duty now payable on flint glass and the duty hereby imposed, and to deliver the said glass to the makers thereof on the charge and payment of the duty by this Act made payable.

XIII. Provided and enacted, That in case any maker of flint glass shall be desirous of taking out any glass so stored for consumption before the said 6th of July, it shall be lawful for such maker to give three hours previous notice in writing to the officer of Excise, specifying in such notice the hour when such glass is to be taken out, and the quantity of such glass so required to be taken out, such quantity not being less than one hundred weight; and the officer of Excise having received such notice shall attend, and take an account of and weigh the quantity of glass specified in such notice, and shall deliver the same to the maker thereof; and on all such glass so delivered out before the said 6th of July the full duty of Excise of 2d. per pound and 5 per centum thereon, now payable, shall be paid: Provided also, that not more than one such notice shall be given on the same day, and that for such a time only, between the hours of six of the clock in the morning and six of the clock in the evening, as that such weighing and delivery may be completed between the hours mentioned.

XIV. That if any flint glass which shall be made under the regulations aforesaid as not to be sent into consumption until after the said 5th of July 1844 shall not at any time previous thereto be so stored and secured in such separate and secure room or store approved of by the Commissioners of Excise or their officers, or if any such maker of flint glass shall open or procure to be opened any such room or store, or injure any of the locks, keys, or fastenings thereof, or remove or cause to be removed any flint glass from or out of the same, or shall send out or deliver any such flint glass so made to be stored, except under such notice as is hereinbefore provided, or if on the said 6th of July 1844, or at any time previous thereto, the officers of Excise shall not find all such flint glass so stored and secured and unaltered, except as aforesaid, or if any such maker of flint glass shall use or practise any art or device to deceive any officer of Excise in taking an account of such flint glass, or of any part of his stock, or to remove any part of such flint glass, or to evade any part of the duty on flint glass with which previous to the said 6th of July 1844 he might or would be chargeable, or to obtain any greater allowance under the regulations aforesaid than he shall be entitled to, then and in every such case the flint glass maker so offending shall forfeit all claim to any such allowance as aforesaid, and shall pay all the full duties now charged on such glass, together with any penalty or penalties or forfeitures which he may thereby incur under any of the laws of Excise.

XV. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

AN ACT for authorizing Her Majesty to carry into immediate Execution, by Orders in Council, any Treaties for the Suppression of the Slave Trade.

(4th July 1844.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENT.

By this Act,

After reciting the passing of 7 Will. 4. & 1 Vict. c. 62: And that the said Act was revived and continued by an Act passed in the last session of Parliament: And that Her Majesty is at the present time engaged in negotiation with certain foreign powers for the purpose of concluding with them such treaties or conventions or additional stipulations: And that it may happen that during the time when Parliament is not sitting some such treaties or conventions or additional stipulations may be concluded, or, having previously been concluded, may at that time be ratified, or, having previously been ratified, the ratifications thereof may at that time be exchanged, or, having been exchanged at some spot in foreign parts, the ratification of such treaty by the foreign state may at that time arrive in this country, or such treaties, conventions, or stipulations, or ratifications thereof, may arrive in this country within so short a period before the prorogation of Parliament as may not allow the passing of any Act or Acts of Parliament before the close of the session authorizing Her Majesty to carry such treaties or conventions or additional stipulations into immediate execution: And that in such case delay would take place in carrying into execution the stipulations of such treaties or conventions or additional stipulations, and much crime might be perpetrated during the interval that might elapse between the ratification of such treaties or conventions or stipulations and the time when Parliament might pass Acts authorizing the Crown to carry the same into execution: And that it is expedient that Her Majesty should from and after the passing of this Act be empowered to carry such treaties into immediate execution:—

It is Enacted,

That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, at all times hereafter, by any Order or Orders in Council, to direct that such treaties or conventions, and all stipulations contained therein, and also all additional stipulations to any former treaties or conventions which Her Majesty may have concluded or may hereafter conclude with any foreign power or state for the more effectual suppression of the slave trade, shall be carried into immediate execution, and for that purpose to declare and direct, in such Orders of Council, that all searches, examinations, detentions, seizures, condemnations, and sales of ships and vessels detained, seized, or captured for any violations of the provision of any such treaties, conventions, or stipulations, shall be legal, and also by any such Order or Orders in Council to establish tribunals for the trying and deciding all questions which may arise under such treaties, conventions, or stipulations, and for the condemnation of any such vessels as aforesaid, and for punishing the violation of any such treaties, conventions, or stipulations, and for adjudging and enforcing the payment of any penalties for any such violation, or to authorize any tribunal which may have been heretofore established to act in relation to the enforcing such treaties, conventions, or stipulations aforesaid, and also to authorize the payment of such bounties as are allowed in any Act or Acts of Parliament now in force or which may hereafter be passed in relation to any such bounties for the suppression of the slave trade to the persons detaining, seizing, or capturing any such vessels; and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty in any such Order or Orders in Council to declare that all clauses and provisions, powers and authorities contained in and all penalties and forfeitures imposed by any Act or Acts of Parliament now in force, or which may be passed in this session of Parliament, for the carrying into execution or giving effect to any treaty, convention, or stipulation heretofore or which may hereafter be made with any foreign power or state, or in any other Act or Acts of Parliament in force for the suppression of the slave trade, as shall be specified or referred to in such Order or Orders in Council, shall be applied and put in force for the purpose of carrying into immediate execution any such treaty, convention, or additional stipulation; and upon the issuing of any such Order or Orders in Council all the directions, powers, and authorities contained therein, and all clauses, provisions, powers, authorities, penalties, and forfeitures referred to in any such order or orders, and contained in any such Act or Acts of Parliament, shall have the same and like force and effect, and all acts, matters, and things done under the authority thereof, and all acts and judgments of any tribunals under the same, shall be valid and effectual, as fully, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been enacted in or done under the authority of an Act of Parliament; and each order of Her Majesty in Council so issued under authority of this Act shall continue in full force and effect until six months after the commencement of that session of Parliament which shall ensue next after the date of the said Order or Orders in Council respectively.

It is Enacted,

I. That from and after the 31st day of August 1844 the issue of promissory notes of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, payable on demand, shall be separated and thenceforth kept wholly distinct from the general banking business of the said governor and company; and the business of and relating to such issue shall be thenceforth conducted and carried on by the said governor and company in a separate department, to be called "The Issue Department of the Bank of England," subject to the rules and regulations hereinafter contained; and it shall be lawful for the court of directors of the said governor and company, if they shall think fit, to appoint a committee or committees of directors for the conduct and management of such Issue Department of the Bank of England, and from time to time to remove the members, and define, alter, and regulate the constitution and powers of such committee, as they shall think fit, subject to any bye laws, rules, or regulations which may be made for that purpose: provided nevertheless, that the said issue department shall always be kept separate and distinct from the banking department of the said governor and company.

That from and after the said 31st of August 1844, the said Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall be released and discharged from the payment of any stamp duty, or composition in respect of stamp duty, upon or in respect of their promissory notes payable to bearer on demand; and all such notes shall thenceforth be and continue free and wholly exempt from all liability to any stamp duty whatsoever.

VIII. That from and after the said 31st of August 1844, the payment or deduction of the annual sum of 120,000*l.*, made by the said governor and company under the provisions of the said Act, 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 98, out of the sums payable to them for the charges of management of the public unredeemed debt, shall cease, and in lieu thereof the said governor and company, in consideration of the privileges of exclusive banking, and the exemption from stamp duties, given to them by this Act, shall, during the continuance of such privileges and such exemption respectively, but no longer, deduct and allow to the public, from the sums now payable by law to the said governor and company for the charges of management of the public unredeemed debt, the annual sum of 180,000*l.*, anything in any Act or Acts of Parliament, or in any agreement, to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that such deduction shall in no respect prejudice or affect the rights of the said governor and company to be paid for the management of the public debt at the rate and according to the terms provided in an Act, 48 Geo. 3. c. 4, intitled, 'An Act to authorize the advancing for the Public Service, upon certain Conditions, a Proportion of the Balance remaining in the Bank of England, for the payment of Unclaimed Dividends, Annuities, and Lottery Prizes, and for regulating the allowances to be made for the management of the National Debt.'

IX. That in case, under the provisions hereinbefore contained, the securities held in the said Issue Department of the Bank of England shall at any time be increased beyond the total amount of 14,000,000*l.*, then and in each and every year in which the same shall happen, and so long as such increase shall continue, the said governor and company shall, in addition to the said annual sum of 180,000*l.*, make a further payment or allowance to the public, equal in amount to the net profit derived in the said issue department during the current year from such additional securities, after deducting the amount of the expenses occasioned by the additional issue during the same period, which expenses shall include the amount of any and every composition or payment to be made by the said governor and company to any banker in consideration of the discounting at any time hereafter of the issue of bank notes by such banker; and such further payment or allowance to the public by the said governor and company shall, in every year while the public shall be entitled to receive the same, be deducted from the amount by law payable to the said governor and company for the charges of management of the unredeemed public debt, in the same manner as the said annual sum of 180,000*l.* is hereby directed to be deducted therefrom.

X. That from and after the passing of this Act no person other than a banker who on the 6th of May 1844, was lawfully issuing his own bank notes shall make or issue bank notes in any part of the United Kingdom.

XI. That from and after the passing of this Act it shall not be lawful for any banker to draw, accept, make, or issue, in England or Wales, any bill of exchange or promissory note or engagement for the payment of money payable to bearer on demand, or to borrow, owe, or take up, in England or Wales, any sums or sum of money on the bills or notes of such banker payable to bearer on demand, save and except that it shall be lawful for any banker who was on the 6th of May 1844, carrying on the business of a banker in England or Wales, and was then lawfully issuing, in England or Wales, his own bank notes, under the authority of a licence to that effect, to continue to issue such notes to the extent and under the conditions hereinafter mentioned, but not further or otherwise; and the right of any company or partnership to continue to issue such notes shall not be in any manner prejudiced or affected by any change which may hereafter take place in the personal composition of such company or partnership, either by the transfer of any shares or share therein, or by the admission of any new partner or member thereto, or by the retirement of any present partner or member therefrom: Provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any company or partnership now consisting of only six or less than six persons to issue bank notes at any time after the number of partners therein shall exceed six in the whole.

XII. That if any banker in any part of the United Kingdom who after the passing of this Act shall be entitled to issue bank notes shall become bankrupt, or shall cease to carry on the business of a banker, or shall discontinue the issue of bank notes, either by agreement with the Governor and Company of the Bank of England or otherwise, it shall not be lawful for such banker at any time thereafter to issue any such notes.

XIII. That every banker claiming under this Act to continue to issue bank notes in England or Wales shall within one month next after the passing of this Act, give notice in writing to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes at their head office in London of such claim, and of the place and name and firm at and under which such banker has issued such notes during the twelve weeks next preceding the 27th of April last; and thereupon the said Commissioners shall ascertain if such banker was on the 6th of May 1844 carrying on the business of a banker, and lawfully issuing his own bank notes in England or Wales, and if it shall so appear, then the said Commissioners shall proceed to ascertain the average amount of the bank notes of such banker which were in circulation during the said period of twelve weeks preceding the 27th day of April last, according to the returns made by such banker in pursuance of the Act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 50, intitled, 'An Act to make further Provision relative to the Returns to be made by Banks of the Amount of their Notes in circulation;' and the said Commissioners or any two of them shall certify under their hands to such banker the said average amount, when so ascertained as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for every such banker to continue to issue his own bank notes after the passing of this Act: Provided, nevertheless, that such banker shall not at any time after the 10th of October 1844 have in circulation upon the average of a period of four weeks, to be ascertained as hereinafter mentioned, a greater amount of notes than the amount so certified.

XIV. Provided and enacted, That if it shall be made to appear to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes that any two or more banks have, by written contract or agreement (which contract or agreement shall be produced to the said Commissioners), become united within the twelve weeks next preceding such 27th of April as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to ascertain the average amount of the notes of each such bank in the manner hereinbefore directed, and to certify the average amount of the notes of the two or more banks so united as the amount which the united bank shall thereafter be authorized to issue, subject to the regulations of this Act.

XV. That the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes shall, at the Time of certifying to any banker such particulars as they are hereinbefore required to certify, also publish a duplicate of their certificate thereof in the next succeeding London Gazette in which the same may be conveniently inserted; and the Gazette in which such publication shall be made shall be conclusive evidence in all courts whatsoever of the amount of bank notes which the banker named in such certificate or duplicate is by law authorized to issue and to have in circulation as aforesaid.

XVI. That in case it shall be made to appear to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, at any time hereafter, that any two or more banks, each such bank consisting of not more than six persons, have, by written contract or agreement (which contract or agreement shall be produced to the said Commissioners), become united subsequently to the passing of this Act, it shall be lawful to the said Commissioners, upon the application of such united bank, to certify, in manner hereinbefore mentioned, the aggregate of the amounts of bank notes which such separate banks were previously authorized to issue, and so from time to time; and every such certificate shall be published in manner hereinbefore directed; and from and after such publication the amount therein stated shall be and be deemed to be the limit of the amount of bank notes which such united bank may have in circulation: Provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any such united bank to issue bank notes at any time after the number of partners therein shall exceed six in the whole.

XVII. That if the monthly average circulation of bank notes of any banker, taken in the manner hereinafter directed, shall at any time exceed the amount which such banker is authorized to issue and to have in circulation under the provisions of this Act, such banker shall in every such case forfeit a sum equal to the amount by which the average monthly circulation, taken as aforesaid, shall have exceeded the amount which such banker was authorized to issue and to have in circulation as aforesaid.

XVIII. That every banker in England and Wales who, after the 10th of October 1844, shall issue bank notes shall on some one day in every week after the 19th of October 1844 (such day to be fixed by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes) transmit to the said Commissioners an account of the amount of the bank notes of such banker in circulation on every day during the week ending on the next preceding Saturday, and also an account of the average amount of the bank notes of such banker in circulation during the same week; and on completing the first period of four weeks, and so on completing each successive period of four weeks, every such banker shall annex to such account the average amount of bank notes of such banker in circulation during the said four weeks, and also the amount of bank notes which such banker is authorized to issue under the provisions of this Act; and every such account shall be verified by the signature of such banker or his chief cashier, or, in the case of a company or partnership, by the signature of a managing director or partner or chief cashier of such company or partnership, and shall be made in the form to this Act annexed marked (B.); and so much of the said return as states the weekly average amount of the notes of such bank shall be published by the said Commissioners in the next succeeding London Gazette in which the same may be conveniently inserted; and if any such banker shall neglect or refuse to render any such account in the form and at the time required by this Act, or shall at any time render a false account, such banker shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* for every such offence.

XIX. That for the purpose of ascertaining the monthly average amount of bank notes of each banker in circulation the aggregate of the amount of bank notes of each such banker in circulation on every day of business during the first complete period of four weeks, next after the 10th of October 1844, such period ending on a Saturday, shall be divided by the number of days of business in such four weeks, and the average so ascertained shall be deemed to be the average of bank notes of each such banker in circulation during such period of four weeks, and so in each successive period of four weeks, and such average is not to exceed the amount certified by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes as aforesaid.

And after reciting that, in order to insure the rendering of true and faithful accounts of the amount of bank notes in circulation, as directed by this Act, it is necessary that the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes should be empowered to cause the books of bankers issuing such notes to be inspected, as hereinafter mentioned;—

It is Enacted,

XX. That all and every the book and books of any banker who shall issue bank notes under the provisions of this Act, in which shall be kept, contained, or entered any account, minute, or memorandum of or relating to the bank notes issued or to be issued by such banker, or of or relating to the amount of such notes in circulation from time to time, or any account, minute, or memorandum the sight or inspection whereof may tend to secure the rendering of true accounts of the average amount of such notes in circulation, as directed by this Act, or to test the truth of any such account, shall be open for the inspection and examination, at all reasonable times, of any officer of stamp duties authorized in that behalf by writing, signed by the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes or any two of them; and every such officer shall be at liberty to take copies of or extracts from any such book or account as aforesaid; and if any banker or other person keeping any such book, or having the custody or possession thereof, or power to produce the same, shall, upon demand made by any such officer, showing (if required) his authority in that behalf, refuse to produce any such book to such officer for his inspection and examination, or to permit him to inspect and examine the same, or to take copies thereof or extracts therefrom, or of or from any such account, minute, or memorandum as aforesaid kept, contained, or entered therein, every such banker or other person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 100*l.*: Provided always, that the said Commissioners shall not exercise the powers aforesaid without the consent of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

XXI. That every banker in England and Wales who is now carrying on or shall hereafter carry on business as such shall on the 1st of January in each year, or within fifteen days thereafter, make a return to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes at their head office in London of his name, residence, and occupation, or, in the case of a company or partnership, of the name, residence, and occupation of every person composing or being a member of such company or partnership, and also the name of the firm under which such banker, company, or partnership carry on the business of banking, and of every place where such business is carried on; and if any such banker, company, or partnership shall omit or refuse to make such return within fifteen days after the said 1st of January, or shall wilfully make other than a true return of the persons as herein required, every banker, company, or partnership so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of 50*l.*; and the said Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes shall on or before the 1st of March in every year publish in some newspaper circulating within each town or county respectively a copy of the return so made by every banker, company, or partnership carrying on the business of bankers within such town or county respectively, as the case may be.

XXII. That every banker who shall be liable by law to take out a licence from the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes to authorise the issuing of notes or bills shall take out a separate and distinct licence for every town or place at which he shall, by himself or his agent, issue any notes or bills requiring such licence to authorize the issuing thereof, anything in any former Act contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: Provided always, that no banker who on or before the 6th of May 1844 had taken out four such licences, which on the said last-mentioned day were respectively in force, for the issuing of any such notes or bills at more than four separate towns or places, shall at any time hereafter be required to take out or to have in force at one and the same time more than four such licences to authorize the issuing of such notes or bills at all or any of the same towns or places specified in such licences in force on the said 6th of May 1844, and at which towns or places respectively such bankers had on or before the said last-mentioned day issued such notes or bills in pursuance of such licences or any of them respectively.

And after reciting that the several bankers named in the Schedule hereto annexed marked (C.) have ceased to issue their own bank notes under certain agreements with the Governor and Company of the Bank of England; and it is expedient that such agreements should cease and determine on the 31st of December next, and that such bankers should receive by way of compensation such composition as hereafter mentioned; and a list of such bankers, and a statement of the maximum sums in respect of which each such banker is to receive compensation, hath been delivered to the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, signed by the chief cashier of the Bank of England:—

It is Enacted,

XXIII. XXV. That all the compositions payable to the several bankers mentioned in the Schedule hereto marked (C.), and such other bankers as shall agree with the said governor and company to discontinue the issue of their own bank notes as aforesaid, shall, if not previously determined by the act of such banker as hereinbefore provided, cease and determine on the 1st of August 1856, or on any earlier day on which Parliament may prohibit the issue of bank notes.

AN ACT for facilitating the Collection of County Rates, and for relieving High Constables from Attendance at Quarter Sessions in certain Cases, and from certain other Duties.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Justices of the Peace shall send precepts directly to guardians of unions for the payment of county rates, &c.—Guardians to pay such rates.—County treasurer to receive the same.
2. If the guardians fail to pay such rates, the Justices may issue warrants to the overseers of parishes, &c. to pay the same.
3. If the overseers, &c. fail to pay, the Justices may levy the rate by distress and sale.
4. Parishes not in arrear with contributions to be reimbursed by those which are in arrear.
5. Justices may issue precepts to the overseers of parishes, &c. not comprised in unions, or only partly within the jurisdiction of the Justices, without the intervention of the high constable.
6. Delivery of precepts, &c. by post, and evidence thereof.
7. Where special sessions are required to be holden notice of the same to be sent to each Justice.
8. High constable now appointed at Quarter Sessions to be appointed at special sessions.—High constables to take only the oath for due execution of their office.
9. Construction of the words "parish," "union," "guardians."

By this Act,

After reciting that the constitution of boards of guardians for parishes and unions of parishes for the administration of the laws for the relief of the poor in England, together with the appointment of treasurers holding funds contributed by such parishes, affords great facility for the collection of county rates, hundred rates, police rates, and other like rates authorized to be levied in counties or parts of counties; and it is expedient to relieve high constables from the duties of collecting and paying to the county treasurer the said rates, and from attending at the Quarter Sessions of the Peace of their several counties in certain cases, and from the performance of certain other duties at present by law imposed on them:—

It is Enacted,

1. That from and after the 1st of October in this present year, so soon as any vacancy occurs in the office of high constable of any hundred, by the expiration of his appointment, or otherwise, then, as often as the Justices of the Peace within the respective limits of their commissions in England have made a county rate or a police rate, or any other rate which may by law be raised in like manner as county rates, or any two or more such rates, such Justices assembled at their general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, shall order precepts in the form shewn in the Schedule annexed to this Act, or as near thereto as may be, to be issued to the guardians of every union of parishes, of which union any parish is situate within such limits, stating the sum or sums assessed and charged for each such rate on each parish in the union, the whole of which parish is situate within such limits, and to the guardians of every single parish situate within such limits, stating the sum or sums assessed and charged on such parish for each such rate, and requiring the guardians of such union or parish respectively, within such time as may be limited in such precepts, to cause the aggregate of the said several sums so stated to be paid by them, out of the monies held by them on behalf of each such parish, to the treasurer of the county or place for which such Justices act, and may cause such precepts to be sent by post, or otherwise, to such guardians; and such precepts shall have force in every such union so far as concerns such parishes as are within the limits of the commission of the said Justices, notwithstanding that the place of meeting of such guardians may not be situated within such limits, and without being indorsed with the signature of any Justice of the Peace having ordinary jurisdiction in the place of meeting of the guardians; and such guardians shall raise the monies required by such precepts to be paid in like manner as the money required by such guardians for the relief of the poor, and shall pay such monies at the time limited and in the manner prescribed by such precepts; and if the treasurer of such guardians, or any person on his or their behalf, tender to the treasurer of the county or place for which such Justices act the aggregate of the said several sums, or if he so tender the whole sum assessed on any such parish or parishes in respect of any such rate or rates, together with a copy of such precept in which are specified the parish or parishes, and the rate or rates, in respect of which the same is so tendered, the treasurer of the county shall receive the sum so tendered, notwithstanding that the sums required to be paid on behalf of other of such parishes or of other of such rates be not then tendered, and shall give a receipt for the sum or sums received by him accordingly, but he shall not receive any sum on behalf of any such parish less than the whole of the sum assessed and charged thereon in respect of one such rate; and the receipt of the treasurer of such county or place shall be a good discharge for the payment of the sums specified in any such precept or of any of them.

II. That in case guardians do not pay within the time limited in such precept the sum or sums of money therein required to be paid on behalf of any parish, the said Justices assembled as aforesaid may cause to be issued and sent, by post or otherwise, to the overseers of the poor of such parish, or to the petty constable or peace officer, or other person or persons empowered in any place to rate and levy the monies assessed as such county, police or other rate, warrants to collect and pay to the treasurer of the county or place in which such Justices act, within a time to be named and limited in such warrants, the rate or rates charged on such parish or place respectively, together with an addition to such rate or rates in the proportion of 1*s*. to every ten; and such additional sum shall be applied and disposed of in like manner as the county rate; and such overseers of the poor, petty constables, peace officers, or other persons may reimburse themselves, as well for such additional sums as for the original amount of rate or rates, out of the monies which they are respectively empowered to rate and levy for the purpose of such county, police, or other rate, but shall not receive or take from the county rate, or any other rate, any allowance or compensation for their trouble or expenses incurred in collecting, levying, or paying such county, police, or other rate.

III. That if any overseer, petty constable, peace officer, or other person as aforesaid refuse, make default or neglect to pay to the treasurer of the county or place, within the time limited as aforesaid, the sum or sums of money specified in the said warrants, and if the clerk of the peace or treasurer of the county or place make complaint thereof, then any Justice of the Peace of such county or place may by warrant under his hand levy the same by distress and sale of the goods of the offender; and the Justices assembled as aforesaid may pay to any clerk, constable, messenger, or other person who may have been employed in making such complaint, or in obtaining, drawing, or executing such warrant, such reasonable compensation out of the county stock as to the said Justices may seem fit.

IV. That in every case where any parish comprised in any union has, on or before the day on which any precept as aforesaid should be obeyed, contributed money sufficient to enable the guardians of the union to pay any sum or sums required by such precept in respect of such parish, as well as to provide for the immediate relief of the poor of such parish, and to satisfy all other obligations of the said guardians in respect of such parish in force on that day, and where, through the default of any other parish or parishes in the same union in contributing money to such guardians, or through the neglect of such guardians to demand sufficient contributions from any other parish or parishes in the same union, the said guardians have applied the money of such first-mentioned parish to the use of such other parish or parishes, and are thereby rendered unable to pay any money so required by such precept on behalf of such first-mentioned parish, and such parish is by reason thereof compelled to pay the additional sum of 1*s*. in every ten as hereinbefore provided, in every such case the guardians of the union shall reimburse such first-mentioned parish such additional sum, and all costs incurred by reason of the premises, out of the monies of such other parish or parishes which may next thereafter come into the hands of such guardians; and in case more than one parish be in default as aforesaid the said guardians shall charge such additional sum and costs to every such parish, in proportion to the amount of the deficiency of the contribution of each parish respectively on the day on which the said precept should have been obeyed.

V. warrant to be sent by post or otherwise; and in case the said overseers, petty constable, peace officer, or other person refuse or neglect to pay any such rate within the time limited in such warrant, the same remedy may be had against them as now by law exists against overseers neglecting to pay on the warrant of the high constable.

And after reciting that it is expedient to relieve high constables, in certain cases, from the duty of attending at the Court of Quarter Sessions:—

viii. That where high constables have heretofore been usually appointed at courts of quarter sessions the high constables of such places shall hereafter be appointed by such Justices as may be present at the special sessions of their division held for the purpose of hearing appeals against the rates of the several parishes in such division, or at any adjournment thereof, but if the hundred or other like division of the county for which any high constable is to be appointed be not included within the limits of any one division of the county for which such special sessions are held, then the Justices of the Peace for the county assembled at general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof, may from time to time determine the division of the special sessions at which such high constable is to be appointed, and shall cause notice of such determination to be sent by post, or otherwise, to the high constable for the time being of such hundred or other like division; and every high constable, whether appointed at a special sessions, or at an adjournment thereof, or at a court leet, or any other special court, shall, if present at the time of his being appointed, then and there take his oath for the due execution of his office, and if otherwise, he shall forthwith, on the receipt of his appointment, go before the next or some other Justice of the Peace for the county in which he resides, and then and there take his said oath of office, and he shall not, in virtue of his office of high constable, be required to take any other oath than the said oath for the due execution of his office.

By this Act,

After reciting the passing of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 42, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 67: And that it is expedient to make further provision for the improvement of prisons and prison discipline in Scotland:—

It is Enacted,

- i. That from and after the commencement of this Act the last-recited Act shall be repealed.
- ii. That so much of the first-recited Act as provides that all the expenses of the General Board of Directors of Prisons in Scotland (excepting the salary of the secretary) shall be defrayed by assessment upon the counties of Scotland, and burghs situated therein, shall from and after the commencement of this Act be repealed.
- iii. That after the present sheriffs of the counties of Edinburgh and Perth (who have been appointed members of the General Board of Directors of Prisons in Scotland by Her Majesty) shall respectively cease to hold their said offices, the sheriff of the county of Edinburgh for the time being and the sheriff of the county of Perth for the time being shall be members of the said general board, in addition to those named or referred to in the first-recited Act; and that of the fourteen persons other than those referred to by their official titles in the first-recited Act, whom Her Majesty is empowered to appoint, as members of the said general board, three only shall necessarily be persons holding or who shall have held the office of sheriff depute, instead of five, as required by the first-recited Act.

And after reciting that doubts exist as to the classification of certain classes of prisoners, as civil or criminal prisoners, and as to the classification and modification of the discipline and treatment of criminal prisoners, under the provisions of the first recited Act, and it is expedient that such doubts be removed:—

It is Enacted,

- iv. That from and after the passing of this Act it shall be in the power of the said general board from time to time to direct the classification of all prisoners as civil or criminal prisoners, in so far as may regard their discipline and treatment in prison, and to direct the classification of criminal prisoners with reference to age, strength, conduct, or other circumstances, and to modify the discipline and treatment in regard to separation or otherwise of any such prisoners or classes of prisoners: Provided always, that a copy of the regulations of the General Board for these purposes shall be transmitted to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, who shall have power to rescind or amend the same in such manner as to him shall seem fit.
- v. That it shall be lawful for the said general board from time to time, by any writing under the hands of five or more of them, which shall be published in the Edinburgh Gazette, and in such other manner as they shall think proper, to make regulations for specifying what description of prisoners shall be received into the said general prison, having regard therein to the principle, so far as the same shall be compatible with the discipline and due management of the said general prison, that all other things being the same, those prisoners whose sentences of imprisonment have the longest time to run shall be preferably received into the prison, and that no prisoner shall be received therein the expiration of whose sentence shall occur within six months from the date of his being so received, and to order and cause to be removed to the said general prison all or any prisoners falling within the description specified in such regulations, but so as in no ways to overcrowd the said general prison: Provided always, that a copy of all such regulations shall be transmitted to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, who shall have power to rescind or amend the same in such manner as to him shall seem fit.
- vi. That while any such regulations shall be in force it shall not be lawful for any criminal court to insert in any sentence of imprisonment an order that any prisoner not within such specification shall be conveyed to or confined in the said general prison, or to order such prisoner to be conveyed to or confined in the said general prison; and any sentence containing any such order shall be effectual only to the extent of authorizing the confinement of the prisoner in the prison in which he would have been legally confined if no such order had been inserted in the sentence of imprisonment.
- vii. That nothing contained in the first-recited Act or this Act shall be taken to preclude any criminal court of competent jurisdiction from sentencing to imprisonment for one year or upwards, in any lawful prison other than the said general prison, any prisoner for whose crime such imprisonment shall be a suitable punishment, and who, according to the regulations of the said General Board, cannot be at that time received into the said general prison.
- viii. That it shall be lawful for the said general board, at any time or times when they may deem it necessary for the proper accommodation of prisoners in the said general prison, to order and cause to be removed from the said general prison to the several local prisons from which they may have been removed such number of prisoners as to the said general board shall appear to be expedient; and such removal shall be made under similar regulations and conducted in the same manner in which the removal of prisoners before the expiration of their sentences from the said general prison to the prison nearest their residence, or in the county where their crimes may have been committed, is by the first-recited Act directed to be made.
- ix. And it is declared and enacted, That all removals of prisoners made by order of the said general board, and also by order of any criminal court, directing any prisoner to be conveyed from the said general prison to any local prison, or from any local prison to the said general prison, or from any one prison to any other prison, may be carried into effect by means of prison officers, or by means of constables or other criminal officers.
- x. That when any criminal shall have been sentenced to imprisonment for any period not less than six months, the clerk of the High Court of Justiciary, if such sentence shall have been pronounced by the said high court, or the clerk of the Circuit Court of Justiciary if such sentence shall have been pronounced by the Circuit Court of Justiciary, or the sheriff clerk of the sheriffdom, if such sentence shall have been pronounced by the Sheriff Court, shall, within eight days after such sentence shall have been pronounced, make a return thereof to the secretary of the General Board of Directors of Prisons in Scotland, which return shall be in the form of the Schedule hereto annexed.
- xi. That sheriffs within their respective sheriffdoms shall have power, upon summary application by the prison board of the county, accompanied by proper and satisfactory medical certificates, to authorize the removal of any civil prisoner or any criminal prisoner undergoing sentence of imprisonment who may be afflicted with any contagious or infectious disease, or any disease which threatens immediate danger to life, and cannot be treated in prison, from any prison within the county to any hospital or other proper place within the same, or to any hospital near the same, for such period and under such precautions for the safe and proper custody of the prisoner, and of his re-imprisonment, as they may direct.

XII. That the provisions made in the first-recited Act relative to the proper custody, treatment, and maintenance of certain insane or lunatic prisoners in a lunatic asylum or otherwise, and the reservation of all competent right of relief of the expenses thereby incurred, shall be extended to all insane or lunatic prisoners; and the provisions made in the first-recited Act and this Act relative to the removal of such prisoners to a lunatic asylum may be carried into effect either by the said general board, or by any county prison board acting under the authority of the said general board; and the said general board shall also have power to order and cause to be removed to the general prison any insane or lunatic prisoners from any lunatic asylum in which they may have been or may be placed under the provisions of the first-recited Act or this Act, or from any local prison: Provided always, that the insanity or lunacy of every such prisoner, if not previously ascertained in a court of law, shall be certified by the certificates on soul and conscience of two or more medical men, being physicians or surgeons, who have personally visited and carefully examined the prisoner.

XIII. And it is declared and enacted, That sheriffs within their respective sheriffdoms shall have the like powers and jurisdictions as have been possessed by magistrates of royal burghs, within their respective burghs, with respect to applications and proceedings for aliment and for liberation of civil prisoners.

XIV. That if any person shall carry or bring, or attempt or endeavour, by throwing over the walls or any other means, to introduce into any prison in Scotland any letters, tobacco, spirits, or other articles not allowed by the rules of such prison, it shall be lawful for any person to apprehend such offender, and to carry him or her before the sheriff or the sheriff substitute of the county, or any two Justices of the Peace of the county, who are hereby empowered to hear and determine such offence in a summary way; and if the person complained of shall be lawfully convicted of such offence, the sheriff, sheriff substitute, or Justices shall forthwith commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding one calendar month, unless such offender shall immediately pay down such sum of money, not exceeding £4. nor less than 40s., as such sheriff, sheriff substitute, or Justices shall impose; and such fine shall be applied towards the expense of such prosecution, and the surplus, if any, towards the maintenance of such prison.

XV. That Orkney and Zetland, with their respective dependencies, shall be taken to be separate counties for the purposes of the first-recited Act and this Act; and the said general board shall be empowered to make such division of the assessments imposed under the first-recited Act on the said county, and of the scale of proportions of assessment falling on Orkney and Zetland, and of the number of members of the county prison board thereof, and to adopt such other measures as they shall deem just and necessary to carry this enactment into effect; and that the property belonging to the crown in Orkney shall be assessed in like manner as the property belonging to other proprietors in the landward part of the said county is assessed for the purposes of the said first-recited Act and this Act.

XVI. That resolutions to form unions, for the purpose of erecting and maintaining local prisons for the joint use of two or more counties, may be entered into by the commissioners of supply of such counties and the magistrates of the burghs in the said counties, either at their respective meetings to elect members of their several county boards in April annually, or at any other meeting between the day of the annual meeting and the 30th of November in any year; and any such resolutions may be carried into effect by such committees as may be agreed upon; and in any case where it shall appear to the general board to be proper, such unions may be formed for the purpose of erecting and maintaining a prison for the custody of all kinds of prisoners; and when any such union shall be formed it shall be lawful for the sheriffs and other magistrates of the counties forming the same to exercise the same jurisdiction with respect to such common prison, and the removal of prisoners to and from the same, as if it were locally situated within the limits of their respective jurisdictions.

XVII. That the first meeting of any county prison board after the annual appointment of members may, instead of being held on the third Wednesday of May, as provided by the first-recited Act, be held on the day on which the meeting of commissioners of supply of such county, usually holden on the 30th of April in each year, is held, provided that notice of such meeting of such county board shall have been given according to the provisions of the said first-recited Act, and such meeting may be adjourned to a future day, if necessary; and at such first meeting the sheriff of such county, or in his absence the sheriff substitute acting at the place where the meeting is held, shall preside until a chairman and convenor shall be elected, and in case of equality of votes previous to such election shall have a double or casting vote; and the said commissioners of supply, and the magistrates and councils of burghs authorized to appoint members of county boards, shall severally have power from time to time to supply any vacancies which may occur in their appointment of persons to form a county board; and it shall be lawful to county boards from time to time to supply any vacancy which may occur in the office of their chairman and convenor; and it shall not be held to invalidate the acts of any county board that any commissioners of supply or magistrates of burghs have failed duly to appoint the several numbers of persons authorized to be appointed by them as members of county boards, but that each county board may act if three members thereof shall assemble: Provided always, that in case of failure as aforesaid, the general board may authorize such commissioners of supply or magistrates to do what may seem to the general board to be expedient for the due execution of the purposes of the first-recited Act and this Act.

XVIII. That the county prison boards shall have the power of dismissing at pleasure all officers of prisons and other persons appointed by them, and shall also have power, subject to the approval of the general board, to make rules for settling apart a portion of the salaries or wages of their officers towards establishing a fund for granting allowances to discharged or retired officers.

XIX. And it is declared and enacted, That the several county prison boards may acquire and hold heritable and moveable property, monies, goods, and effects; and all titles, securities, and investments, and evidences taken for the same, may be taken to the said boards by the name and description of the prison board of the county wherein the same shall be established, without further description; and all such property, monies, goods, and effects which shall have been or may be so taken and vested shall be deemed to be held for the use of such boards for the time being, and shall pass and be transmitted to such boards for the time being, without the necessity of any conveyance or assignment from one board to another; and the said county prison boards may also, for all purposes of civil or criminal action or diligence, or reference or arbitration, institute, defend, or enter into civil or criminal proceedings in the name of such board or of their clerk for the time being; and no such proceedings shall discontinue or abate by any vacancy in any of the said offices, but may be proceeded in to all intents and purposes in the name of the board or clerk for the time being; and no judge or sheriff or sheriff substitute shall be disqualified from acting as such in any such civil or criminal proceedings by reason of being a member of such board.

XX. That it shall be lawful for county prison boards, with the approbation of the said general board, to give up or dispose of any part of the ground or buildings belonging to them which may not be required for their prisons, for the purpose of providing accommodation for courts of justice.

XXI. That it shall be lawful for the said general board to alter, as they shall think just, the scale of proportions of assessment on the several counties, for the purpose of converting the buildings at Perth into a general prison, and of furnishing and completing the same, framed by them in terms of the first-recited Act, according to a combined estimate of the amount of population and crime in such counties, and from time to time frame a new scale or scales of proportions of the said assessment on similar principles, having regard to the then last general account of the population taken by authority of Parliament, and the more recent materials for estimating crime; and also to apportion and divide the whole sums to be assessed upon each county, including the burghs therein, in pursuance of the first-recited Act and this Act, according to the relative population of such burghs, and the landward part of such counties respectively, as determined by such general account of the population, or by any agreements made in pursuance of the first-recited Act or this Act.

XXII. That it shall be in the power of the commissioners of supply of each county, or of each county prison board, with the approbation in the latter case of the general board, to agree that the estimate of the population of any burgh within such county shall, for the purposes of assessment under the first-recited Act and this Act, be diminished by deducting therefrom such amount as to the said commissioners of supply or county prison board may seem expedient; and in case of any such agreement being made by the commissioners of supply, the amount so deducted from the estimate of the population of any burgh shall be added, for the purposes aforesaid, to the estimate of the population of the landward part of such county.

XXIII. That the magistrates and town councils of burghs authorized to choose members of county prison boards may consent to an additional assessment, for building, altering, and repairing local prisons, either at their annual meeting in April for the purpose of choosing such members, or at any meeting to be holden between the annual meeting and the 30th of November in any year.

XXIV. That in case any additional assessment for building, altering, and repairing local prisons in any county shall be consented to by the commissioners of supply of such county on behalf of the landward part thereof, or by the magistrates and town councils of burghs situated therein entitled to choose members of the county prison board on behalf of their respective burghs, and it shall appear that the persons on whose behalf such consent has been given shall have contributed or been liable to contribute not less than three-fourths of the assessments imposed on such several counties and burghs situated therein under the first-recited Act and this Act in the preceding year, it shall be in the power of the said general board, if they shall think fit, to apportion and divide such additional assessment so consented to on behalf of the persons contributing three-fourths of the assessments as aforesaid, in like manner, and as effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been duly consented to by the commissioners of supply of such county and the magistrates and town councils of all the burghs situated therein entitled to choose members of the county prison boards.

XXV. That county prison boards may from year to year fix the amount of assessment upon the several counties and burghs situated therein, to defray the expense of removing prisoners from one local prison to another, the expense of the aliment of prisoners in the county prison, and generally the current expenses of such prisons, at any meeting to be held for that purpose in the month of April or of May annually, if they shall think proper so to do, instead of in the month of September annually, as required by the first-recited Act.

XXVI. That in every case in which an additional assessment for building, altering, or repairing local prisons in any county shall have been consented to and assessed under the provisions of the first-recited Act, it shall be competent for the commissioners of supply of such county and the magistrates of the several burghs therein entitled to choose members of county boards, with consent of the said general board, to alter the distribution of such assessment, so as to distribute the same over a greater number of years, but not exceeding those which may have to elapse before the expiration of the first-recited Act as extended by this Act; and in every case in which an additional assessment for building, altering, or repairing local prisons shall be consented to under the provisions of the first-recited Act and this Act, it shall be competent for the said general board, with concurrence of the parties consenting to such assessment, to distribute the same over any number of years that shall be agreed upon, not exceeding those which may have to elapse before the expiration of the first-recited Act as extended by this Act.

And after reciting that by the first-recited Act power was given to the commissioners of supply of any county to assess the sums annually apportioned on the landward part of such county, according to the real annual value of the whole lands and other subjects there specified, or in any other manner in use in such county, for any general assessment therein for any public purpose, and it was provided that any valuation required to be made in order to such assessment should from time to time, at intervals of not less than three years, be made by and under the direction and at the expense of such commissioners: And that such frequent re-valuations of whole counties will be attended with much expense, and may be unnecessary:—

It is Enacted,

XXVII. That in future it shall not be compulsory on the commissioners of supply to make fresh valuations at intervals of not less than three years, but that the commissioners of supply shall at intervals of not less than three years take into consideration the valuation then last made, and any objections that may be stated thereto, and it shall be competent for the said commissioners of supply, at such intervals, and as often as they shall deem necessary, to cause a new valuation to be made, either of the whole county or of any part or parts thereof, or to cause the last valuation to be corrected in any particulars in which it be found to be erroneous or defective.

XXVIII. That it shall be lawful for the commissioners of supply of any county to exempt from the annual assessment to be levied from the landward part of such county all and every property the annual value of which shall not exceed 2*l.* sterling, provided the proprietor of such property shall not be possessed of property exceeding the annual value of 2*l.* in the whole within the landward part of such county liable to be assessed for such annual assessment.

And after reciting that doubts are entertained as to the interpretation of the expression "Property" in burghs, in the construction of the first-recited Act;—

It is Enacted,

XXIX. That in the construction of the said Act "property" in burghs shall extend to and include houses, shops, warehouses, mills, manufactories, cellars, canals, railways, gardens, yards, and all lands, buildings, and pertinents thereof.

XXX. That the first-recited Act as amended by this Act shall continue in force until the 1st of January 1861, and from thence to the end of the then next session of Parliament.

XXXI. Provided and enacted, That the assessment not exceeding 2,000*l.* in any one year, for the purpose of raising the sum of 20,000*l.* mentioned in the said first-recited Act to be paid by the different counties of Scotland and burghs situated therein, shall not, from and after the determination of the assessment made for the current year, exceed the sum of 1,200*l.* in any succeeding year during the continuance of the said Act as extended by this Act.

XXXII. That this Act shall commence on the 1st of September 1844, except in so far as herein otherwise directed, and shall continue in force for the period during which the first-recited Act as amended by this Act shall be in force, and shall be taken to be part thereof, and be construed in like manner therewith, and shall be held to alter or repeal the same in so far as the same is at variance or inconsistent with the provisions of this Act: Provided always, that all assessments which shall have been made, or which according to the provisions of the said recited Act should have been made, before the said 1st of September 1844, shall be levied and applied in the manner and for the purposes by the said Act directed.

1. The terms and conditions upon which Parliamentary aid has been given towards the building of schools secured upon the site.
2. The terms upon which aid shall be granted to trustees of ancient endowed schools.
3. Death of donor within twelve calendar months not to avoid grant.
4. Site may be granted to the minister and churchwardens.
5. Rector, vicar, or perpetual curate may grant to the minister and churchwardens, or to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of his parish.
6. Act may be altered this session.

By this Act,

After reciting that during several years last past divers sums of money have been granted by Parliament to Her Majesty, to be applied for the purpose of promoting the education of the poor in Great Britain, and similar grants may hereafter be made; And that Her Majesty hath appointed a committee of her Council to receive applications for assistance from such grants, and to report thereon, and to advise her as to the terms and conditions upon which such assistance shall be granted, and many such reports have been made, and approved of by Her Majesty, and the terms and conditions have been assented to by the applicants, grants have been made out of the said fund: And that in some cases, by reason of the deeds of endowment of schools in respect of which such applications have been received having been executed before the grant has been made, such terms and conditions have not and cannot be made permanently binding on the estate; but the parties promoting the said schools have entered into personal obligations or assurances for the due performance of such terms and conditions, though deriving no beneficial interest from the charitable institution which they have established; and it is desirable to provide permanent security to Her Majesty and her successors for the due fulfilment of the terms and conditions, and to relieve the parties from the personal liabilities so entered into for the purpose aforesaid:—

It is Enacted,

I. That where any grant hath been made or shall hereafter be made out of any sums of money heretofore granted or hereafter to be granted by Parliament for the purposes of education in Great Britain, under the advice of any committee of the Council on Education for the time being, upon terms and conditions to provide for the inspection of the school by an inspector appointed or to be appointed by Her Majesty and her successors, which shall not be inserted in the conveyance of the site of the school, or in the deed declaring the trusts thereof, and such grant shall be made in aid of the purchase of the site, or of the erection, enlargement, or repair of the school, or of the residence of the master or mistress thereof, or of the furnishing of the school, such terms and conditions shall be binding and obligatory upon the trustees or managers of the said school or other the premises for the time being, in like manner and to the like effect as though they had been inserted in the conveyance of the site of the said school, or in the declaration of the trusts thereof; and henceforth all personal obligations entered into for the purpose of securing the fulfilment of such terms and conditions shall, so far as they relate thereto, but no further, be null and void: Provided, nevertheless, that such terms and conditions shall have been or shall be set forth in some document in writing, signed by the trustees of the said school or the major part of them, or by the party or parties conveying the site, in the case where there shall have been a voluntary gift thereof.

And after reciting that there are many endowments for the purpose of education of the poor in Great Britain of ancient date, the schools whereon have become dilapidated, and, the funds of such endowment being insufficient for the restoration thereof, application is made by the trustees, or by the persons acting in the discharge of the trusts thereof, for aid out of the said Parliamentary grant, but the same hath been declined, because such applicants could not impose upon their lawful successors in the said trust the conditions which the said committee would have advised Her Majesty to require to secure the due inspection of such schools, and it is expedient to enable them to do so:—

It is Enacted,

II. That where the major part of the trustees of any endowed school for the education of the poor duly appointed under the terms of the deed of endowment, or, when such deed cannot be found or cannot be acted upon, of the persons who shall be in the possession of the endowment, and shall be acting in the execution of the trusts or the reputed trusts thereof, shall, and in cases where there shall be a visitor of such school with the consent of such visitor in writing, apply for aid out of such Parliamentary grant to enable them to rebuild, repair, or enlarge the school belonging to such endowment, or the residence of the master or mistress thereof, or to furnish such school, and shall in writing assent to the said school being open to inspection on behalf of Her Majesty and her successors, if the said committee shall deem fit to advise that any such grant shall be made, it shall immediately after the making of such grant, and thenceforth from time to time, be lawful for any inspector of schools appointed by Her Majesty and her successors, in conformity with the terms contained in the writing testifying such consent as aforesaid, to enter the said school at all reasonable hours in the day for the purpose of inspecting and examining the state and condition of the school and the scholars thereat, and of making such report thereon as he shall deem fit.

And after reciting that by an Act of 5 Victoria, intituled, 'An Act to afford further Facilities for the Conveyance and Endowment of Sites for Schools,' it is enacted, that any person, being seised in fee simple, fee tail, or for life of and in any manor, or lands of freehold, copyhold, or customary tenure, may grant, convey, or enfranchise, and subject to the provisions therein mentioned, any quantity not exceeding one acre of land as a site for a school or otherwise, as therein likewise specified; and it is desirable to prevent any such grant, being of so limited an interest, from being defeated by the death of the grantor:—

It is Enacted,

III. That where any deed shall have been or shall be executed under the powers and for the purposes contained in the said Act, without any valuable consideration, the same shall be and continue valid, if otherwise lawful, although the donor or grantor shall die within twelve calendar months from the execution thereof.

And after reciting that it was provided by the said Act that grants of land or buildings, or any interest therein, for the purposes of the education of poor persons, might be made to the minister of any parish, being a corporation, and the churchwardens or chapelwardens and overseers of the poor and their successors, and it is sometimes found inexpedient or impracticable to introduce the overseers as parties to the legal estate:—

It is Enacted,

IV. That such grants may be made to the minister and churchwardens of any parish, such minister being the rector, vicar, or perpetual curate thereof, whether endowed or not, to hold to them and their successors, subject to the provisions contained in the deed of conveyance thereof for the management, direction, and inspection of the school and premises.

V. That if the rector, vicar, or perpetual curate of any parish shall be desirous of making a grant of any land for the purposes and under the powers of the said Act, being part of the glebe or other possessions of his benefice, and shall, with the consent of the patron of the said benefice, and of the bishop of the diocese within which the same shall be situated, grant the same to the minister and church or chapel wardens, or to the minister, church or chapel wardens, and overseers of the poor of the said parish, such grant shall be valid, and shall thenceforth enure for the purposes of the trust set forth therein, if otherwise lawful, notwithstanding such minister is the party making the grant.

VI. That this Act may be altered by any other Act in this session of Parliament.

CAP. XXXVIII.—IRELAND.

AN ACT to amend an Act of the last Session, to consolidate and amend the Laws for the Regulation of Charitable Loan Societies in Ireland.

(19th July 1844.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Recovery of amounts due to loan societies on notes or securities.
2. Application of the enactments, &c. of the recited Act to the Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution.

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall and may be lawful for the treasurer, secretary, or clerk of any loan society in Ireland, whose rules have been duly certified under the said recited Act, to recover in a summary way, before one or more of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace in Ireland, in the manner prescribed by the said recited Act, the amount due upon any note or security made or entered into prior to the date of the certificate of the secretary of the Loan Fund Board entitling such society to the benefit of the said recited Act, and in conformity with the laws applicable to such note or security at the time of making the same, although such note or security be not in the form or on the paper provided by the Loan Fund Board; and all and every the remedies and provisions in the said recited Act contained for or relating to the recovery and enforcing payment of notes and securities made under the authority of the said Act, and of fines and costs incurred in relation to the same, shall extend to and be applied to the recovery and enforcing payment of all and every such notes and securities so made and entered into in conformity to the laws in force, and applicable thereto as aforesaid, prior to the date of such certificate, and of all fines and costs incurred or to be incurred in relation thereto.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act it was provided, that nothing therein contained should extend or be construed or taken to authorize any interference on the part of the said Loan Fund Board, or the secretary or officers thereof, in the affairs of the London Charitable Association, commonly called "The Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution," or of any trustees or agents thereof, or of any institution or society in Ireland which was or should be established in connexion with the said Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution; and various provisions were in the said Act contained in reference to the said Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution: And that subsequently to the passing of the said Act the said Institution has been incorporated by Her Majesty's letters patent, under the name of "The Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution," and it may be doubted whether the provisions in the said Act contained apply to the said incorporated society:—

It is Enacted,

II. That all and singular the enactments, provisions, stipulations, and exemptions in the said recited Act contained in reference to the said charitable association, and the secretary, trustees, agents, or officers thereof, and the institutions or societies of persons instituted or associated together in Ireland by or in connexion therewith, and the monies, implements, goods, and effects of the said association, shall extend and be applicable to the said corporation of the Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution, and the secretary, trustees, agents, and officers thereof, and the institutions or societies of persons which now are or hereafter may be instituted or associated together in Ireland by or in connexion therewith, and the monies, implements, goods, and effects of the said corporation, and that as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same were here fully and at length repeated, and the name of the said incorporated society were substituted for the name of the said charitable association: Provided always, that in lieu of the lists, descriptions, specifications, notices, and certificates, required by the said Act to be under the hand and seal of the chairman, and countersigned by the secretary or manager of the said charitable association, it shall be sufficient that such lists, descriptions, specifications, notices, and certificates shall be sealed with the corporate seal of the said incorporated society; and all such lists, descriptions, specifications, notices, and certificates, so sealed with such corporate seal, shall have the same force and effect in all respects as is by the said Act given to lists, descriptions, specifications, notices, and certificates under the hand and seal of the chairman, and countersigned by the secretary or manager of the said charitable association; and such certificate, so sealed with the said corporate seal, shall be evidence, before all Judges and Justices, and in all courts, of the facts therein certified, without further proof thereof, and it shall not be necessary to prove the sealing of such certificates: Provided also, that in all cases where lists, descriptions, or specifications shall have been sent by the said Irish Reproductive Loan Fund Institution, under the provisions of the said recited Act, to the secretary of the Loan Fund Board in Dublin, of any trustees or agents of the said society, authorized to act in relation to the affairs of the said institution in Ireland, or of any loan societies in connexion therewith, it shall not be necessary for the said incorporated society to send any further or additional lists, descriptions, or specifications thereof.

III. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this present session of Parliament.

CAP. XXXIX.

AN ACT to exempt from the Payment of Property Tax the Dividends on certain Annuities of Three Pounds Ten Shillings per Centum per Annum payable for the Quarter of the Year ending the Tenth Day of October One thousand eight hundred and forty-four.

(19th July 1844.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENT.

1. No deduction for Property Tax shall be made on dividends payable on 10th October 1844.

By this Act,

After reciting that by 7 Vict. c. 5, it is provided, that every proprietor or proprietors of the said 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities the dividends and interest on which are payable the 5th of January and the 5th of July shall receive the dividend due thereupon for the half year up to the 5th of July 1844, and shall also receive one quarter's dividend thereon up to the 10th of October 1844, and no longer: And that the Property Tax payable under the authority of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, on such 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities, was assessed and paid on the half year's dividend and interest on the same which became payable on the 5th of July 1842; and if no change in the period of payment of the half yearly dividends and interest on the said annuities had taken place the sixth half-yearly dividend on the same would have become payable on the 5th of January 1845, but which sixth half-yearly dividend will, under the provisions of the above-recited Act, become payable on the annuities of 3*l.* 5*s.* per centum per annum granted in lieu thereof on the 5th of April 1845; it is deemed just and fitting to exempt from the assessment and payment of Property Tax the quarter's dividend on the said 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum per annum annuities which will be payable on the 10th of October 1844, provided the party or parties holding the said 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities shall not have notified or shall not notify, within the periods prescribed by the Act, their dissent to the conversion of the said annuities into 3*l.* 5*s.* per centum annuities:—

It is Enacted,

That no assessment or deduction for Property Tax shall be made at the Bank of England, or at the Bank of Ireland, on the payment of the quarter's dividend which will become due and payable on the 10th of October 1844, on the said 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities, under the provisions of the before-recited Act passed in the present session of Parliament, intituled 'An Act for transferring certain Annuities of Three Pounds Ten Shillings per Centum per Annum and Government Debentures into Annuities of Three Pounds Five Shillings per Centum per Annum and new Three Pounds per Centum Annuities,' to such party or parties holding the same as shall not have notified or shall not notify, within the periods prescribed by the said Act, their dissent to the conversion of such 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities into 3*l.* 5*s.* per centum annuities: Provided always, that in case the said quarter's dividend payable on the 10th of October 1844 shall have been paid, without deduction of Property Tax, on any amount of 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities, the proprietor or proprietors of which shall afterwards signify their dissent to the conversion of the said annuities into 3*l.* 5*s.* per centum annuities, within the period prescribed by the before-recited Act, it shall be lawful to deduct the same amount of Property Tax which would have been deducted if the dissent of the party had been notified previously to the 10th of October 1844 from the amount of principal money to be paid to the proprietor or proprietors of the said 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum annuities, whenever such principal shall be paid to them in consequence of their subsequent dissent.

CAP. XL.

It is Enacted,

That all the said turnpike Acts which but for this Act would expire on or before the said 1st of August 1844, or the end of the then next session of Parliament, except the Acts excepted in the first-recited Act, shall be continued until the 1st of August 1845, and to the end of the then session of Parliament.

That all provisions, powers, regulations, and enactments in the said last-mentioned Act contained shall be construed and taken to extend and be applicable to the Isle of Man, so far as relates to the articles of corn, grain, meal, and flour: Provided always, that whenever in the said last-mentioned Act any notice, order, or appointment is directed to be published in the London or Dublin Gazettes respectively, it shall be necessary that any such notice, order, or appointment in respect of any warehouse in the Isle of Man shall be published in the London and Dublin Gazettes.

It is Enacted,

the said rules and regulations shall attach upon all goods so brought into the said isle contrary to the said rules and regulations, or any of them, and upon all persons committing any breach of any such rule or regulation; and such penalties and forfeitures shall and may be recovered in the same manner as any penalty or forfeiture may be recovered by any Act relating to the Customs.

And after reciting that by the aforesaid Act for the warehousing of goods it was enacted, that no goods should be exported from the warehouse to the Isle of Man, except such goods as might be imported into the said island with licence of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Customs, and in virtue of any such licence first obtained: And that it is expedient that such prohibition should be repealed:—

It is Enacted,

x. That so much of the last-mentioned Act as is lastly hereinbefore recited shall be repealed.

xi. That goods warehoused in the United Kingdom may be removed from such warehouses into any port in the Isle of Man, under such security and under such regulations and conditions as are set forth in the said last-mentioned Act with respect to the removal of warehoused goods from one warehousing port to another warehousing port in the United Kingdom, save and except so far as the said last-mentioned regulations apply to the warehousing such goods at their port of destination.

xii. That nothing herein contained shall be deemed or construed to affect the laws and regulations now in force respecting duties and drawbacks of Excise on goods exported or to be exported to the Isle of Man.

xiii. That any sugar upon which any bounty shall have been allowed under any Act relating to the Customs may be removed to the Isle of Man.

xiv. That before any such sugar shall be removed to the Isle of Man the person removing the same shall give bond to Her Majesty, with one sufficient surety, that the same shall be duly landed in the Isle of Man, and shall not be re-landed in any part of the United Kingdom.

xv. That it shall not be lawful to carry any goods, not being of the growth, produce, or manufacture of the Isle of Man or of the United Kingdom, except corn, grain, meal, or flour, in any ship, from the Isle of Man to any port or place in the United Kingdom.

xvi. That it shall not be lawful to import or bring into the Isle of Man any sugar or rum other than that enumerated and described in the table of duties hereinbefore contained.

xvii. 17. Act may be amended this session.

By this Act,

After reciting, that, by certain Acts of the Parliament of Scotland provision is made for disjoining large parishes and building and erecting new churches; and in particular by an Act passed in the Parliament of Scotland, in the Year 1707, c. 9, intitled, 'Act anent Plantation of Kirks, and Valuation of Teinds,' the lords of council and session are empowered, authorized, and appointed to judge, cognosce, and determine in all affairs and causes whatsoever, which, by the laws and Acts of Parliament of the Kingdom of Scotland were formerly referred to and did pertain and belong to the jurisdiction and cognizance of the Commissioners formerly appointed for the plantation of kirks and valuation of teinds, as fully and freely in all respects as the said Lords do or may do in other civil causes; and particularly, inter alia, "to disjoin too large Paroches, to erect and build new churches, to annex and dismember churches, as they shall think fit, conform to the rules laid down and powers granted by the 19th Act of the Parliament 1633, the 23rd and 30th Acts of the Parliament 1690, and the 24th Act of the Parliament 1693, in so far as the same stand unrepealed; the transporting of kirks, disjoining of too large paroches, or erecting and building of new kirks, being always with the consent of the heritors of three parts of four at least of the valuation of the paroch whereof the kirk is craved to be transported, or the paroch to be disjoined and new kirks to be erected and built;" And that it is expedient to afford facilities and to make further provision for the disjoining or dividing of extensave or populous parishes:—

It is Enacted,

I. That from and after the passing of this Act so much of the said recited Act as requires the consent of the heritors of three parts of four at least of the valuation of the parish whereof the kirk is craved to be transported, or the parish to be disjoined and new kirks to be erected and built, shall be repealed; and that the consent of the heritors of a major part of the valuation of any parish shall be necessary and sufficient in all cases in which the consent of the heritors of three parts of four of the valuation of such parish was required by the said recited Act, except where otherwise hereinafter expressly provided.

II. And it is enacted and declared, That a parish may be deemed and held to be too large, and may, as such, be disjoined or divided under the provisions of the said recited Act as altered and amended by this Act, by reason of the largeness of the population of such parish, although the superficial measurement thereof may not be too large for one parish.

III. That it shall not be a valid objection to the competency of any process which shall be brought for disjoining or dividing a parish or parishes, and erecting a new kirk or kirks, under the provisions of the said recited Act as altered and amended by this Act, that the consent of the heritors of a major part of the valuation of the parish to be disjoined or divided had not been given previous to such process having been brought into court; and it shall be lawful for the lords of council and session before whom any such process shall have been brought to appoint special intimation thereof to be made, in such form and manner as the said lords of council and session shall direct, to such of the heritors of the valuation of the parish as shall not have already either given their consent or judicially stated their dissent, and to sist proceedings in such process for a definite time, for the purpose of allowing such heritors to state judicially their consent or their dissent; and such of them as shall not within a time to be fixed by the said lords of council and session, and to be specified in such intimation as aforesaid, judicially state their dissent, shall, in computing the statutory proportion of consents, be reckoned as consenting heritors.

IV. That if, in any process for disjoining or dividing a parish, it shall be shewn to the satisfaction of the lords of council and session that there is already built or erected and in good repair a church or place of worship suitable for the church of the new parish proposed to be erected, and capable of being lawfully appropriated to that purpose, whereby the expense of erecting a new or additional church will not be incurred by the heritors, and that the titulars or others having right to the teinds out of which is to be paid not less than three-fourths of the additional stipend or stipends to be modified by reason of such disjunction or division have consented thereto, or have stated no objection thereto, after due intimation by direction of the lords of council and session to them given, it shall be lawful and competent for the said lords and council of session to allow such process to proceed, and to give judgment and decree therein, if, upon consideration of the whole case, it shall appear to them that there are good and sufficient reasons for so doing, although the heritors of a major part of the valuation of the parish to be disjoined or divided may not have consented.

V. That when any parish or parishes shall have been disjoined or divided, and a new parish erected, under the provisions of the said recited Act as altered and amended by this Act, the patronage of such new parish shall belong to the patron of the original parish from which the same has been disjoined or divided; or if the new parish has been disjoined or divided from more than one parish having different patrons, the patronage of such new parish shall belong to the patrons of the parishes from which the same has been disjoined or divided, and shall be exercised by them, either jointly or in a certain order of rotation as may have been agreed upon by them, or failing of such agreement, then their respective interests in the right of patronage, and the manner of exercising the same, shall be fixed by the lords of council and session, and in either case shall be set forth in a judgment to be pronounced by the said lords of council and session in the process for erecting such new parish: Provided always, that such patron or patrons of the original parish or parishes from which the new parish has been disjoined or divided shall undertake to bear the burden of not less than one-half of the stipend to be provided to the minister of such new parish: Provided also, that no patron of any of the original parishes, who shall not bear the burden of one-fourth part of the stipend of the minister of the new parish, shall have any right or interest in the patronage of such new parish by virtue of his right of patronage in such original parish; and in every case in which the patron or patrons of the original parish or parishes shall not bear the burden of not less than one-half of the stipend to be provided to the minister of the new parish the patronage of such new parish, and the right of presentation to the kirk thereof, shall belong to the person if there be only one such person, or to the persons alternately if there are more than one and not more than three such persons, who shall bear the burden of the whole stipend provided for the minister of such new parish at the erection thereof, and to the heirs of such person or persons; and if the persons who bear the burden of such stipend shall exceed three in number, then the patronage of such new parish, and the right of presentation to the kirk thereof, shall be vested in and be exercised by three trustees, or, in case of difference of opinion, by the majority of three trustees, who shall be chosen for their respective lives in manner following: (that is to say,) the three trustees first chosen shall be elected by a majority of votes at a meeting of the heritors of such new parish, and of the persons who are liable in payment of stipend to the minister thereof, or who have contributed the sum of *£*1. towards the fund out of which any part of the stipend is provided, or towards the expense of providing the church for such new parish; and upon the death, disability, or resignation of any of the trustees so chosen, another trustee in his place shall be elected for life by the heritors and kirk session of the parish; and as often as any vacancy shall happen by the death, disability, or resignation of any trustee, his place shall be supplied in like manner by another trustee, to be elected for life by the heritors and kirk session of the parish: Provided always, that no person shall be qualified to hold the office of trustee who is not a member of the church of Scotland in full communion therewith.

And after reciting that in some large and populous parishes which it may be considered necessary or proper to divide into two or more parishes there are a number of poor persons, the greater portion of whom reside in or near the same locality, such locality being sometimes the least wealthy, whereby the particular territorial division of such large and populous parish, which would be most expedient and advantageous in other respects, would operate injuriously or unjustly if each of the new parishes into which it may be divided was left to provide from its own resources for that portion of the poor of the original parish resident within the territory of such new parish:—

It is Enacted,

vi. That it shall be lawful for the said lords of council and session, if they see cause so to do in any judgment to be by them pronounced dividing or disjoining a parish, to declare and provide, that, notwithstanding such division or disjunction, the original parish and the several new or separate parishes thereby erected within the bounds thereof shall, in so far as regards the support and management of the poor, and all matters and questions connected therewith, remain and be regarded as one parish; and in every such case there shall be one kirk session, consisting of the members of the kirk sessions of all the parishes within the bounds of the original parish, in all matters and questions relating to the support and management of the poor; and the session clerk of the original parish shall, during his incumbency, act as clerk of the said kirk session in all such matters and questions.

vii. That no division of any parish shall affect the law and practice already existing in such parish as to the management of roads, or as to the levying or applying the statute labour or conversion of statute labour within the bounds of the original parish so divided, but the same shall continue to be managed, levied, and applied as if no such division had taken place unless it shall be considered expedient by the county or district trustees for the conversion of the statute labour to make a new arrangement for allocating the management of the roads and statute labour, or conversion money, in reference to the alteration of circumstances consequent on such division of the parish as aforesaid.

viii. That if any person or persons shall, at his, her, or their expense, have built or shall have acquired, or shall have undertaken to build or acquire, a church, and shall have endowed or shall have undertaken to endow the same, it shall be competent for the lords of council and session, acting in their capacity aforesaid of Commissioners for the plantation of kirks and valuation of teinds, and they are hereby empowered and authorized, on the application of such person, or of such persons where they do not exceed five in number, or of two-thirds or any ten of such persons where they do exceed five in number, and without any concurrence of heritors, to inquire into the circumstances, and to erect such church into a parish church in connexion with the church of Scotland, and to mark out and designate a district to be attached thereto quoad sacra, and to disjoin such district quoad sacra from the parish or parishes to which the same, or any part thereof, may have belonged or been attached, and to erect such district into a parish quoad sacra in connexion with the church of Scotland; and it shall and may be lawful for the minister and elders of such parish to have and enjoy the status and all the powers, rights, and privileges of a parish minister and elders of the church of Scotland: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed so as to deprive any party who has a legal interest in the fabric of any place of worship of any right which by law belongs to such party to prevent such place of worship from being used or appropriated for a place of worship in connexion with the church of Scotland: Provided also, that due intimation of every such application as aforesaid shall be made to all parties having interest, that they may have an opportunity of appearing and being heard; which intimation may be made by notice in the Edinburgh Gazette, or by advertisement in one or more Edinburgh newspapers of general circulation, or in any other form or manner that may be directed by the lords of council and session in any act or acts of sederunt, or any order to be made by them for that purpose: And provided also, that the titles to the said church shall be taken and conceived so as that the said church shall be inalienably secured as the church of the said new parish in connexion with the church of Scotland, and that due provision shall be made for the future maintenance of the fabric of the said church; and that the endowment for the minister of the said new parish shall be not less than a stipend of 100*l.* per annum, or seven chalders of oatmeal, to be calculated at the highest fiars of the county, exclusive of the sum necessary for communion elements, with a suitable dwelling house or manse and offices and appurtenances, or a stipend of not less than 120*l.* or eight and a quarter chalders of oatmeal, to be calculated at the highest fiars of the county per annum, where there shall be no such dwelling house or manse; and that such stipend of not less than 100*l.*, or not less than 120*l.*, shall be permanently provided and secured in all time coming for the minister of the said parish; and that if there shall be a dwelling house or manse, the title to such dwelling house or manse and offices and appurtenances shall be taken and conceived so that such dwelling house or manse and offices and appurtenances shall be inalienably secured as the dwelling house or manse and offices and appurtenances for the minister of the said parish; and that due provision shall be made for the future maintenance of the fabric of such dwelling house or manse and offices and appurtenances, all to the satisfaction of the said lords of council and session; and the right of presbyteries to present to vacant parishes jure devoluto, according to the law of Scotland, shall have place in regard to all parishes erected quoad sacra as aforesaid, in the same manner as in regard to other parishes.

IX. That in every such church as aforesaid a portion of the sittings therein, to be determined by the sheriff of the county in which such church is situated, and not exceeding one-tenth of the whole sittings, shall be set apart as free seats for all persons frequenting the same; and another portion of the sittings therein, not exceeding one-fifth of the whole sittings, shall be let at rents not exceeding a rate to be fixed by the presbytery of the bounds; and the remaining portion of the sittings may be let in such manner as shall be agreed upon by the minister for the time being, and the person or persons liable for the repair of the church and for the stipend of the minister, or in case of not agreeing, then in such manner as shall be determined by the sheriff of the county as aforesaid: Provided always, that one pew shall be appropriated, rent-free, for the accommodation of the family of the minister, and another pew for the officiating elders; and the pew or seat rents of any such church as aforesaid may be expended and applied for the purpose of defraying the necessary expenses of a precentor, a beadle or kirk officer, and other expenses necessarily incurred in dispensing the ordinances of religion therein, and not otherwise provided for, and for the purpose of upholding in due repair and improving the fabric of such church, or of the dwelling house and offices of the minister, or for the relief of any person or persons who may have undertaken or become liable to uphold the same, or who may be liable for the endowment or stipend provided and secured for the minister of such church; and it shall be lawful to make collections at the door of any such church for any of the purposes aforesaid: Provided also, that the sum received by any person liable to uphold the church or dwelling-house, or liable for the endowment or stipend as aforesaid, shall not in any year exceed the sum paid or expended by such person in the same year by reason of such liability.

X. That it shall and may be lawful for any heir or for any heir of entail in Scotland, trustee, tutor, and curator of minors, and every person lawfully empowered to act for persons under any legal disability or incapacity, to give and grant heritably and irredeemably such land or heritage belonging to them or under their management as may be necessary for the site of such church, dwelling-house, and offices as aforesaid, and also a portion or portions of land near the same for a churchyard or for a glebe, and not exceeding in the whole four acres; which portion or portions of land shall, at the sight of the sheriff of the county wherein the same is situated, or of some person appointed by the sheriff for that purpose, be marked out and set apart as the churchyard and as the glebe to belong to such new parish in all time coming, and having been so given, granted, marked out, and set apart, shall not be liable to or affected by any other rights, titles, trusts, interests, or incumbrances to, in, or upon the same whatsoever; and such heir of entail shall not thereby be subject to nor incur any forfeiture or irritancy under any deed of entail by virtue of which he or she may hold the said land or heritage; and such trustee, tutor, or curator, or other person as aforesaid, shall be indemnified for what he may do in the premises: Provided always, that the power hereby given to any heir of entail, trustee, tutor, and curator of minors, and every person lawfully empowered to act for persons under legal disability or incapacity, shall not in any case extend to or be understood to comprehend a power of giving and granting any lands or heritages within half a mile of the manor place in the natural possession of the proprietor, or of giving and granting any or any part of any gardens, orchards, or inclosures adjacent to the manor place which have usually been in the natural possession of the proprietor, or have not been usually let for a longer term than seven years, when the heir in possession was of lawful age, and not under any legal disability or incapacity: Provided also, that no such grant as aforesaid by any heir of entail in possession, or by any trustee, tutor, curator, or other person lawfully empowered to act as aforesaid for any such heir of entail, shall be effectual, unless the heir of entail nearest in succession, of lawful age, and not under any legal disability or incapacity, shall have consented to such grant, which consent may be given by letter or other writing under the hand of such heir of entail nearest in succession, and shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said sheriff of the county: Provided also, that no trustee, tutor, or curator of minors, or person lawfully empowered to act for persons under legal disability or incapacity, shall make any such grant as aforesaid without adequate consideration for the same either in price or feu duty, the adequacy of which consideration shall be proved to the satisfaction of the said sheriff of the county before the portion or portions of land shall be marked out or set apart as aforesaid.

XI. That it shall and may be lawful for any heir of entail in Scotland to burden the lands and estate of which he or she is in possession as heir of entail aforesaid, lying within any district to be marked out and designated as aforesaid, or to give security over the same for the annual payment out of the clear yearly rents and profits of the said lands and estate of any sum not exceeding 3*l.* per cent. of such clear yearly rents and profits, after deducting all prior burdens and provisions, as the same shall be ascertained by an average of the five years immediately preceding such burden or security, and in no case exceeding the yearly sum of 120*l.*, for the purpose of endowing or contributing to the endowment of such new parish as aforesaid; and also to burden such lands and estate or give security over the same for upholding in due repair the fabric of the church of such new parish, and the dwelling-house and offices of the minister, or any of them: the sums to be expended in such repairs not exceeding in any one year 1*l.* per cent. on the amount of money originally expended in building or purchasing and completing such church, or upon the estimated value thereof, when received and recognized as the church of such new parish, and 1*l.* per cent. on the amount of money originally expended in building or purchasing and completing such dwelling-house and offices, or upon the estimated value thereof; and such heir of entail shall not, by reason of such acting as aforesaid, be subject to nor incur any forfeiture or irritancy under any deed of entail by virtue of which he or she may hold such lands or estate, and such burdens and securities shall be as valid and effectual against such lands and estates as if the same had not been entailed: Provided always, that no such burden or security as aforesaid shall be effectual unless the heir of entail nearest in succession, of lawful age, and not under legal disability or incapacity, shall have consented thereto, which consent may be given judicially, or by letter or other writing under the hand of such heir of entail nearest in succession: Provided also, that if such heir of entail nearest in succession as aforesaid shall be an heir of the body of the heir of entail in possession who intends to create such burden or security, then such heir of entail in possession shall, three months at least before creating the same, give notice of such his intention, in writing, to the heir of entail next entitled to succeed to the said estate, after the heirs of his own body, if within Great Britain or Ireland, and if the heir next entitled to succeed is not within Great Britain or Ireland to his nearest male relation by the father, of lawful age, or to his known factor or attorney; and before any such burden or security as aforesaid shall be created, evidence shall be produced, to the satisfaction of the said lords of council and session, that such consent as aforesaid, and such notice as aforesaid, where required, have been given, and that the means of public worship for the inhabitants of such district are wanting, and cannot be adequately provided unless the power hereby given of burdening the entailed estate shall be exercised to the extent proposed.

And after reciting that in some populous parishes and districts in the low country of Scotland, particularly in large towns and in the neighbourhood of cities and royal burghs, there are a great number of persons, natives of the highlands and islands of Scotland, who do not understand the English language so as to be capable of receiving the full benefit of religious instruction in English, or of having the ordinances of religion administered to them with advantage in that tongue: And that it is expedient that some provisions should be made for enabling such persons to obtain religious instruction, and to have the ordinances of religion administered to them, in the Gaelic language;—

It is Enacted,

XII. That in disjoining or dividing any large or populous parish or parishes in which there are a great number of such persons, it shall and may be lawful to make provision for the spiritual wants of such persons by appointing religious instruction to be communicated to them, and the ordinances of religion to be dispensed among them, in the Gaelic language.

XIII. That where a separate church shall have been erected for any such Gaelic congregation, and a permanent endowment shall have been secured for the same, either from teinds or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the said lords of council and session, it shall and may be lawful to erect such church and the congregation thereof into a separate parish, although the members of such congregation may be scattered, and no territorial district may be assigned to such parish exclusively; and it shall and may be lawful for the minister or ministers and elders of such parish to have and enjoy the status and all the powers, rights, and privileges of a parish minister or parish ministers and elders of the church of Scotland: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed as giving to the minister or ministers and elders of any such Gaelic congregation right to exercise pastoral superintendence and discipline over persons who are not either members of such Gaelic congregation, or of the families of such members, or resident within the territorial district, if any, which may be assigned to such parish exclusively.

And after reciting an Act, 4 Geo. 4. c. 79, intituled 'An Act for building additional Places of Worship in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland'; and another Act, 5 Geo. 4. c. 90, intituled, 'An Act to amend an Act for building additional Places of Worship in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland': And that, under the authority and provisions of the said two last-mentioned Acts, several additional places of worship have been built or provided, and certain districts have been defined or set apart for the benefit of which the said places of worship were built or provided, and ministers have been appointed to officiate at such places of worship and in such districts, and dwelling-houses and appurtenances have been built or provided for the ministers so officiating; and provision has been made for the payment to such ministers of stipends not exceeding the sum of 120*l.* per annum in any one case; and provision is made by the said last-mentioned Act for upholding in repair such places of worship and dwelling-houses and appurtenances:—

It is Enacted,

XIV. That upon application by the presbytery within which any such place of worship is situated, or by one or more heritors holding together one-fourth part of the valuation of the district defined and set apart as the district for the benefit of which such place of worship has been provided, or of Her Majesty's Advocate for Scotland, it shall and may be lawful for the said lords of council and session, acting as aforesaid, to disjoin such district from the parish or parishes to which the same or any part thereof may have belonged or been attached, and to erect the same into a parish quoad sacra; and in every such case the place of worship built or provided as aforesaid may be held and appointed to be the church of such parish, and the dwelling-house and appurtenances provided for the minister may be held and appointed to be the dwelling-house of the minister of such parish; and the provisions contained in the said two last-mentioned Acts may be held and taken to be sufficient provisions for upholding in repair such church and dwelling-house and appurtenances, and a stipend of 120*l.* payable under the provisions of the said Acts, may be held to be sufficient stipend for the minister of the said parish; and it shall and may be lawful for the minister and elders of such parish to have and enjoy the status and all the powers, rights and privileges of a parish minister and elders of the church of Scotland.

XV. That if in any case in which a place of worship has been built; and a district has been defined and set apart, under the provisions of the said two last-recited Acts, application shall be made to the said Court to erect such district alone, or such district with additions thereto, into a new parish quoad omnia, with the requisite consent of heritors, and that the said Court shall give effect to such application, it shall and may be competent for the said Court to declare and appoint the place of worship already erected in such district to be the church of such new parish, and to appoint and declare the dwelling-house already erected for the minister to be the manse of such new parish; and the Commissioners under the said last-recited Acts shall thereupon cease to hold such place of worship and such dwelling-house for the purposes of the said last-recited Acts; and the provisions contained in the said last-recited Acts for upholding such place of worship and such dwelling-house in repair shall cease and determine, and the burden of upholding the same shall fall on the parties who by the law of Scotland would be bound to uphold the church and manse of the parish, if such church and manse had been appointed to be built for the newly-erected parish; and in fixing the stipend to be paid to the minister of such newly-erected parish, the said Court shall compute as stipends the sum paid by authority of the said last-recited Acts to the minister in such district, which sum shall be continued to be paid to the minister of such newly-erected parish: Provided always, that the right of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, to nominate and appoint the minister to such church and district shall remain entire, notwithstanding the erection thereof into a separate parish.

xvi. By this Act,

After reciting, that by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 24, the compositions for assessed taxes entered into or renewed under the authority of an Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4. were continued until the 5th of April 1845, and it is expedient to continue the same for the further term of one year:—

It is Enacted,

1. That all contracts of composition for the duties of assessed taxes now in force shall be and the same are hereby continued in force for a further term of one year, to be computed from the 5th of April 1845, and to determine on the 5th of April 1846, under the same rules, regulations, and privileges as if such compositions did not by the laws now in force expire before the last-mentioned day; and all the powers and provisions of the several Acts relating to or continuing such compositions, or for collecting or enforcing payment thereof, shall be extended and applied to the contracts of composition continued under this Act, to all intents and purposes as if the same had been herein repeated and re-enacted.

11. Provided and enacted, That this Act shall not extend to the contract of composition of any person who shall be desirous of determining the same on the 5th of April 1845, and who shall on or before the 10th of October 1844 give notice thereof in writing to the assessor or collector of the parish or place, or to the surveyor acting in the execution of the Acts relating to the duties of Assessed Taxes for the district in which such composition shall be payable.

And after reciting that difficulties have arisen in carrying into execution the several Acts relating to the duties of Assessed Taxes, and the duties on profits arising from property, professions, trades, and offices, in divers privileged and other places, by reason of doubts as to whether such places are extra-parochial, or included within or forming part of any parish, tithing, or place for which separate assessments of the said duties have been usually heretofore made; for remedy whereof,—

It is Enacted,

111. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, or any two or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and empowered, from time to time, by any order in writing under their hands, to order and direct that any privileged or other place, whether extra-parochial or not, but not being itself an entire parish, shall, for the purposes of assessing, charging, collecting, and levying the said duties respectively, and for all other the purposes of the several Acts aforesaid, be deemed to be within or part of such district or division, and within or part of such parish, tithing, ward, or place respectively, as shall appear to the said Commissioners to be most convenient and proper for the purposes aforesaid, and thereupon such privileged or other place shall be deemed to be within or part of such district or division, and within or part of such parish, tithing, ward, or place, according to such order, for all the purposes aforesaid; and the said respective duties shall be assessed, charged, raised, collected, and levied within such privileged or other place, and upon the occupiers or inhabitants thereof, by or under the authority of the Commissioners appointed or authorized to put in execution the said respective Acts in the district or division, and by the assessors, collectors, or other officers appointed for the parish, tithing, ward, or place within or part of which such privileged or other place shall be by any such order as aforesaid declared or directed to be deemed to be, any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners of Stamps and Taxes, or any two of them, to revoke any such order, and to substitute any other order in lieu thereof, from time to time as often as it shall appear to the said Commissioners to be expedient so to do: Provided also, that no such order shall prejudice or affect any assessment of the said respective duties for any year prior to that in which such order shall be made; but that all such duties assessed and charged for any previous year shall be collected, levied, and recovered by the same persons, under the same authority, and in like manner as they would have been if such order had not been made.

IV. That where before or at the time of the making of any such order as aforesaid any assessment of the said respective duties or either of them shall have been made for such privileged or other place as aforesaid, or upon the occupiers or inhabitants thereof, in or for the year in which such order shall be made, whether the same shall be a separate assessment for such privileged or other place, or part of or included in the assessment for any parish, tithing, ward, or other place, in case the duties so assessed shall not have been previously paid and discharged, the surveyor of the said duties shall certify the particulars of every such assessment to the Commissioners acting in the execution of the said Acts respectively for the district, and parish, tithing, ward, or place, within or part of which such privileged or other place shall be by such order declared or deemed to be; and where at the time of the making of any such order as aforesaid no assessment of the said respective duties shall have been made for such privileged or other place as aforesaid, or upon the occupiers or inhabitants thereof, in or for the said year, or in case there shall be any omission of any person, article, matter, or thing in or from any such assessment as last aforesaid which shall have been made, or any insufficient rate or amount of duty charged thereby, it shall be lawful for the surveyor of the said duties to certify in like manner to the said Commissioners the particulars of any assessment which ought to be made upon any occupier or inhabitant of such privileged or other place, and of any increased rate or amount of duty which ought to be charged upon any such occupier or inhabitant; and in any of the several cases aforesaid the said Commissioners shall cause the particulars so certified to them as aforesaid to be inserted or included in or added to the assessment of the like duties made or to be made for the same year in or for the parish, tithing, ward, or place within or part of which such privileged or other place shall be by such order as aforesaid declared or deemed to be, and shall cause the duties to be assessed and charged thereon or in respect thereof according to such certificate, and thereupon the said duties shall be deemed to be part of the last-mentioned assessment for all intents and purposes whatsoever, and shall be collected, received, levied, accounted for, and paid over by the collectors or other persons appointed or to be appointed or authorized to collect, receive, or levy the duties contained in the said assessment, without any further or other warrant or order in that behalf: Provided always, that every such assessment or charge of duties made in pursuance of such certificate of the surveyor as aforesaid shall be subject to an appeal by the party charged with or liable to the payment of the said duties, upon his giving notice in writing to such surveyor of his intention to appeal against such assessment or charge within ten days after the particulars thereof shall have been notified to such party; and every such appeal shall be heard and determined by the said respective Commissioners within their district at such time and place as they shall appoint for that purpose, of which due notice shall be given to the party assessed or charged as aforesaid.

And after reciting that by the said Acts relating to the said respective duties the Commissioners for putting the same in execution respectively are required or directed to hold certain meetings, and to appoint certain officers, and also to do and perform divers other acts, matters, and things, in the execution of the powers and provisions of the said Acts, before or upon certain days or times appointed and prescribed by the said Acts for such purposes respectively: And that in cases where the said Commissioners have omitted to put in execution the powers and provisions of the said Acts within or at the times so appointed and prescribed as aforesaid, doubts have arisen as to the legality of their execution of such powers and provisions at any subsequent period, and it is expedient to remove such doubts;—

It is Enacted,

V. That where in any case the said respective Commissioners have neglected or omitted, or shall hereafter neglect or omit, to hold any meeting, or to appoint any officer, or to do or perform any other act, matter, or thing, in the execution of the powers and provisions of the said Acts respectively, within or at the time directed, appointed, or prescribed by the said Acts in that behalf, the holding of such meeting, and the appointment of such officer, and the performance of any such other act, matter, or thing as aforesaid at any other time or times shall, notwithstanding any such neglect or omission, be and be deemed to have been respectively as good, valid, and effectual to all intents and purposes as if the same respectively had been held, made, done, or performed within or at the time and according to the manner and circumstances directed, appointed, or prescribed as aforesaid, anything in the said Acts contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

And after reciting that by the said Acts relating to the said duties respectively the Commissioners acting in the execution thereof are required to direct their precepts to such inhabitants of each parish, ward, or place, and such number of them, as they shall think most convenient, to be presenters and assessors for such parish, ward, or place, requiring them to appear before the said Commissioners at such place and at such time as they shall appoint, in order that such of the said inhabitants as the said Commissioners shall think proper may be appointed assessors of the said several duties: And that it frequently happens that the persons to whom such precepts are directed wilfully disobey the same, whereby the execution of the said Acts is greatly impeded;—

It is Enacted,

VI. That if any person to whom any such precept as aforesaid shall be directed shall wilfully neglect or refuse to appear before the said respective Commissioners according to the tenor and effect thereof, or, having appeared, shall refuse to submit to be appointed an assessor of the said duties or of either of them respectively, in the manner and form by the statute in such case directed and provided, every person so offending in any such case as aforesaid shall forfeit and pay for every such offence the sum of 10*l.*, to be recovered and applied in like manner as any penalty incurred under the said Acts or any of them may be recovered and applied.

And after reciting that by 49 Geo. 3. c. 32. certain rates and duties of 1*s.* and 6*d.* respectively specified and contained in the Schedule to the said Act annexed were granted and made payable: and that another Act was passed in the same session of Parliament, to rectify a mistake in the last-recited Act: And that it is expedient to make provision for the appointment of Commissioners to execute the said last-recited Acts in certain cases;—

It is Enacted,

VII. That where in any case there is or shall be any failure in the appointment of Commissioners for executing the said recited Acts, whether the same shall proceed from the want of legal authority in any person or persons to make such appointment, or from the neglect or omission of any person or persons having such authority to appoint such Commissioners, or from any other cause, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, or any three or more of them, from time to time, by writing under their hands, to appoint Commissioners for putting in execution the said recited Acts of the 49 Geo. 3. and the powers therein referred to or contained in relation to the said respective rates and duties of 1s. and 6d., in the several departments or districts throughout Great Britain; and such Commissioners so to be appointed as last aforesaid are hereby empowered and required to do all things necessary for putting the said recited Acts in execution with relation to the said respective rates and duties, in the like and in as full and ample a manner as any Commissioners appointed or authorized by or under the authority of any former Act or Acts could or might at any time heretofore put in execution the said recited Acts.

VIII. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in the present session of Parliament.

5. Act may be amended this session.

It is Declared and Enacted,

I. That it shall be lawful for the council of any borough to which Her Majesty shall not have then granted a separate court of sessions of the peace to be party to any agreement for the purposes of the said Act; and it shall be also lawful to insert in any such agreement, if the parties thereunto shall think fit, a condition, that such agreement shall not take effect unless Her Majesty shall be pleased to grant a separate court of sessions of the peace to any such borough; and in case such condition shall be therein inserted no agreement shall be valid notwithstanding that the same shall have been approved by the several parties thereto, and confirmed by Her Majesty, as directed by the said Act, until Her Majesty shall have been pleased to grant such separate court of sessions of the peace to the borough or boroughs respecting which the said condition shall have been inserted in the agreement.

II. That so much of the said Act as provides that in every case in which more than one borough having a court of sessions of the peace shall be a party to the agreement aforesaid the district united under such agreement shall be divided into as many divisions as there shall be boroughs included in such agreement, and to each of such boroughs shall be apportioned such a division of the said district as shall be more immediately adjacent thereunto, and shall be set forth in the agreement, regard being had to the amount of population in the whole district, and the other circumstances of the case, and all prisoners committed to the said prison for any offence committed within any division aforesaid shall be sent for trial to the sessions of the peace holden for that borough to which such division shall have been apportioned, and the provisions hereinbefore contained with respect to jurors, and the return of convictions, depositions, recognizances, and other documents, for the united district, shall apply in each case to the division apportioned to each borough, shall be repealed.

That when and so often after the passing of this Act as any vacancy shall occur in the office of church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk, in any district, parish, or place, it shall be lawful for the rector or other incumbent or other the person or persons entitled for the time being to appoint or elect such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk as aforesaid, if he shall think fit, to appoint or elect a person in the holy orders of deacon or priest of the united church of England and Ireland to fill the said office of church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk; and such person so appointed or elected as aforesaid shall, when duly licensed as hereinafter provided, be entitled to have and receive all the profits and emoluments of and belonging to the said office, and shall also be liable in respect thereof, so long as he shall hold the same, to perform all such spiritual and ecclesiastical duties within such district, parish, or place as the said rector or other incumbent, with the sanction of the bishop of the diocese, may from time to time require; but such person in holy orders so appointed or elected as aforesaid shall not by reason of such appointment or election have or acquire any freehold or absolute right to or interest in the said office of church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk, or to or in any of the profits or emoluments thereof, but every such person in holy orders so appointed or elected as aforesaid shall at all times be liable to be suspended or removed from the said office, in the same manner and by the same authority, and for such or the like causes, as those whereby any stipendiary curate may be lawfully suspended or removed; such suspension or removal nevertheless being subject to the same power of appeal to the archbishop of the province to which any stipendiary curate is or may be entitled.

III. Provided and enacted, That every such appointment or election as last aforesaid, if made by any other person or persons than the rector or other incumbent of such district, parish, or place, shall be subject to the consent and approval of such rector or other incumbent of such district, parish, or place; and that no person in holy orders so appointed or elected as aforesaid, shall be competent to perform any of the duties of his said office, or any other spiritual or ecclesiastical duties, within such district, parish, or place, or to receive or take any of the profits or emoluments of his said office, unless and until he shall have duly obtained from the bishop of the diocese within which such district, parish, or place is situate such licence and authority in that behalf as are required and usual in respect of stipendiary curates; but nevertheless such licence and authority, when so obtained as aforesaid, shall entitle the person so obtaining it to hold the said office, and to receive and take the profits and emoluments thereof, as aforesaid, until he shall have resigned the same, or have been so suspended or removed as aforesaid, without any annual or other re-appointment or re-election thereto.

IV. Provided and enacted, That no rector or other incumbent of any district, parish, or place wherein any such person or persons shall be so employed as aforesaid, or wherein any lecturer or preacher shall have been required to undertake and perform other clerical and ministerial duties, in the manner hereinbefore provided, or wherein any person in holy orders shall have been appointed or elected to fill the office of church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk, as aforesaid, shall by reason of any such provisions be exempt from any duty or obligation of employing within the same district, parish, or place any curate or other assistant to which by any law, statute, canon, or usage he is or may be already liable; but it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese from time to time to require every such rector or other incumbent to provide, or for the said bishop to nominate and license, such other curates and assistants to officiate within every such district, parish, or place, in addition, either to the person or persons so intended to be employed as aforesaid, or to such lecturer or preacher, or to such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk, and to make regulations for the payment of the stipends of such other curates and assistants, as fully and in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions as he might have done by law if this Act had not been passed.

v. That if at any time it shall appear, upon complaint or otherwise, to any archdeacon or other ordinary that any person not in holy orders, holding or exercising the office of church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk in any district, parish, or place within and subject to his jurisdiction, has been guilty of any wilful neglect of or misbehaviour in his said office, or that by reason of any misconduct he is an unfit and improper person to hold or exercise the same, it shall be lawful for such archdeacon or other ordinary forthwith to summon such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk to appear before him, and also by writing under his hand, or by such process as is commonly used in any of the Courts Ecclesiastical for procuring the attendance of witnesses, to call before him all such persons as may be competent to give evidence or information respecting any of the matters imputed to or charged against such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk as aforesaid; and such archdeacon or other ordinary shall and may, if he see fit, examine upon oath, to be by him administered in that behalf, any of the persons so appearing or attending before him respecting any of the matters aforesaid, and shall and may thereupon summarily hear and determine the truth of the matters so imputed to or charged against such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk as aforesaid; and if upon such investigation it shall appear to the satisfaction of such archdeacon or other ordinary that the matters so imputed to or charged against such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk are true, it shall be lawful for the said archdeacon or other ordinary forthwith to suspend or remove such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk from his said office, and by certificate under his hand and seal directed to the rector or other officiating minister of the parish, district, or place wherein such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk held or exercised his said office, to declare the said office vacant, and a copy of such certificate shall thereupon, by such rector or other officiating minister, be affixed to the principal door of the church or chapel in which the said church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk usually exercised his said office; and the person or persons who upon the vacancy of such office are entitled to elect or appoint a person to fill the same, shall and may forthwith proceed to elect or appoint some other person to fill the same in the place of the said church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk so removed as aforesaid: Provided always, that the exercise of such office by a sufficient deputy who shall duly and faithfully perform the duties thereof, and in all respects well and properly demean himself, shall not be deemed a wilful neglect of his office on the part of such church clerk, chapel clerk, or parish clerk, so as to render him liable, for such cause alone, to be suspended or removed therefrom.

vi. That in case any person, having ceased to be employed in any of the offices or duties in this Act mentioned or referred to, or having been duly suspended or removed from any such office or employment as aforesaid, shall at any time refuse or neglect to give up the possession of any house, building, land, or premises, or any part or parcel thereof, by him held or occupied by virtue or in respect of any such office or employment as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese, upon complaint thereof to him made, to summon such person forthwith personally to appear before him, and to shew cause for such refusal or neglect; and upon the failure of the person so summoned as aforesaid to obey such summons, or, upon his appearance, to shew to the said bishop such cause as may be deemed by the said bishop sufficient for such refusal or neglect, the said bishop shall thereupon grant a certificate of the facts aforesaid, under his hand and seal, to the person or persons entitled to the possession of such house, building, land, or premises as aforesaid, who may thereupon go before any neighbouring justice of the peace; and such justice, upon production of such certificate, and proof of such wrongful retention of possession as aforesaid, shall and he is hereby required to issued his warrant under his hand and seal, directed to the constables or other peace officers of the district, parish, or place within which such house, building, land, or premises is or are situate, or to the constables or other peace officers of any neighbouring district, parish, or place, requiring them forthwith to expel and remove from the said house, building, land, or premises, and from every part and parcel thereof, the person so wrongfully retaining possession thereof, and to deliver the peaceable possession thereof to the person or persons so entitled to the same as aforesaid; and such constables or other peace officers shall and they are hereby required promptly and effectually to obey and execute such warrant, according to the exigency thereof, and thereupon it shall be lawful for them also to levy, upon the goods and chattels of the person so by them expelled and removed as aforesaid, the necessary costs and expenses of executing such warrant, the amount whereof, in case the same shall be disputed, shall be forthwith settled and determined by the said justice of the peace by whom the said warrant was so issued as aforesaid, or by any other justice of the peace residing in or near to the said district, parish, or place, whose decision thereupon shall be final, and who is hereby authorized to make such order in that behalf as to him shall seem reasonable.

13. Act may be repealed, &c. this session.

By this Act,

After reciting that 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 41. hath been found beneficial to the due administration of justice: and that another Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 83, hath been also found advantageous to inventors and to the public; and that the Judicial Committee acting under the authority of the said Acts hath been found to answer well the purposes for which it was so established by Parliament, but it is found necessary to improve its proceedings in some respects, for the better despatch of business, and expedient also to extend its jurisdiction and powers: and that by the laws now in force in certain of Her Majesty's colonies and possessions abroad no appeals can be brought to Her Majesty in Council for the reversal of the judgments, sentences, decrees, and orders of any courts of justice within such colonies, save only of the courts of error or courts of appeal within the same, and it is expedient that Her Majesty in Council should be authorized to provide for the admission of appeals from other courts of justice within such colonies or possessions:—

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall be competent to Her Majesty, by any order or orders to be from time to time for that purpose made with the advice of her Privy Council, to provide for the admission of any appeal or appeals to Her Majesty in Council from any judgments, sentences, decrees, or orders of any court of justice within any British colony or possession abroad, although such court shall not be a court of errors or a court of appeal within such colony or possession; and it shall also be competent to Her Majesty, by any such order or orders as aforesaid, to make all such provisions as to Her Majesty in Council shall seem meet for the instituting and prosecuting any such appeals, and for carrying into effect any such decisions or sentences as Her Majesty in Council shall pronounce thereon: Provided always, that it shall be competent to Her Majesty in Council to revoke, alter, and amend any such order or orders as aforesaid as to Her Majesty in Council shall seem meet: Provided also, that any such order as aforesaid may be either general and extending to all appeals to be brought from any such court of justice as aforesaid, or special and extending only to any appeal to be brought in any particular case: Provided also, that every such general order in Council as aforesaid shall be published in the London Gazette within one calendar month next after the making thereof: Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to take away or diminish any power now by law vested in Her Majesty for regulating appeals to Her Majesty in Council from the judgments, sentences, decrees, or orders of any courts of justice within any of Her Majesty's colonies or possessions abroad.

And after reciting that it is expedient, for the further encouragement of inventions in the useful arts, to enable the time of monopoly in patents to be extended in cases in which it can be satisfactorily shewn that the expense of the invention hath been greater than the time now limited by law will suffice to reimburse:—

It is Enacted,

11. That if any person, having obtained a patent for any invention, shall before the expiration thereof present a petition to Her Majesty in Council, setting forth that he has been unable to obtain a due remuneration for his expense and labour in perfecting such invention, and that an exclusive right of using and vending the same for the further period of seven years, in addition to the term in such patent mentioned, will not suffice for his reimbursement and remuneration, then, if the matter of such petition shall be by Her Majesty referred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the said committee shall proceed to consider the same after the manner and in the usual course of its proceedings touching patents, and if the said committee shall be of opinion, and shall so report to Her Majesty, that a further period greater than seven years extension of the said patent term ought to be granted to the petitioner, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, if she shall so think fit, to grant an extension thereof for any time not exceeding fourteen years, in like manner and subject to the same rules as the extension for a term not exceeding seven years is now granted under the powers of the said Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 83.

III. Provided and enacted, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the said Judicial Committee from reporting that an extension for any period not exceeding seven years should be granted, or prevent Her Majesty from granting an extension for such lesser term than the petition shall have prayed.

And after reciting that doubts have arisen touching the power given by the said recited Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 83, in cases where the patentees have wholly or in part assigned their right :—

It is Enacted,

IV. That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, on the report of the Judicial Committee, to grant such extension as is authorised by the said Act and by this Act, either to an assignee or assignees or to the original patentee or patentees, or to an assignee or assignees and original patentee or patentees conjointly.

V. That in case the original patentee or patentees hath or have departed with his or their whole or any part of his or their interest by assignment to any other person or persons, it shall be lawful for such patentee, together with such assignee or assignees if part only hath been assigned, and for the assignee or assignees if the whole hath been assigned, to enter a disclaimer and memorandum of alteration under the powers of the said recited Act; and such disclaimer and memorandum of such alteration, having been so entered and filed as in the said recited Act mentioned, shall be valid and effectual in favour of any person or persons in whom the rights under the said letters patent may then be or thereafter become legally vested; and no objection shall be made in any proceeding whatsoever on the ground that the party making such disclaimer or memorandum of such alteration had not sufficient authority in that behalf.

VI. That any disclaimer or memorandum of alteration before the passing of this Act, or by virtue of the said recited Act, by such patentee with such assignee or by such assignee as aforesaid, shall be valid and effectual to bind any person or persons in whom the said letters patent might then be or have since become vested; and no objection shall be made in any proceeding whatsoever that the party making such disclaimer or memorandum of alteration had not authority in that behalf.

VII. That any new letters patent which before the passing of this Act may have been granted, under the provisions of the above-recited Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4. c. 83, to an assignee or assignees, shall be as valid and effectual as if the said letters patent had been made after the passing of this Act, and the title of any party to such new letters patent shall not be invalidated by reason of the same having been granted to an assignee or assignees: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall give any validity or effect to any letters patent heretofore granted to any assignee or assignees where any action or proceeding in scire facies or suit in equity shall have been commenced at any time before the passing of this Act, wherein the validity of such letters patent shall have been or may be questioned.

VIII. Provided and enacted, That in the case of any matter or thing being referred to the Judicial Committee, it shall be lawful for the said committee to appoint one or other of the clerks of the Privy Council to take any formal proofs required to be taken in dealing with the matter or thing so referred, and shall, if they so think fit, proceed upon such clerk's report to them as if such formal proofs had been taken by and before the said Judicial Committee.

IX. That in case any petition of appeal whatever shall be presented, addressed to Her Majesty in Council, and such petition shall be duly lodged with the clerk of the Privy Council, it shall be lawful for the said Judicial Committee to proceed in hearing and reporting upon such appeal, without any special Order in Council referring the same to them, provided that Her Majesty in Council shall have, by an Order in Council in the month of November, directed that all appeals shall be referred to the said Judicial Committee on which petitions may be presented to Her Majesty in Council during the twelve months next after the making of such order; and that the said Judicial Committee shall proceed to hear and report upon all such appeals in like manner as if each such appeal had been referred to the said Judicial Committee by a special order of Her Majesty in Council: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council at any time to rescind any general order so made; and in case of such order being so rescinded all petitions of appeal shall in the first instance be preferred to Her Majesty in Council, and shall not be proceeded with by the said Judicial Committee without a special order of reference.

X. That it shall be lawful for the said Judicial Committee to make an order or orders on any court in any colony or foreign settlement, or foreign dominion of the Crown, requiring the Judge or Judges of such court to transmit to the clerk of the Privy Council a copy of the notes of evidence in any cause tried before such court, and of the reasons given by the Judge or Judges for the judgment pronounced in any case brought by appeal or by writ of error before the said Judicial Committee.

XI. That it shall and may be lawful for the said Judicial Committee to make any general rule or regulation, to be binding upon all courts in the colonies and other foreign settlements of the Crown, requiring the Judges' notes of the evidence taken before such court on any cause appealed, and of the reasons given by the Judges of such Court, or by any of them, for or against the judgment pronounced by such Court; which notes of evidence and reasons shall by such Court be transmitted to the clerk of the Privy Council within one calendar month next after the leave given by such Court to prosecute any appeal to Her Majesty in Council; and such order of the said committee shall be binding upon all Judges of such courts in the colonies or foreign settlements of the Crown.

XII. That in all causes of appeal to Her Majesty in Council from Ecclesiastical Courts, and from Admiralty or Vice Admiralty Courts, which now are or may hereafter be depending, in which any person duly monished or cited or requested to comply with any lawful order or decree of Her Majesty in Council, or of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council or their surrogates, made before or after the passing of this Act, shall neglect or refuse to pay obedience to such lawful order or decree, or shall commit any contempt of the process under the seal of Her Majesty in ecclesiastical and maritime causes, it shall be lawful for the said Judicial Committee or their surrogates to pronounce such person to be contumacious and in contempt, and, after he or she shall have been so pronounced contumacious and in contempt, to cause process of sequestration to issue under the said seal of Her Majesty against the real and personal estate, goods, chattels, and effects, wheresoever lying within the dominions of Her Majesty, of the person against or upon whom such order or decree shall have been made, in order to enforce obedience to the same and payment of the expenses attending such sequestration, and all proceedings consequent thereon, and to make such further order in respect of or consequent on such sequestration, and in respect to such real and personal estates, goods, chattels, and effects sequestrated thereby, as may be necessary, or for payment of monies arising from the same to the person to whom the same may be due, or into the registry of the High Court of Admiralty and Appeals, for the benefit of those who may be ultimately entitled thereto.

XIII. That this Act may be repealed or amended during this session of Parliament.

By this Act,

After reciting that it is expedient that trust deeds and other amicable modes of arrangement between debtors and their creditors should be facilitated, and that better means should be provided for carrying the same into effect :—

It is Enacted,

I. That from and after the 1st of September next after the passing of this Act it shall be lawful for any debtor who is unable to meet his engagements with his creditors, such debtor not being a trader within the meaning of the statutes now in force relating to bankrupts, with the concurrence of one-third in number and value of his creditors (testified by their signing his petition), to present a petition to the Court of Bankruptcy, setting forth a full account of his debts, and the consideration thereof, and the names, residences, and occupations of his creditors, and also a full account of his estate and effects, whether in possession, reversion, or expectancy, and of all debts and rights due to or claimed by him, and of all property of what kind soever held in trust for him; and also setting forth that he is unable to meet his engagements with his creditors, and the true cause of such inability; and also setting forth such proposal as he is able to make for the future payment or the compromise of such debts or engagements; and that one third in number and value of his creditors have assented to such proposal; and praying that such proposal (or such modification thereof as by the majority of his creditors should be determined) should be carried into effect under the superintendence and controul of the said Court; and that he the said petitioning debtor should in the meantime be protected from arrest, by order of the said Court.

II. That, upon the presentation of such petition, one of the Commissioners of the said Court, in such rotation as by order of the said Court shall be appointed, shall privately examine into the matter of the said petition, and for that purpose shall have power to examine upon oath such petitioning debtor, and any creditor concurring in his petition, and any witness produced by such petitioning debtor; and if such Commissioner shall be satisfied of the truth of the several matters alleged in such petition, and that the debts of such petitioning debtor have not been contracted by reason of any manner of fraud or breach of trust, or without reasonable probability at the time of contract of being able to pay the same, or by reason of any judgment in any prosecution for breach of the revenue laws, or in any action for breach of promise of marriage, seduction, criminal conversation, libel, slander, assault, battery, malicious arrest, malicious suing out a fiat in bankruptcy, or malicious trespass, and that such petitioning debtor has made a full disclosure of his debts and credits, estate and effects, and is desirous of making a bond fide arrangement with all his creditors, and that his proposal to that effect is reasonable, and proper to be executed under the direction of the said Court, it shall be lawful for such Commissioner to direct that a meeting of all the creditors of such petitioning debtor should be convened at such time and place as the said Commissioner shall appoint, notice of which meeting shall be given in writing to every such creditor not less than seven or more than twenty-eight days before the same is held.

III. That the said Commissioner shall appoint a fit and proper person, being a registrar or official assignee of the said Court, or one of the principal creditors of the said petitioning debtor, to preside at such meeting of creditors, and to report the resolutions thereof to the said Commissioner.

IV. That if at such meeting of creditors the major part in number and value, or nine-tenths in value, or nine-tenths in number whose debts exceed 20*l*., shall assent to the proposal of such petitioning debtor, or to any modification thereof, the president of such meeting shall appoint another meeting of the creditors of such petitioning debtor to be held not earlier than seven or later than twenty-eight days from such first meeting, of which second meeting, and of the purpose thereof, notice in writing shall be personally served on every creditor who was not present by himself or his appointed agent at such first meeting, three clear days at least before the day appointed for such second meeting; provided, however, that the Commissioner to whom such petition as aforesaid is referred may, if he shall think fit, make an order, in any special case, that service of such notice at the last place of abode or business of any creditor shall be deemed good service.

V. That if at such second meeting of creditors three-fifths in number and value of all the creditors present, or nine-tenths in value, or nine-tenths in number whose debts exceed 20*l*., shall agree to accept such arrangement or composition as was assented to at the said first meeting of creditors, and shall reduce the terms thereof into writing, and sign the same, such resolution or agreement (subject to such confirmation as is hereinafter enacted) shall thenceforth be binding and of full force, as well against the said petitioning debtor as against all persons who were creditors of the said petitioning debtor at the date of his said petition, and who had notice of the said several meetings of creditors; provided, however, that such resolution or agreement shall not be valid unless one full third in number and value of all the creditors of such petitioning debtor were present at such second meeting, either in person or by an authorized agent.

VI. That within fifteen days next after the passing of such resolution or agreement the same shall be submitted to the Commissioner acting in the matter of the said petition, who, if he shall think the same reasonable, and proper to be executed under the direction of the said Court, shall cause the same to be filed and entered of record therein, and shall grant to the said petitioning debtor a certificate of such filing, and shall from time to time indorse on such certificate his protection of such petitioning debtor from arrest; and such petitioning debtor shall be free from arrest at the suit of any person being a creditor at the date of his said petition, and having had such several notice or notices as aforesaid; and any officer arresting such petitioning debtor at the suit of any such creditor, and on sight of such certificate and protection not releasing such petitioning debtor, shall be liable to such penalty as is provided respecting bankrupts in the like case by the statutes now in force concerning bankrupts; provided, however, that no such protection shall be valid in favour of any petitioning debtor who shall be proved to have been about to abscond beyond the jurisdiction of the said Court of Bankruptcy, or who has concealed or is concealing any part of his estate or effects, nor against any creditor whose debt is not truly specified in the said petition, nor against any creditor whose debt has been contracted by reason of any manner of fraud or breach of trust.

VII. That it shall be lawful for such Commissioner as aforesaid, upon the examination of such petition as aforesaid, to grant to such petitioning debtor a temporary and limited protection from arrest, and such petitioning debtor shall be accordingly free from arrest for such time and within such limits and conditions as shall be specified in the said protection, with the like penalties on any officer arresting him as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for such Commissioner to require such petitioning debtor to give bail for his appearance at the said several meetings of his creditors; and every petitioning debtor shall have such protection from arrest when going to, remaining in, and returning from his necessary attendance on the said Commissioner, or the said meetings of creditors, as is enjoyed by any party or witness attending any court of record.

VIII. That from and after the date of the filing of such resolution and agreement as aforesaid all the estate and effects of such petitioning debtor shall vest in the trustee (if any such shall be appointed) by virtue of such resolutions, and without any deed, as fully as if such trustee were an assignee under the statutes relating to bankrupts; and every such trustee may sue and be sued as if he were such assignee in bankruptcy.

IX. That every such trustee as aforesaid shall, once at least in every six months, or oftener if the said Commissioner or any two or more of the creditors of such petitioning debtor whose debts amount to one-tenth of the amount of the debts of such debtor require it, produce to the said Commissioner, on oath or solemn declaration, a full and true account of all monies, property, and effects of such petitioning debtor which have come to his hands, and of the disposal thereof; and the said Commissioner shall examine the same, and shall certify the result of such examination, and shall, if need be, order payment to the creditors of such petitioning creditor, according to the terms of such resolution or agreement as aforesaid.

X. That if it shall at any time appear to the said Commissioner, on the representation of such trustee as aforesaid, or of any two creditors as aforesaid, that such petitioning debtor has not made a true discovery of his estate and effects, or has not duly accounted for any subsequently-acquired property (if required by the true intent and meaning of the said resolution or agreement), or has wilfully made any false return of creditors, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioner to summon such petitioning debtor to be examined before him upon oath touching such matters; and such summons and examination shall be enforced in such manner as is now practised in the summoning and examination of bankrupts.

XI. That in case any difficulty shall arise in the execution of the said resolution or agreement it shall be lawful for the said Commissioner to cause a special meeting of the creditors of such petitioning debtor to be assembled; and the resolution of the majority of the said creditors at such meeting, to confirm, alter, or annul the whole or any part of the said resolution or agreement, shall be as valid as if it had been part of the original resolution or agreement: Provided, however, that if one-third in number and value of the creditors of such petitioning debtor do not attend such meeting in manner aforesaid the resolution thereof shall not be valid unless the same is approved and confirmed by the said Commissioner.

XII. That so soon as the said resolution or agreement shall have been carried into effect, and the creditors of the said petitioning debtor shall have been satisfied, according to the tenor of the same, the said Commissioner shall cause a meeting of the said creditors to be held before him, and, on being satisfied that the trustee has fully performed his trust, shall give to such trustee a certificate thereof under his hand and seal; and such certificate shall be a full release and acquittance to the said trustee, both in law and equity, for all matters done by him as such trustee: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for such trustee to receive for his services in the execution of his said trust such sum of money as the major part in number and value of the creditors assembled at such last-mentioned meeting shall appoint, subject to the approval and allowance of the said Commissioner.

xiii. That at such last-mentioned meeting the said Commissioner shall give to the said petitioning debtor a certificate, under the hand and seal of the said Commissioner, of the filing of the said petition, and of the resolution or agreement of the creditors of the said petitioning debtor, and that the said resolution or agreement has been fully carried into effect; and such certificate shall thenceforth operate to all intents and purposes as fully as if the same were a certificate of conformity under the statutes relating to bankrupts, excepting only that no debt herein excepted from the operation of this Act shall be barred by the said certificate.

xiv. That for the better carrying into effect the several purposes of this Act it shall be lawful for the said Court of Bankruptcy from time to time to make such rules, regulations, and orders as the said Court shall think fit: Provided, however, that such rules, regulations, and orders shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within twenty-one days from the making the same, if Parliament be then sitting, or if not, twenty-one days from the commencement of the session next after the making of such rules, regulations, or orders.

xv. That this Act shall extend to aliens, denizens, and women; and that all words in the singular number may be interpreted in the plural number, and vice versa; and that all words in the masculine gender may be interpreted to include the feminine gender; and that this Act be construed beneficially to creditors; and, if any doubts should arise in the construction thereof, that it be construed by analogy to the laws now in force relating to bankrupts, and the practice thereof.

xvi. That this Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

16. The New Bridewell to be a house of correction for the county generally.
17. Act may be amended this session.

By this Act,

After reciting that it is desirable, for the better administration of criminal justice in the county of Middlesex, that sessions of the peace for the trial of felonies and misdemeanors committed within the said county should be holden more frequently, and that an assistant Judge, of competent legal knowledge, should be appointed to preside at such sessions:—

It is Enacted,

1. That after the passing of this Act there shall be holden in and for the county of Middlesex two sessions or adjourned sessions of the peace at least in every calendar month, and the first sessions holden in the months of January, April, July, and October respectively shall be the general quarter sessions of the said county.

II. That the second sessions, or the adjourned sessions, holden in the months of February, May, August, and November respectively, and such other sessions as the Justices for the county in the first sessions holden in the month of December assembled shall from time to time appoint, shall be general sessions of the peace; and such general sessions shall have power to try and determine all appeals, and all other powers which now or shall hereafter belong to the general quarter sessions.

III. That all orders heretofore made and all things heretofore done at any general session of the peace for the county of Middlesex shall be as good in law as if made and done at the general quarter sessions of the peace for the said county.

IV. That the second sessions holden in the months of January, April, July, and October shall be adjournments of the general quarter sessions.

V. That after the passing of this Act it shall be lawful to begin and continue, or to continue when begun, any session of the peace for the said county so to be holden as aforesaid, until the business thereof shall be ended, notwithstanding that Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench may sit at Westminster or elsewhere in the said county before or at the beginning or during the continuance of any such session.

VI. That no person against whom any bill of indictment shall be found for misdemeanor at the Central Criminal Court, or at any session of the peace for the county of Middlesex, shall be entitled to traverse the same to any subsequent sitting of the Court, but the Court shall forthwith proceed to try the same, unless upon good cause to be shewn by the person against whom the same is found, or the prosecutor, and to be allowed by the Court, for the postponement of the trial.

VII. That the Justices of the said county shall cause an account to be taken of the fees received by the sheriff or his deputy for summoning traverse juries during the last three years, and shall be authorized to allow and cause to be paid yearly, for such time as to them shall seem fit, to the said sheriff or his deputy, out of the county rates of the said county, in addition to the other emoluments of his office, any sum not exceeding the average yearly amount of the fees received by him for summoning traverse juries during the said three years.

VIII. That it shall be lawful for her Majesty, her heirs and successors, by sign manual, to appoint a person, being a serjeant or barrister at law of not less than ten years standing, and in the commission of the peace for the said county, and qualified by law to act as a Justice of the Peace, to be the assistant Judge of the said court of the sessions of the peace, which said assistant Judge shall preside at the hearing of all appeals, and at the trial of all felonies and misdemeanors in the said Court, and all matters connected therewith, and shall hold his office during good behaviour; and in case of sickness or unavoidable absence, and on such other occasions as shall be allowed by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, such assistant Judge shall be empowered from time to time to appoint a deputy, qualified to be appointed assistant Judge, who shall have power to act for him for such time as shall be in each case allowed by the Secretary of State, not being in any case later than the end of the business at the session of the peace then next but one following: Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall interfere with the appointment of the chairman of the said court for all purposes except the trials of appeals, and of felonies and misdemeanors, and other matters connected therewith, but such appointment shall remain in the said Justices as before the passing of this Act; provided also, that the said assistant Judge, so long as he shall hold the said office, shall not be eligible to sit in Parliament.

IX. That the presence of another Justice of the Peace shall not be essential to the formation of the court in those cases in which it is directed by this Act that the assistant Judge or his deputy for the time being shall preside; but nothing in this Act contained shall lessen the jurisdiction of the Justices at the said sessions.

X. That from and after the appointment of such assistant Judge as aforesaid there shall be paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland the sum of 1,200*l.* to such assistant Judge for a yearly salary, to be paid from time to time quarterly, free and clear from all taxes and deductions whatsoever (except the Income Tax), on the 5th of January, the 5th of April, the 5th of July, and the 10th of October, by equal portions, the first payment to be made on the first of such days as shall occur after the appointment of the said assistant Judge; and that if any person appointed to such office shall die, or resign the same, the executors or administrators of such person so dying, or the person resigning, shall be entitled to receive such portion of the salary aforesaid as shall have accrued during the time that such person shall have executed such office since the last payment, and that the successor of any such person so dying or resigning shall be entitled to receive such portion of the salary as shall accrue from the day of such death, resignation, or dismissal.

And after reciting that by an Act, 9 Geo. 4, intituled, 'An Act to enable the Justices of the Peace for Westminster to hold their Sessions of the Peace during term and the sittings of the Court of King's Bench,' the sessions of the peace for the said city and liberty are limited to the weeks preceding the holding of each of the Quarter or General Sessions of the Peace for the said county of Middlesex: And that by ancient usage and of right the Justices of the Peace for Middlesex have constantly holden and may hold their sessions of the peace for the said county within the said city and liberty, and the holding of sessions for the city and liberty has become unnecessary:—

It is Enacted,

XI. That after the session of the peace which shall be holden in and for the said city and liberty next after the passing of this Act sessions of the peace in and for the said city and liberty shall cease to be holden, and the sessions to be holden in and for the said county of Middlesex shall be holden by adjournment within the said city and liberty, and shall have full jurisdiction over all things cognizable by the sessions for the said city and liberty; and that the inhabitants of the said city and liberty shall not be exempted from serving on juries at the sessions of the peace for the county of Middlesex holden within the said city and liberty.

XII. That the persons holding the several offices of high bailiff of Westminster, clerk of the peace, and all other officers of the court of sessions of the peace for the said city and liberty, shall, so long as they shall be entitled to hold their several offices, execute the duties and be entitled to the emoluments within the said city and liberty of the several offices of sheriff, clerk of the peace, and other corresponding officers of the county of Middlesex: Provided always, that the records of every session of the peace for the said county holden within the said city and liberty shall be sent within fourteen days after such session, by the clerk of the peace of the said city and liberty, to the clerk of the peace of the said county, and shall be kept by him with the other records of his office.

And after reciting that by an Act, 12 Geo. 2, intituled, 'An Act for the more easy assessing, levying, and collecting County Rates,' it was enacted, that there should be but one rate made and assessed by the Justices of the Peace of the said county of Middlesex and the said city and liberties of Westminster for the several purposes enumerated in that Act: And that by an Act, 7 Geo. 4. c. 42, intituled, 'An Act for building a new Bridewell or House of Correction for the said City and Liberty of Westminster,' a house of correction, commonly called the New Bridewell, was built out of monies charged and assessed upon the county rates, which said bridewell is much larger than is needed for the said city and liberty; but the house of correction for the county of Middlesex is so small that the prisoners therein cannot be properly classified: And that inconveniences arise from the present management of the county rate being vested partly in the Justices for the said county and partly in the Justices for the said city and liberty, and it would be a public advantage if the management of the county rate were solely in the Justices of the said county, and if the said new bridewell were made a house of correction for the whole county, and placed under the controul and management of the Justices of the said county:—

It is Enacted,

XIII. That after the passing of this Act the Justices for the said city and liberty shall cease to exercise any controul over the county rate, and the Justices of the said county shall have the sole controul and management thereof; and all orders for the payment of any sums of money out of the county rate, in respect of any expenditure within the said city and liberty, shall be made by the Justices for the said county upon the county treasurer, in like manner as all other orders are made by them upon him; and the said treasurer shall obey the same, and shall from time to time include the same in his accounts, and the same shall be subject to all the statutes and provisions for the regulation of the rate for the said county, and shall form part of the general expenditure for the said county.

XIV. That so much of an Act passed in the 47 Geo. 3, intituled, 'An Act to amend Three Acts, of the Eighteenth, Thirtieth, and Forty-fourth Years of His present Majesty, for erecting a Court House for the holding of Sessions of the Peace in the City of Westminster,' as enacts that the Court House for the said city of Westminster shall be under the sole direction and management of the Justices of the Peace for the time being of the city and liberty of Westminster, shall be repealed; and that after the passing of this Act the controul and management of the said Court House, and all the powers and provisions respecting the same, in the said Acts vested in the Justices for the city and liberty, shall be vested in the Justices for the said county of Middlesex, as fully as if they had been named in the said Acts.

XV. That after the passing of this Act all the powers and property in respect of the said new bridewell by the before-mentioned Act, 7 Geo. 4. c. 42, vested in the Justices for the said city and liberty of Westminster, and also all the furniture, goods, and chattels belonging to the said new bridewell, shall be transferred to and vested in the Justices for the said county.

XVI. That so much of the said Act, 7 Geo. 4. c. 42, as enacts that no person or persons, other than or beside the Justices of the Peace for the said city and liberty of Westminster, and also the Commissioners for executing an Act, 23 Geo. 2. c. 27, intituled, 'An Act for the more easy and speedy Recovery of Small Debts within the City and Liberty of Westminster and that Part of the Duchy of Lancaster which adjoins thereto,' shall have power or authority to commit any person or persons to the said new bridewell or house of correction, or to the custody of the keeper thereof, shall be repealed; and that after the passing of this Act the said new bridewell shall become and be a house of correction for the county of Middlesex, under the management and controul of the Justices of the said county; and the Justices of the said county, the Magistrates of the police courts, the Judges of the Central Criminal Court, and all persons having by law the right to commit any offender or offenders to the house of correction in Cold Bath Fields, or to the gaol of Newgate as the common gaol of London and Middlesex, in execution of their judgments, shall have the like power of committal to the said new bridewell which they have of committing to the said house of correction or the said gaol of Newgate: Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall take away the right of the Justices for the city and liberty of Westminster and the said Commissioners to commit offenders to the said new bridewell, or enable any of the aforesaid Judges, Justices, or other persons to commit thereto any offender for any offence committed within the city of London, or elsewhere than in the county of Middlesex.

XVII. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

CAP. LXXII.

AN ACT to clear up Doubts as to the Regulation and Audit of the Accounts of the Customs in New South Wales.

(6th August 1844.)

Charges and expenses incident to the collection of the imports and exports to be audited in such manner as shall be directed by the Treasury.

By this Act,

After reciting, that by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 76, it was enacted, that the revenue therein mentioned of the colony of New South Wales shall be permanently charged with all the costs, charges, and expenses incident to the collection, management, and receipt thereof; such costs, charges, and expenses being subject, nevertheless, to be regulated and audited in such manner as shall be directed by any law of the governor and legislative council: And that doubts have arisen whether under and in pursuance of the said Act the costs, charges, and expenses incident to the collection, management, and receipt of the duties on goods imported and exported at the said colony are not subject to be regulated and audited in manner therein mentioned:

It is Declared and Enacted,

That the costs, charges, and expenses incident to the collection, management, and receipt of duties of goods imported or exported at the said colony are not, according to the true intent and meaning of the said recited Act, subject, and shall not be subject, to be regulated and audited in such manner as shall be directed by any law of the governor or the legislative council, but that all such costs, charges, and expenses of such duties of import and export are and shall be subject to be regulated and audited in such manner as shall be directed by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or by any three of them, anything in the said recited Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

CAP. LXXIII.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may reduce the duties on foreign books and prints in cases in which copyright is allowed to the country of export under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 12;

It is Enacted,

I. That whenever and so often as Her Majesty shall by virtue of the said recited power, by any Order or Orders in Council, declare that the authors, inventors, designers, engravers, or makers of any books, prints, or other works of art first published in any foreign country shall have the privilege of copyright therein, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any Order or Orders in Council, to declare that in respect of books and prints, or either of them, published in and imported from such foreign country, the duties of Customs now payable on the importation of books and prints respectively shall, from and after a time to be named in such order or orders, altogether cease and determine; and that in lieu thereof there shall be payable on such books or prints respectively, from and after such time as aforesaid, only such duties of Customs as are set forth in the Schedule to this Act annexed.

II. That with regard to books and prints published in and imported from any foreign country, between which country and Her Majesty there is now subsisting, and shall at the time of the making of any such Order in Council as is hereinafter described subsist, any treaty or convention binding Her Majesty to admit the books and prints of such country, either conditionally or unconditionally, into the United Kingdom, on the same terms as those of the most favoured nation, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by any Order or Orders in Council, to declare that in respect of books and prints, or either of them, published in and imported from such foreign country, the duties of Customs now payable on the importation of books and prints respectively shall, from and after a time to be named therein, altogether cease and determine, and that in lieu thereof there shall be payable on the importation of such books or prints respectively, from and after such time as aforesaid, only such duties of Customs as are set forth in the Schedule to this Act annexed: Provided always, that in case the privileges granted by any treaty to any foreign country, in respect of which any such Order or Orders in Council as last aforesaid shall by virtue of this enactment be issued, shall have been granted conditionally, such order shall expressly declare that such foreign country hath duly fulfilled the conditions required in return for such privileges, and that it is entitled thereto.

CAP. LXXIV.

AN ACT to explain and amend the Act for the Government of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land.

(6th August 1844.)

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Defining extent of convict establishment.—Proviso.
2. Repeal of part of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 76. s. 13.
3. Declaration of qualification to be made in the Council.
4. Repealing provision in recited Act as to payment of sums to be levied.
5. Enabling treasurer to pay amount named in the warrant.
6. Defining colony.
7. Extending the governor's powers as to giving or withholding the royal assent.
8. Defining "governor."
9. Commencement of Act.
10. Act may be amended this session.

By this Act,

After reciting that by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 76, intituled, 'An Act for the Government of New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land,' it is amongst other things enacted, that one half of the expense of the police establishment of the colony of New South Wales (exclusive of the convict establishment) shall be defrayed out of the general revenue arising from taxes, duties, rates, and imposts within the said colony, and the other half shall be defrayed by assessment upon the several districts of the colony in such proportions as shall be from time to time fixed by the governor and legislative council of the said colony: And that doubts have arisen as to what is the convict establishment so mentioned and referred to as aforesaid: Now therefore, for the removal of such doubts;—

It is Declared and Enacted,

1. That the convict establishment mentioned and referred to in the said recited enactment doth comprise and shall be construed to comprise such gaols and places of safe custody only as are or as shall be maintained for the reception of convicts actually undergoing therein sentences or commuted sentences of transportation from the United Kingdom, such gaols or places of safe custody being under the superintendence of officers for that purpose appointed by or under the authority of

Her Majesty, and remunerated by funds for that purpose appropriated by some Act of Parliament: Provided always, that if at any time any such gaol or place of safe custody shall be used for the imprisonment of any other offenders jointly with such convicts as aforesaid, then such gaol or place of safe custody shall be taken to be a convict establishment within the meaning of this Act and the said recited Act, so far only as relates to such convicts as aforesaid.

And after reciting that doubts have arisen as to the manner in which the declaration required by the said recited Act to be made in certain cases by candidates at the election of a member of the legislative council is to be made by candidates not present at the election;—

It is Enacted,

II. That so much of the said recited Act as renders any such candidate incapable of being elected until he shall have made such declaration shall be repealed.

III. That every elective member of the said legislative council, before he shall sit or vote in the said council after the election of a Speaker, shall make the said declaration in writing under his hand, by delivering to the clerk of the council, at the place where and while the council is sitting, with the Speaker in the chair, a paper signed by such member containing the said declaration, and also a statement of the county or counties in which the lands or tenements are situated out of which his qualification arises, with such other description thereof as may serve to identify the same, and the nature of his estate or interest therein or in the rents and profits thereof; and the said papers shall be filed and kept by the clerk with the other records of his office; and every elective member of the said council who shall sit and vote in the said council after the election of a speaker before making such declaration as aforesaid shall be liable, for every day on which he shall so offend, to a penalty of 200*l.*; and if he shall not be qualified according to the true intent and meaning of the said recited Act, his election shall be void, and a new writ shall be issued to elect another member in his stead.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act it is amongst other things enacted, that the treasurer of each district council of the said colony to whom any such warrant as therein mentioned shall come shall pay the amount mentioned in the warrant out of any monies in his hands belonging to the district, or, if there be no monies or an insufficient sum in his hands, the district council shall assess and levy the amount by a fair and equal rate upon all property within the district which the legislative council, or, until a bill for that purpose shall have been passed by the legislative council, and assented to by the governor, with the advice of his executive council, shall declare to be liable thereunto: And that the said recited enactment hath, by the accidental omission therein of certain words, been rendered obscure and ineffectual for the purposes thereof;—

It is Enacted,

IV. That the said last-recited enactment shall be repealed.

V. That the treasurer of each district council of the said colony of New South Wales to whom any such warrant as in the said recited Act mentioned shall come shall pay the amount mentioned in the warrant out of any monies in his hands belonging to the district, or, if there be no monies or an insufficient sum in his hands, the district council shall assess and levy the amount by a fair and equal rate upon all property within the district which the legislative council, or (until a bill for that purpose shall have been passed by the legislative council, and assented to by the governor), which the governor, with the advice of his executive council, shall declare to be liable thereunto.

And after reciting that it is by the said Act amongst other things provided, that it shall be lawful for the governor and legislative council of the said colony, in exercise of the powers to them respectively granted by the said Act, and in the manner and subject to the rules thereinbefore prescribed, to repeal, vary, or alter all or any part of the Acts therein recited, or any of them, or any law or ordinance made in pursuance thereof: And that doubts may arise whether the colony mentioned in the last said recited enactment is the colony of New South Wales or the colony of Van Diemen's Land:—

It is Declared and Enacted,

VI. That by the colony in the said last recited enactment mentioned is and shall be understood the colony of New South Wales, and not the colony of Van Diemen's Land.

And after reciting that by the said recited Act it is provided, that certain bills shall in every case be reserved by the governor for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure thereon, and the intent of such provision was to ensure that such bills as aforesaid should not be assented to by the governor without due consideration;—

It is Enacted,

VII. That it shall not be necessary for the governor to reserve any such bill for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure thereon from which in the exercise of his discretion, as limited in the said recited Act, he shall declare that he withholds Her Majesty's assent, or to which he shall have previously received instructions on the part of Her Majesty to assent, and to which he shall assent accordingly.

VIII. That by the word "governor," as employed in this Act, shall be understood the person for the time being lawfully administering the government of the said colony of New South Wales.

IX. That this Act shall be proclaimed by the governor of New South Wales within six weeks after a copy of it shall have been received by him, and shall take effect within the said colony from the day of the proclamation thereof.

X. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

By this Act,

For simplifying the assurance of property by deed :—

It is enacted as follows; that is to say,

- I. That the words and expressions hereinafter mentioned which in their ordinary signification have a more confined or a different meaning, shall in this Act, except where the nature of the provision or the context of the Act shall exclude such construction, be interpreted as follows; (that is to say,) the word "land" shall extend to manors, advowsons, messuages, lands, tithes, tenements, and hereditaments, whether corporeal or incorporeal, and to any undivided share thereof, and to any estate or interest therein, and to money subject to be invested in the purchase of land or any interest therein; the word "freehold" shall extend to customary freehold, or such customary land as will pass by deed, or deed and surrender, and not by surrender alone; the word "conveyance" shall extend to a feoffment, grant, release, surrender, or other assurance of freehold land; the word "person" shall extend to a corporation as well as an individual; and every word importing the singular number only shall extend and be applied to several persons or things as well as to one person or thing; and every word importing the masculine gender only shall extend and be applied to a female as well as a male.
- II. That every person may convey by any deed, without livery of seisin, or inrolment, or a prior lease, all such freehold land as he might before the passing of this Act have conveyed by lease and release; and every such conveyance shall take effect as if it had been made by lease and release: Provided always, that every such deed shall be chargeable with the same stamp duty as would have been chargeable if such conveyance had been made by lease and release.
- III. That no partition or exchange or assignment of any freehold or leasehold land shall be valid at law unless the same shall be made by deed.
- IV. That no lease in writing of any freehold, copyhold, or leasehold land, or surrender in writing of any freehold or leasehold land, shall be valid as a lease or surrender unless the same shall be made by deed; but any agreement in writing to let or to surrender any such land shall be valid and take effect as an agreement to execute a lease or surrender; and the person who shall be in the possession of the land in pursuance of any agreement to let may, from payment of rent or other circumstances, be construed to be a tenant from year to year.
- V. That any person may convey, assign, or charge by any deed any such contingent or executory interest, right of entry for condition broken, or other future estate or interest as he shall be entitled to, or presumptively entitled to, in any freehold or copyhold or leasehold land, or personal property, or any part of such interest, right, or estate respectively; and every person to whom any such interest, right, or estate shall be conveyed or assigned, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, according to the nature of the interest, right, or estate, shall be entitled to stand in the place of the person by whom the same shall be conveyed or assigned, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, and to have the same interest, right, or estate, or such part thereof as shall be conveyed or assigned to him, and the same actions, suits, and remedies for the same, as the person originally entitled thereto, his heirs, executors, or administrators, would have been entitled to if no conveyance, assignment, or other disposition thereof had been made; provided that no person shall be empowered by this Act to dispose of any expectancy which he may have as heir, or heir of the body inheritable, or as next-of-kin, under the statutes for the distribution of the estates of intestates of a living person, nor any estate, right, or interest to which he may become entitled under any deed thereafter to be executed, or under the will of any living person, and no deed shall by force of this Act bar or enlarge any estate tail: Provided also, that no chose in action shall by this Act be made assignable at law.

vi. That neither the word "grant" nor the word "exchange" in any deed shall have the effect of creating any warranty or right of re-entry, nor shall either of such words have the effect of creating any covenant by implication, except in cases where by any Act of Parliament it is or shall be declared that the word "grant" shall have such effect.

vii. That no conveyance shall be voidable only when made by feoffment or other assurance where the same would be absolutely void if made by release or grant; and that no assurance shall create any estate by wrong, or have any other effect than the same would have if it were to take effect as a release, surrender, grant, lease, bargain and sale, or covenant to stand seised (as the case may be).

viii. That after the time at which this Act shall come into operation no estate in land shall be created by way of contingent remainder; but every estate which before that time would have taken effect as a contingent remainder shall take effect (if in a will or codicil) as an executory devise, and (if in a deed) as an executory estate of the same nature and having the same properties as an executory devise; and contingent remainders existing under deeds, wills, or instruments executed or made before the time when this Act shall come into operation shall not fail, or be destroyed or barred, merely by reason of the destruction or merger of any preceding estate, or its determination by any other means than the natural effluxion of the time of such preceding estate, or some event on which it was in its creation limited to determine.

ix. That when any person entitled to any freehold or copyhold land by way of mortgage has or shall have departed this life, and his executor or administrator is or shall be entitled to the money secured by the mortgage, and the legal estate in such land is or shall be vested in the heir or devisee of such mortgagee, or the heir, devisee, or other assign of such heir or devisee, and possession of the land shall not have been taken by virtue of the mortgage, nor any action or suit be depending, such executor or administrator shall have power, upon payment of the principal money and interest due to him on the said mortgage, to convey by deed or surrender (as the case may require) the legal estate which became vested in such heir or devisee; and such conveyance shall be as effectual as if the same had been made by any such heir or devisee, his heirs, or assigns.

x. That the bond fide payment to and the receipt of any person to whom any money shall be payable upon any express or implied trust or for any limited purpose, or of the survivors or survivor of two or more mortgagees or holders, or the executors or administrators of such survivor, or their or his assigns, shall effectually discharge the person paying the same from seeing to the application or being answerable for the misapplication thereof, unless the contrary shall be expressly declared by the instrument creating the trust or security.

xi. That it shall not be necessary in any case to have a deed indented; and that any person, not being a party to any deed, may take an immediate benefit under it in the same manner as he might under a deed poll.

xii. That where the reversion of any land, expectant on a lease, shall be merged in any remainder or other reversion or estate, the person entitled to the estate into which such reversion shall have merged, his heirs, executors, administrators, successors, and assigns, shall have and enjoy the like advantage, remedy, and benefit against the lessee, his heirs, successors, executors, administrators, and assigns, for nonpayment of the rent, or for doing of waste or other forfeiture, or for not performing conditions, covenants, or agreements contained and expressed in his lease, demise, or grant, against the lessee, farmer, or grantee, his heirs, successors, executors, administrators, and assigns, as the person who would for the time being have been entitled to the mesne reversion which shall have merged would or might have had and enjoyed if such reversion had not been merged.

xiii. That this Act shall commence and take effect from the 31st of December 1844, and shall not extend to any deed, act, or thing executed or done, or (except so far as regards the provisions hereinbefore contained as to existing contingent remainders) to any estate, right, or interest created, before the 1st of January 1845.

xiv. That this Act shall not extend to Scotland.

It is Enacted,

1. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, by warrant under the hands of any three or more of them, to direct to be charged upon and paid to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, out of the Consolidated Fund of the said United Kingdom, or out of the growing

II. That within thirty days after the passing of this Act, and thereafter from time to time, all the capital stock of the old and new South Sea annuities, and of the annuities created under the provisions of an Act, 24 Geo. 2. c. 2, intitled, 'An Act for granting to His Majesty the Sum of Two million one hundred thousand Pounds, to be raised by Annuities and a Lottery, and charged on the Sinking Fund, redeemable by Parliament,' and managed by the said company, upon which no dividends shall have been demanded for the period of ten years or upwards next before the last day upon which any dividend upon any such annuities shall have become due or payable (except where the payment of any such dividends shall have been or shall be restrained by the order or injunction of a court of equity), shall be transferred, in manner hereinafter mentioned, in the books of the said company, from the account or accounts, name or names in which the same stands in the books of the said company, unto a new and separate account to be raised in the names of the Commissioners for the time being for the Reduction of the National Debt; and immediately after such transfer the name or names in which such annuities stood immediately before such transfer, and the residence and description of the parties, the amount transferred, and the dates of such transfers, shall be entered upon a list to be kept at the South Sea House for that purpose, which list shall be open for inspection at the usual hours of transfer at the South Sea House.

III. That a duplicate register of the list so made and kept at the South Sea House of all such transfers as aforesaid shall be kept in the office of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, in which an entry shall be made of every such transfer immediately after the same shall have been made.

IV. That all dividends upon the annuities so transferred, from the respective times of the transfer thereof, and all balances of sums issued for paying any part of the principal sums invested in such annuities which shall not have been demanded for the same period, shall be paid to the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt for the time being, and shall be from time to time invested by the said Commissioners in the purchase of capital stock in some of the public stocks or funds of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to be placed to a separate account to be called "The Account of Unclaimed Dividends," and so from time to time as such dividends and balances of principal sums become due, and can be so invested; and all such dividends and balances, and the capital stock arising from the investment thereof as aforesaid, shall be held by the said Commissioners for the public, subject nevertheless to such claims to such stock, and the dividends due thereon, as may thereafter be made by the respective parties entitled thereto.

V. That all transfers to be made by the said company in pursuance of this Act shall be made and signed by the accountant or the secretary of the said company for the time being, and shall be as valid as if signed by the party or parties in whose name or names the stock or annuities so transferred shall stand at the time of such transfer; and the said company, and the said accountant and secretary of the said company, shall be indemnified and saved harmless for making and executing all such transfers under this Act, and shall not be in any manner accountable to the person or persons entitled or claiming to be entitled to the annuities which shall be so transferred, or to his, her, or their executors, administrators, or to any other person claiming by, from, or under him, her, or them, or to any other person or persons whatsoever having or claiming any interest whatsoever therein.

VI. Provided and enacted, That it shall be lawful for the governor, sub-governor, or deputy-governor of the said company for the time being to give to any person or persons who shall shew, to the satisfaction of such governor, sub-governor, or deputy governor, his, her, or their right and title to any such capital stock, a certificate thereof, directed to the said Commissioners; and on production of such certificate it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners, or the comptroller general or assistant comptroller, or chief clerk acting under the said Commissioners, to re-transfer any such capital stock, and to pay the dividends due thereon, and also to pay any such principal sum of money as aforesaid, as if the same had not been transferred or paid to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; but in case the said governor, sub-governor, or deputy-governor shall not be satisfied of the justice or legality of any claim or claims which shall be made to any stock or annuities so transferred or paid to the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, then the claimant or claimants may, by petition in a summary way, state and verify his, her, or their claim to such stock or money to the High Court of Chancery; and a copy of every such petition shall be served upon Her Majesty's Attorney General for the time being, and also upon the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; and the Court to which such petition shall be presented shall make such order thereon, either for the transfer of the stock or annuities to which such petition shall refer, and for payment of the dividends which shall have become due and payable thereon, or for the payment of such principal sum of money as aforesaid, or otherwise relating thereto, and to the costs of such application, as to such Court shall seem just; and all costs and expenses which shall be incurred by or on behalf of Her Majesty's Attorney General, or the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, in resisting or appearing upon every such petition, (if not ordered by the Court to which the application shall be made to be paid out of the stock or annuities, and the dividends thereby claimed,) shall be paid by the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt out of the dividends or money to be received by them under this Act, and which shall not be claimed.

VII. That the said company, and the governor, sub-governor, and deputy-governor of the said company, and the accountant and secretary of the said company, and the said Commissioners, comptroller general, assistant comptroller, or chief clerk, shall be indemnified and saved harmless for any transfer or transfers which shall be made from the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt for the time being of any such stock or annuities as aforesaid, and also for the payment of the dividends due thereon, and also for the payment of any such principal sums of money as aforesaid, to any person or persons claiming such annuities and sums of money respectively, and shall not be answerable for the same to any new or other claimant or claimants; but such new or other claimant or claimants shall have their recourse against the person or persons to whom such transfer or payment of the said annuities or monies shall have been made.

VIII. Provided and enacted, That if in any case where such new or other claimant or claimants as aforesaid shall have established his, her, or their right and title to any such annuities or monies as shall have been transferred or paid to a first claimant or claimants, and shall not be able to obtain the transfer and payment thereof from such first claimant or claimants to whom the same shall have been erroneously transferred and paid, then the said Court of Chancery, upon application by petition of such new or other claimant or claimants, verified as such Court shall require, shall order the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt to transfer to such new or other claimant or claimants such sum or sums in stock, and to pay him, her, or them such sum or sums in money, as and for the dividends, annuities, and monies aforesaid, as to such Court shall appear to be just, which transfers shall be made from stock transferred into the names of the said Commissioners under this Act; and the payment of dividends and annuities shall be made from dividends received by such Commissioners upon such stock transferred into their names as aforesaid, or the accumulations thereof, or from the sale of stock purchased from such dividends or accumulations, or any other monies at the disposition of the said Commissioners.

IX. That within thirty days after the 10th of October next, and within thirty days after the 5th of January, the 5th of April, the 5th of July, and the 10th of October 1845, and in every following year, an account shall be taken of the lowest amount of the balances in the hands of the said company on account of the said Old and New South Sea Annuities, and the annuities created by the said Act 24 Geo. 2. c. 2. due and not demanded, and also of sums which shall have been issued for the payment of any of the principal sums invested in such annuities remaining unclaimed; and it shall be lawful for the said company to retain a balance not exceeding 10,000*l.* out of such balances; and the whole of the surplus of such balances over and above the said sum of 10,000*l.* shall be paid, on or before the 5th of January, the 5th of April, the 5th of July, and the 10th of October 1845, and every following year, into the Bank of England to the credit of Her Majesty's Exchequer, and shall be carried to the account of the Consolidated Fund; and if at any time before the payment of the whole of the principal sums invested in the said annuities the monies remaining in the hands of the said company for payment of the said annuities or principal sums shall be reduced by any such payment into the Bank of England below the sum of 7,000*l.*, the said company shall in every such case send a certificate signed by their accountant to the Commissioners of the Treasury, and also to the Comptroller General of the Exchequer, setting forth the true amount of the balance of the said monies in their hands; and the Commissioners of the Treasury, by warrant under the hands of any three or more of them, shall direct to be charged upon and paid out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund such sum of money to the said company as shall be sufficient to make up the said balance to the sum of 10,000*l.*; and in every case in which such sum shall not be issued to the said company upon such certificate as aforesaid, interest after the rate of 5*l.* in the 100*l.* by the year shall be charged by and paid to the said company upon such sum until the same shall be issued and paid to the said company.

And after reciting that the said South Sea Company have assented to a reduction of the sums heretofore allowed to them for the charges of the management of the unredeemed public debt managed by them:—

It is Enacted,

X. That after the 5th of January 1845 there shall be issued and paid to the said company, for the charges of management of the unredeemed public debt managed by the said company, a sum estimated at the rate of 300*l.* by the year for each million of the capital of such debt; and as soon after the said 5th of January as conveniently may be there shall be made out an account of the total capital of unredeemed public debt by the said company as it shall stand on the said 5th of January; and the said allowance for the management of the said debt for the year ending on the 5th of January 1846 shall be computed on the capital as it stood on the 5th of January 1845, and shall be paid to the said company in one sum before the 5th of April 1846; and the allowance for management shall be computed and paid in like manner in every succeeding year; and the said allowances shall be instead of all other charges and allowances made or to be made to the said company for management of the said debt during the year 1845, and the following years, by any Act or agreement now in force: Provided always, that no such reduction as aforesaid in the charge of management shall be made until the said guarantee fund shall have been completed and transferred to the said company.

XI. That this Act may be amended or repealed by any Act to be passed in this session of Parliament.

It is Enacted,

I. That after the 31st of March 1845 all the rules prescribed by the rubrick concerning the solemnizing of marriages shall continue to be duly observed, except as hereinafter provided, by every person in holy orders of the United Church of England and Ireland who shall solemnize any marriage in Ireland: Provided always, that the giving of notice to the registrar and the issue of the registrar's certificate for marriage without licence, as hereinafter mentioned, may be used and shall stand instead of the publication of banns, to all intents and purposes, where no such publication shall have been made; and every person in holy orders of the United Church of England and Ireland shall be bound to solemnize marriage on production of such certificate, in like manner as he is required to do by any law or canon now in force, after due publication of banns, so nevertheless that the church wherein any marriage according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland shall so be solemnized shall be within the district of the registrar by whom such certificate as aforesaid shall have been issued.

II. That nothing in this Act contained shall affect the right of the Archbishop of Armagh and his successors, and his and their proper officers, to grant special licences to marry at any convenient time or place, or, except as hereinafter provided, the right of any surrogate or other person now having authority to grant licences for marriage; provided that no surrogate or other person now having authority to grant licences for marriages shall grant any licence for marriage, not being a special licence, until seven days after notice shall have been given by one of the parties who shall have resided for not less than seven days then next preceding in the parish named in that notice, under his or her hand, in the form of Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, to such surrogate or other person having authority to grant licences as aforesaid, which notices he shall file and keep with the records of his office, and he shall also forthwith enter a true copy of such notices fairly in a book to be for that purpose furnished to him by the registrar general hereinafter mentioned, to be called "The Marriage Notice Book," which book shall be open at all reasonable times, without fee, to all persons desirous of inspecting the same; and such surrogate or other person shall forthwith send a copy of such notice to the incumbent or incumbents of the parish or parishes in which the parties intending marriage dwell; and for entering every such notice the surrogate or other person shall be entitled to have a fee of 1s., over and above the accustomed fee for granting the licence; and after the said 31st of March no person applying for any such licence shall be required to give any security by bond or otherwise before the grant of such licence; and whenever a marriage shall not be had within three calendar months after the notice shall have been so given to the surrogate or other person as aforesaid, the notice, and any licence which may have been granted thereupon, shall be utterly void.

III. That nothing in this Act contained shall affect any marriages by any Roman Catholic priest which may now be lawfully celebrated, nor extend to the registration of any Roman Catholic chapel, but such marriages may continue to be celebrated in the same manner and subject to the same limitations and restrictions as if this Act had not been passed.

IV. That marriages between parties, both of whom are Presbyterians, may be solemnized according to the forms used by Presbyterians, either by the licence of a Presbyterian minister, or by publication of banns, as hereinafter respectively mentioned, in meeting houses to be certified as hereinafter mentioned, between the hours of eight in the morning and two in the afternoon, with open doors, and in the presence of two or more credible witnesses; and marriages between parties, of whom one only is a Presbyterian, may be solemnized according to the same forms, by such licence of a Presbyterian minister, in such meeting houses, between the same hours, with open doors, and in the presence of two or more credible witnesses: provided that in either case there be no lawful impediment to the marriage of such parties.

V. That after the said 31st of March, in every case in which a marriage shall be proposed to be solemnized by a Presbyterian minister between two Presbyterians, otherwise than by licence, banns of matrimony shall be published by or in the presence of a Presbyterian minister in the Presbyterian meeting house, certified as hereinafter is mentioned, frequented by the congregation of which the parties to be married shall be members, upon three Sundays preceding the solemnisation of the marriage, during the time of divine service, and any such marriage by a Presbyterian minister shall be solemnized in such meeting house, and not elsewhere; and whenever it shall happen that the parties to be married by a Presbyterian minister shall be members of different congregations the banns shall in like manner be published in the certified Presbyterian meeting house frequented by the congregation of which each of the parties to be married shall be a member; and in every such last-mentioned case of publication of banns the Presbyterian minister by or in whose presence such banns shall be published shall, in writing under his hand, certify the publication thereof; and any such marriage by a Presbyterian minister shall be solemnized in one of the certified Presbyterian meeting houses where such banns shall have been published, and in no other place whatsoever; and before such marriage shall be solemnized the certificate of the Presbyterian minister by whom or in whose presence the banns shall have been published in the other certified meeting house shall be delivered to the Presbyterian minister solemnizing such marriage.

vi. That no Presbyterian minister shall publish or allow to be published any banns of matrimony in any Presbyterian meeting house of which he is minister, unless the persons to be married shall six days at the least before the time required for the first publication of such banns, deliver or cause to be delivered to such Presbyterian minister a notice in writing of their true christian and surnames, and of the congregation or congregations of which they shall respectively be members, and of the house or houses of their respective abodes, and of the time during which they have dwelt, inhabited, or lodged in such house or houses respectively.

vii. That each presbytery of Presbyterians in Ireland may from time to time, subject to the approbation of the Lord Lieutenant, appoint one or more ministers, who shall certify to the registrar hereinafter mentioned that the meeting house to be described in every such certificate is within such presbytery, and is used as a place of public religious worship, by Presbyterians in connexion with such presbytery; and such minister shall deliver to the registrar such certificate, signed in duplicate by him; and the registrar shall send both certificates to the registrar general, who shall cause such meeting house to be registered accordingly in a book to be kept for that purpose at the general register office hereinafter mentioned; and the registrar general shall cause to be indorsed on both certificates the date of the registry, and shall keep one certificate with the other records of the general register office, and shall return the other certificate to the registrar, who shall keep the same with the other records of his office; and the registrar shall enter the date of the registry of such meeting house in a book to be furnished to him for that purpose by the registrar general, and shall give a certificate of such registry, under his hand, on parchment or vellum, to the minister by whom the certificates shall have been signed, and shall give public notice of the registry thereof by advertisement in some newspaper circulating within the county, and in the Dublin Gazette; and for every such entry, certificate, and publication the registrar shall receive at the time of delivery to him of the certificates the sum of 1*l.*; and every such minister shall continue to exercise the powers given to him by this Act during the pleasure of the Lord Lieutenant.

viii. That every such minister so appointed and approved as aforesaid shall have authority to grant licences for marriage in any Presbyterian meeting-house, certified as aforesaid within his presbytery, in the form of Schedule (C.) to this Act annexed, and for every such licence shall be entitled to have of the party requiring the same the sum of 5*s.*; and in any case in which such minister shall refuse to grant such licence the person applying for the same shall be entitled to appeal to the presbytery by which such minister shall have been appointed, which shall thereupon either confirm the refusal or direct the grant of the licence; and every such Presbyterian minister shall four times in every year, on such days as shall be appointed by the registrar general, make a return to the registrar general of every licence granted by him since his last return, and of the particulars stated concerning the parties: Provided always, that no such minister shall grant any such licence until he shall have given security by his bond in the sum of 100*l.* to the registrar general for the due and faithful execution of his office.

ix. That before any licence for marriage as last aforesaid shall be granted by any such Presbyterian minister, one of the parties intending marriage shall appear personally before such minister, and such party shall make and subscribe an oath, or a solemn affirmation or declaration instead of taking an oath, which oath, affirmation, or declaration such minister is hereby authorized to administer, that he or she believeth that there is not any impediment of kindred or alliance, or other lawful hindrance to the said marriage, and that one of the said parties hath for the space of fifteen days immediately before the day of the grant of such licence had his or her usual place of abode within the presbytery within which the marriage is to be solemnized, and that they are both of the full age of twenty-one years, or, when either of the parties shall be under the age of twenty-one years, that the consent of the person or persons whose consent to such marriage is required by law has been obtained thereto, or that there is no person having authority to give such consent, or that such party is a widower or widow, as the case may be.

x. That the party so appearing personally before the minister authorized to grant licences as aforesaid shall, seven days before the licence shall be delivered to him, produce to such minister a certificate according to the form in Schedule (D.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, from the minister of the congregation of which he or she shall be a member, and has been a member for at least one calendar month preceding, which certificate the minister authorized to grant licences as aforesaid shall carefully file and preserve in such place and manner as the presbytery shall direct, and shall also forthwith enter a true copy of all such certificates fairly into a book to be for that purpose furnished to him by the registrar general, to be called "The Marriage Notice Book," which book shall be open at all reasonable times, without fee, to all persons desirous of inspecting the same; and for entering every such notice the minister shall be entitled to a fee of 1*s.*

xi. That any person may enter a caveat with the minister so appointed and approved against the grant of a licence for the marriage of any person named therein; and if any caveat be entered with such minister, such caveat being duly signed by or on behalf of the person who enters the same, together with his or her place of residence, and the ground of objection on which his or her caveat is founded, no licence shall issue or be granted until the minister shall have examined into the matter of the caveat, and is satisfied that it ought not to obstruct the grant of the licence for the said marriage, or until the caveat be withdrawn by the party who entered the same; and in cases of doubt it shall be lawful for such minister to refer the matter of any such caveat to the presbytery by which he shall have been appointed, which shall decide upon the same.

xii. That the Society of Friends commonly called Quakers, and also persons professing the Jewish religion, may continue to contract and solemnize marriage according to the usages of the said society and of the said persons respectively; and every such marriage shall be deemed good in law, provided that the parties to such marriage be both of the said society, or both persons professing the Jewish religion respectively; provided also, that notice to the registrar shall have been given, and the registrar's certificate shall have issued in manner hereinafter provided.

XIII. That in every case of marriage intended to be solemnized in Ireland after the said 31st of March according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland (unless by licence or by special licence, or after publication of banns), and in every case of marriage intended to be solemnized in Ireland after the said 31st of March according to the usages of the Quakers or Jews, or according to any form authorized by this Act, one of the parties shall give notice under his or her hand, in the form of Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, to the registrar, appointed as hereinafter is mentioned, of the district within which the parties shall have dwelt for not less than seven days then next preceding, or if the parties dwell in the districts of different registrars shall give the like notice to the registrar of each district, and shall state therein the name and surname and the profession or condition of each of the parties intending marriage, the dwelling place of each of them, and the time not being less than seven days during which each has dwelt therein, and the church or other building in which the marriage is to be solemnized, which must be within the district within which one of the parties shall have dwelt for the time last aforesaid; but if either party shall have dwelt in the place stated in the notice during more than one calendar month it may be stated therein that he or she hath dwelt there one month and upwards: Provided always, that no such notice shall be required for any marriage by a Roman Catholic priest which may now lawfully be celebrated, or when the marriage is intended to be solemnized by a Presbyterian minister between two persons, both or one of whom shall be Presbyterians, in a Presbyterian meeting-house certified as aforesaid.

XIV. That the registrar shall file all such notices, and keep them with the records of his office, and shall also forthwith enter a true copy of all such notices fairly into a book to be for that purpose furnished to him by the registrar general, to be called "The Marriage Notice Book;" the cost of providing which shall be defrayed in like manner as the cost of providing the register book hereinafter mentioned; and the Marriage Notice Book shall be open at all reasonable times, without fee, to all persons desirous of inspecting the same; and for every such entry the registrar shall be entitled to have a fee of 1s.

XV. That on the day previous to each weekly meeting of the guardians of any poor law union, or of any parish or place comprising the district for which such registrar shall act, the registrar shall transmit to the clerk to the guardians all such notices of intended marriage as he shall have received on or since the day previous to the weekly meeting immediately preceding the same; and such clerk shall read such notices immediately after the minutes of the proceedings of such guardians at their last meeting shall have been read; and such notices shall be so read three several times in three successive weeks at the weekly meetings of such guardians, unless in any case licence for marriage shall be sooner granted, and notice of such licence being granted shall have been given to such clerk: Provided also, that if it shall happen that the board of guardians of any such union, parish, or place shall not so meet, it shall be sufficient for the purposes of this Act that such notices shall be read at every meeting of such guardians which shall be held within twenty-one days from the day of such notice being entered; and if no meeting be held within twenty-one days from the day of such notice being entered, the entry of such notice shall be sufficient for the purposes aforesaid.

XVI. That after the expiration of seven days if the marriage is to be solemnized by licence, or of twenty-one days if the marriage is to be solemnized without licence, after the day of the entry of such notice, the registrar, upon being requested so to do by or on behalf of the party by whom the notice was given, shall issue under his hand a certificate in the form of Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed, provided that no lawful impediment be shewn to the satisfaction of the registrar why such certificate should not issue, and provided that the issue of such certificate shall not have been sooner forbidden in manner hereinafter mentioned by any person or persons authorized in that behalf as hereinafter is provided; and every such certificate shall state the particulars set forth in the notice, the day on which the notice was entered, and that the full period of seven days or of twenty-one days (as the case may be) has elapsed since the day of the entry of such notice, and that the issue of such certificate has not been forbidden by any person or persons authorized in that behalf; and for every such certificate the registrar shall be entitled to have a fee of 1s.

XVII. That the registrar general shall furnish to every registrar a sufficient number of forms of certificates, the cost of which shall be accounted for by the registrar to the registrar general; and in order to distinguish the certificates to be issued for marriages by licence from the certificates to be issued for marriages without licence, a water-mark in the form of the word "Licence," in Roman letters, shall be laid and manufactured in the substance of the paper on which the certificates to be issued for marriage by licence shall be written or printed; and every certificate to be issued for marriage by licence shall be printed with red ink, and every certificate to be issued for marriage without licence shall be printed with black ink, and such other distinctive marks between the two kinds of certificate shall be used from time to time as shall seem fit to the registrar general.

XVIII. That any person authorized in that behalf may forbid the issue of the registrar's certificate by writing at any time before the issue of such certificate the word "forbidden" opposite to the entry of the notice of such intended marriage in the Marriage Notice Book, and by subscribing thereto his or her name and place of abode, and his or her character, in respect of either of the parties, by reason of which he or she is so authorized; and in case the issue of any such certificate shall have been so forbidden the notice and all proceedings thereupon shall be utterly void.

XIX. That after the said 31st of March no marriage shall be solemnized in Ireland by licence either of a surrogate or deputy surrogate, or of a Presbyterian minister or a registrar, as herein provided, where either of the parties, not being a widower or widow shall be under the age of twenty-one years, unless the consent of the father of such of the parties so under age (if then living) be first had and obtained, or if dead of the guardian or guardians of the person of the party so under age lawfully appointed, or one of them, and in case there shall be no such guardian or guardians, then of the mother of such party, if unmarried, and if there shall be no mother unmarried, then of the guardian or guardians appointed by the Court of Chancery, if any, or one of them; and every person whose consent to a marriage by licence is required as aforesaid shall be authorized to enter a caveat against the issue of licence by any person empowered by this Act to grant licences, and shall be also authorized to forbid the publication of banns in any church or chapel, or certified Presbyterian meeting house, and to forbid the issue of the registrar's certificate.

XX. Provided and enacted, That if the father or fathers of the parties to be married, or one of them, so under age as aforesaid, shall be non compos mentis, or the guardian or guardians, mother or mothers, or any of them, whose consent is made necessary as aforesaid to the marriage of such party or parties, shall be non compos mentis, or in parts beyond the seas, or shall unreasonably or from undue motives refuse or withhold his, her, or their consent to a proper marriage, then it shall be lawful for any person desirous of marrying in any of the before-mentioned cases to apply by petition to the Lord Chancellor or the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal of Ireland for the time being, or Master of the Rolls, who shall be empowered to proceed upon such petition in a summary way; and in case the marriage proposed shall upon examination appear to be proper, the said Lord Chancellor, Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal for the time being, or Master of the Rolls, shall judicially declare the same to be so; and such judicial declaration shall be deemed and taken to be as good and effectual to all intents and purposes as if the father, guardian or guardians, or mother, of the person so petitioning, had consented to such marriage.

XXI. That after the said 31st of March every registrar shall have authority to grant licences for marriage in any building registered as hereinafter provided within his district, or in his office, in the form of Schedule (E.) to this Act annexed, and for every such licence shall be entitled to have of the party requiring the same the sum of 5s.; and every registrar shall four times in every year, on such days as shall be appointed by the registrar general, make a return to the registrar general of every licence granted by him since his last return, and of the particulars stated concerning the parties: Provided always, that no registrar shall grant any such licence until he shall have given security by his bond in the sum of 100l. to the registrar general for the due and faithful execution of his office: Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall authorize any registrar to grant any licence for marriage in any church or chapel in which marriages may be solemnized according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland, or in any church or chapel belonging to the said united church, or licensed for the celebration of divine worship, according to the rites and ceremonies of the said united church, or any licence for a marriage between two persons, both or one of whom shall be Presbyterians, in a Presbyterian meeting house certified as aforesaid.

XXII. That before any licence for marriage shall be granted by any such registrar one of the parties intending marriage shall appear personally before such registrar, and, in case the notice of such intended marriage shall not have been given exclusively to such registrar, shall deliver to him the certificate of the other registrar to whom such notice shall have been given, and such party shall make oath, or shall make his or her solemn affirmation or declaration instead of taking an oath, that he or she believeth that there is not any impediment of kindred or alliance or other lawful hindrance to the said marriage, and that one of the said parties hath for the space of fifteen days immediately before the day of the grant of such licence had his or her usual place of abode within the district within which such marriage is to be solemnized, and that they are both of the full age of twenty-one years, or, where either of the parties shall be under the age of twenty-one years, that the consent of the person or persons whose consent to such marriage is required by law has been obtained thereto, or that there is no person having authority to give such consent, or that such party is a widower or widow, as the case may be.

XXIII. That any person, upon the payment of the sum of 5s., may enter a caveat with the registrar against the grant of a certificate or a licence for the marriage of any person named therein; and if any caveat be entered with the registrar, such caveat being duly signed by or on behalf of the person who enters the same, together with his or her place of residence, and the ground of objection on which his or her caveat is founded, no certificate or licence shall issue or be granted until the registrar shall have examined into the matter of the caveat, and is satisfied that it ought not to obstruct the grant of the certificate or licence for the said marriage, or until the caveat be withdrawn by the party who entered the same; provided that in cases of doubt it shall be lawful for the registrar to refer the matter of any such caveat to the registrar general, who shall decide upon the same; provided likewise, that in case of the registrar refusing the grant of the certificate or licence the person applying for the same shall have a right to appeal to the registrar general, who shall thereupon either confirm the refusal or direct the grant of the certificate or licence.

XXIV. That after the said 31st of March no marriage after such notice as aforesaid, unless by virtue of a licence to be granted by the registrar, shall be solemnized or registered in Ireland until after the expiration of twenty-one days after the day of the entry of such notice as aforesaid; and no marriage shall be solemnized by the licence of any registrar or registered until after the expiration of seven days after the day of the entry of such notice as aforesaid.

XXV. That whenever a marriage shall not be had within three calendar months after the day on which the notice shall have been so entered by the registrar, the notice and certificate, and any licence which may have been granted thereupon, and all other proceedings thereupon, shall be utterly void; and no person shall proceed to solemnize the marriage, nor shall any registrar register the same, until new notice shall have been given, and entry made, and certificate thereof given, at the time and in the manner aforesaid.

XXVI. That the registrar's certificate, or, in case the parties shall have given notice to the registrars of different districts, the certificate of each registrar, shall be delivered to the officiating minister, if the marriage shall be solemnized according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland, or to the registering officer of the people called Quakers for the place where the marriage is solemnized, if the same shall be solemnized according to the usages of the said people, or to the officer of a synagogue by whom the marriage is registered, if the same shall be solemnized according to the usages of persons professing the Jewish religion, and in all other cases shall be delivered to the registrar present at the marriage, as hereinafter provided, and shall be by him kept with the records of his office.

XXVII. That any proprietor or trustee of a separate building, being a place of religious worship, may apply to the registrar of the district, in order that such building may be registered for solemnizing marriages therein, and in such case shall deliver to the registrar a certificate, signed in duplicate by ten householders at the least, that such building has been used by them during one year at the least as their usual place of public religious worship, and that they are desirous that such place should be registered as aforesaid, each of which certificates shall be countersigned by the proprietor or trustee by whom the same shall be delivered; and the registrar shall send both certificates to the registrar general, who shall cause such building to be registered accordingly in a book to be kept for that purpose at the General Register Office; and the registrar general shall cause to be indorsed on both certificates the date of the registry, and shall keep one certificate with the other records of the General Register Office, and shall return the other certificate to the registrar, who shall keep the same with the other records of his office; and the registrar shall enter the date of the registry of such building in a book to be furnished to him for that purpose by the registrar general, and shall give a certificate of such registry under his hand, on parchment or vellum, to the proprietor or trustee by whom the certificates are countersigned, and shall give public notice of the registry thereof by advertisement in some newspaper circulating within the county, and in the Dublin Gazette; and for every such entry, certificate, and publication the registrar shall receive at the time of the delivery to him of the certificates the sum of 1l.

XXVIII. That if at any time subsequent to the registry of any such building for solemnizing marriages therein it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the registrar general that such building has been disused for the public religious worship of the congregation on whose behalf it was registered as aforesaid, the registrar general shall cause the registry thereof to be cancelled; provided that if it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the registrar general that the same congregation use instead thereof some other such building for the purpose of public religious worship, the registrar general may substitute and register such new place of worship instead of the disused building, although such new place of worship may not have been used for that purpose during one year then next preceding; and every application for cancelling the registry of any such building, or for such substitution and registry of a substituted building, shall be made to the registrar general by or through the registrar of the district; and such cancelling or substitution, when made, shall be made known by the registrar general to the registrar, who shall enter the fact and the date thereof in the book provided for the registry of such buildings, and shall certify and publish such cancelling or substitution and registry in manner hereinbefore provided in the case of the original registry of the disused building; and for every such substitution the registrar shall receive from the party requiring the substitution the sum of 1l; and after such cancelling or substitution shall have been made by the registrar general it shall not be lawful to solemnize any marriage in such disused building, unless the same shall be again registered in the manner hereinbefore provided.

XXIX. That after the expiration of the said period of twenty-one days, or of seven days if the marriage is by licence, marriages may be solemnized in the registered building stated as aforesaid in the notice of such marriage, between and by the parties described in the notice and certificate, according to such form and ceremony as they may see fit to adopt: Provided nevertheless, that every such marriage shall be solemnized with open doors, between the hours of eight in the forenoon and two in the afternoon, in the presence of the registrar of the district in which such registered building is situate, and of two or more credible witnesses; provided also, that in some part of the ceremony, and in the presence of such registrar and witnesses, each of the parties shall declare,

Provided also, that there be no lawful impediment to the marriage of such parties.

XXX. That any persons who shall object to marry under the provisions of this Act in any such registered building may after due notice and certificate issued as aforesaid, contract and solemnize marriage on any day except Sunday at the office and in the presence of the registrar of the district, and in the presence of two witnesses, with open doors, and between the hours aforesaid, making the declaration and using the form of words hereinbefore provided in the case of marriage in any such registered building.

XXXI. That the registrar shall be entitled, for every marriage which shall be solemnized under this Act in his presence, to have from the parties married the sum of 10s. if the marriage shall be by licence, and otherwise the sum of 5s.

XXXII. That after any marriage shall have been solemnized it shall not be necessary in support of such marriage to give any proof of the actual dwelling of either of the parties previous to the marriage within the district or presbytery (as the case may be) wherein such marriage was solemnized for the time required by this Act, or of the consent of any person whose consent thereunto is required by law; and where a marriage shall have been solemnized in a certified Presbyterian meeting house, it shall not be necessary to prove that either of the parties was a Presbyterian, or, if the marriage was by licence, that the certificate required to be delivered to the minister granting such licence had been so delivered, or, where the marriage was by banns, that a certificate of the publication of banns had been produced to the minister by whom the marriage was solemnized, in cases where such production is required by this Act; nor shall any evidence be given to prove the contrary of any of these several particulars in any suit touching the validity of such marriage, or in which such marriage shall be questioned.

And after reciting that it is expedient that provision should be made, under proper restrictions, for relieving the inhabitants of populous districts remote from the parish church, or from any chapel wherein marriages may be lawfully celebrated according to the rites and ceremonies of the United Church of England and Ireland, from the inconvenience to which they may be thereby subjected in the solemnization of their marriages:—

It is Enacted,

XXXIII. That, with the consent of the patron and incumbent respectively of the church of the parish or district in which may be situated any public chapel with or without a chapelry thereunto annexed, or any chapel duly licensed for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the United Church of England and Ireland, or any chapel the minister whereof is duly licensed to officiate therein according to the rites and ceremonies of the United Church of England and Ireland, or without such consent after two calendar months notice in writing given by the registrar of the diocese to such patron and incumbent respectively, the bishop of the diocese may, if he shall think it necessary for the due accommodation and convenience of the inhabitants, authorize by a licence under his hand and seal the publication of banns and solemnisation of marriages in any such chapel for persons residing within a district the limits whereof shall be specified in the bishop's licence, and under such provisions as to the said bishop may seem fit, and as may be specified in the said licence; and the said licence shall be construed to extend to and authorize marriages in such chapels between parties, one or both of whom is or are resident within the said district: Provided always, that where the parties to any marriage intended to be solemnized after publication of banns shall reside within different ecclesiastical districts, the banns for such marriage shall be published as well in the church or chapel wherein such marriage is intended to be solemnized as in the chapel licensed under the provisions of this Act for the other district within which one of the parties is resident, and if there be no such chapel then in the church or chapel in which the banns of such last-mentioned party may be legally published: Provided also, that it shall be lawful for any patron or incumbent who shall refuse or withhold consent to the grant of any such licence to deliver to the bishop, under his or her hand and seal, a statement of the reasons for which such consent shall have been so refused or withholden; and no such licence shall be granted by any bishop until he shall have inquired into the matter of such reasons; and every instrument of consent of the patron and incumbent, or, if such consent be refused or withholden, a copy of the notice under the hand of the registrar, and every statement of reasons alleged as aforesaid by the patron or incumbent, with the bishop's adjudication thereupon under his hand and seal, shall be registered in the registry of the diocese; and thenceforth and until the said licence be revoked marriages solemnized in such chapel shall be as valid to all intents and purposes as if the same had been solemnized in the parish church, or in any chapel where marriages might heretofore have been legally solemnized.

XXXIV. That all fees, dues, and other emoluments on account of the solemnization of marriages, which belong to the incumbent or clerk respectively of any church or chapel in any parish or district within which the solemnization of marriages shall be authorized as aforesaid, shall respectively be received, until the avoidance of such church or chapel next after the passing of this Act, for and on account of such incumbent, and until the vacancy in the office of clerk next after the passing of this Act for and on account of such clerk, and be paid over to them, except such portion of the fees, dues, or other emoluments as the said bishop of the diocese, with the consent of the said incumbent and clerk respectively shall in such aforesaid licence assign to the minister and clerk respectively of the chapel in which the solemnization of marriages shall be authorized as aforesaid; and that it shall be lawful for the said bishop, in and by such licence, without any such consent, to declare that from and after such next avoidance or vacancy respectively the whole or such part of the fees, dues, and other emoluments on account of the solemnization of marriages in such last-mentioned chapel, as shall be specified in such licence, shall be receivable and the same shall thenceforth be received by or for the minister and clerk of such chapel respectively.

XXXV. That when the said bishop shall authorize the solemnization of marriages in any such chapel as aforesaid, without the consent of the patron and incumbent respectively, it shall be lawful for them or either of them to appeal within one calendar month to the archbishop of the province, who shall hear the same in a summary manner, and shall make such order confirming, revoking, or varying the licence so given, as to him shall seem meet and expedient, which order shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and shall be conclusive and binding on all parties whatsoever.

XXXVI. That there shall be placed in some conspicuous part in the interior of every chapel in respect of which such licence shall be given as aforesaid a notice in the words following; "Banns may be published and Marriages may be solemnized in this Chapel."

XXXVII. That all provisions which shall from time to time be in force relative to marriages, and to providing, keeping, and transmitting register books and copies of registers of marriages solemnized in any parish church, shall extend to any chapel in which the solemnization of marriages shall be authorized as aforesaid, in the same manner as if the same were a parish church; and everything required by law to be done relating thereto by the rector, vicar, curate, or churchwardens respectively of any parish church shall be done by the officiating minister, chapelwarden, or other person exercising analogous duties in such chapel respectively.

XXXVIII. Provided and enacted, That, notwithstanding any such licence as aforesaid to solemnize marriages in any such chapel, the parties may, if they think fit, have their marriage solemnized in the parish church, or in any chapel in which heretofore the marriage of such parties or either of them might have been legally solemnized.

XXXIX. That any such licence or order may at any time be revoked by writing under the hand and seal of the bishop of the diocese, with the consent in writing of the archbishop of the province; and such revocation and consent shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, the registrar whereof shall notify the same in writing to the minister officiating in the chapel, and shall also give public notice thereof by advertisement in some newspaper circulating within the county, and in the Dublin Gazette, and thenceforth the authority to solemnize marriages in such chapel shall cease.

XL. That in case of the revocation of the licence to solemnize marriages in any such chapel all registers of marriages solemnized therein under such licence which shall be in the custody or possession of the minister of such chapel at the time of such revocation shall forthwith be transmitted to the incumbent or officiating minister of the parish church and shall thenceforth be preserved, and in all other respects dealt with in the same manner, and be of the same force and validity, to all intents and purposes, as if they had been originally made by and deposited with such incumbent or officiating minister; and that such incumbent or minister shall, when he next transmits to the registrar copies of the registers of marriages solemnized in such parish church, also therewith transmit copies of all such entries as shall have been made in such first-mentioned registers subsequent to the date of the last entry a copy whereof was transmitted to the registrar, and shall also transmit to him one copy of every register book so transmitted to him of which no copy shall have been already transmitted to the registrar, having first signed his name at the foot of the last entry therein.

XLI. That the registrar of every diocese shall, within fifteen days after the said 31st of March, and also within fifteen days after the 1st of January, in every succeeding year, make out and send through the post-office, directed to the registrar-general of marriages at his office, a list of all chapels belonging to the United Church of England and Ireland within that diocese wherein marriages may lawfully be solemnized according to the rites and ceremonies of the United Church of England and Ireland, and shall distinguish in such list which have a parish, chapelry, or other recognised ecclesiastical division annexed to them, and which are chapels licensed by the bishop under this Act, and shall state therein the district for which each of such chapels is licensed according to the description thereof in the licence; and the registrar general shall in every year cause to be made out and printed a list of all such chapels, and also of all places of public worship registered under the provisions of this Act, and shall state in such list the county and registrar's district within which each chapel or registered building is situated, and shall add also the names and places of abode of the registrars; and a copy of such list shall be sent to every registrar.

XLII. That every marriage solemnized under this Act shall be good and cognizable in like manner as marriages before the passing of this Act according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland.

XLIII. That every person who shall enter a caveat with the registrar against the grant of any licence or issue of any certificate on grounds which the registrar general shall declare to be frivolous, and that they ought not to obstruct the grant of the licence, shall be liable for the costs of the proceedings, and for damages, to be recovered in a special action upon the case by either of the parties against whose marriage such caveat shall have been entered; and a copy of the declaration of the registrar general, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the General Register Office, and which seal it shall not be necessary to prove, shall be evidence that the registrar general has declared such caveat to be entered on frivolous grounds, and that they ought not to obstruct the grant of the licence.

XLIV. That every person who shall knowingly and wilfully make any false declaration or sign any false notice or certificate required by this Act, for the purpose of procuring any marriage, and every person who shall forbid the issue of any registrar's certificate, by falsely representing himself or herself to be a person whose consent to such marriage is required by this Act, or by falsely representing himself to be acting on behalf of such person, knowing such representation to be false, shall suffer the penalties of perjury.

XLV. That every person who after the said 31st of March shall knowingly and wilfully solemnize any marriage or pretended marriage in Ireland, unless by special licence of the Archbishop of Armagh and his successors, and his or their proper officers, in any other place than a church or chapel in which marriages may be solemnized according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland, or a Presbyterian meeting-house certified as aforesaid, or than the registered building or office specified in the notice and certificate as aforesaid, shall be guilty of felony (except in the case of a marriage by any Roman Catholic priest which may now be lawfully celebrated, or a marriage between two of the Society of Friends commonly called Quakers, according to the usages of the said society, or between two persons professing the Jewish religion, according to the usages of the Jews); and every person who in any such registered building or office shall knowingly and wilfully solemnize any marriage or pretended marriage in the absence of the registrar shall be guilty of felony; and every person who shall knowingly and wilfully solemnize any marriage or pretended marriage in Ireland after the said 31st of March (except by licence) within twenty-one days after the day of the entry of the notice to the registrar as aforesaid, or if the marriage is by licence within seven days after the day of the entry required by this Act made in any marriage notice book, or after three calendar months after the day of such entry, shall be guilty of felony.

XLVI. That every person knowingly and wilfully solemnizing any marriage, unless after due publication of banns or licence, or the issue of the registrar's certificate, or who shall knowingly and wilfully grant any such licence or publish any such banns, after the issue of such licence or the publication of such banns shall have been lawfully forbidden by some person authorized as aforesaid, shall be guilty of felony.

XLVII. That every registrar who shall knowingly and wilfully issue any certificate for marriage after the expiration of three calendar months after the day on which the notice shall have been entered by him as aforesaid, or any certificate for marriage by licence before the expiration of seven days after the day of the entry of the notice, or any certificate for marriage without licence before the expiration of twenty-one days after the day of the entry of the notice, or any certificate the issue of which shall have been forbidden as aforesaid by any person authorized to forbid the issue of the registrar's certificate, or who shall knowingly and wilfully register any marriage herein declared to be null and void, and every registrar who shall knowingly and wilfully issue any licence for marriage after the expiration of three calendar months after the day on which the notice shall have been entered by the registrar as aforesaid, or who shall knowingly and wilfully solemnize or permit to be solemnized in his office any marriage herein declared to be null and void, shall be guilty of felony.

XLVIII. That every prosecution under this Act shall be commenced within the space of three years after the offence committed.

XLIX. That, except in the case of marriages by Roman Catholic priests which may now be lawfully celebrated, if any persons shall knowingly and wilfully intermarry after the said 31st of March, in any place other than the church or chapel or certified Presbyterian meeting-house, in which banns of matrimony between the parties shall have been duly and lawfully published, or specified, in the licence, where the marriage is by licence, or the church, chapel, registered building or office, specified in the notice and registrar's certificate or licence as aforesaid, or without due notice to the registrar, or without certificate of notice duly issued, or without licence from the registrar, in case such notice or licence is necessary under this Act, or in the absence of a registrar where the presence of a registrar is necessary under this Act, or if any person shall knowingly or wilfully, after the said 31st of March, intermarry in any certified Presbyterian meeting-house without publication of banns, or any licence, the marriage of all such persons, except in any case hereinbefore excepted, shall be null and void.

L. That after the said 31st of March an Act, 9 Geo. 2. (I.) intituled, 'An Act for the more effectual preventing clandestine Marriages,' and so much of an Act 23 Geo. 2. (I.) for explaining and making more effectual the last-recited Act, as relates to the last-recited Act, shall be repealed; but that nothing in this Act shall extend to repeal any enactments now in force in Ireland for preventing the performance of the marriage ceremony by degraded clergymen.

LI. That if any valid marriage shall be had under the provisions of this Act by means of any wilfully false notice, certificate, or declaration made by either party to such marriage, as to any matter to which a notice, certificate, or declaration is heroin required, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty's attorney-general or solicitor-general for Ireland to sue in the Court of Chancery or Court of Exchequer in Ireland for a forfeiture of all estate and interest in any property accruing to the offending party by such marriage; and the proceedings thereupon and consequences thereof shall be the same as are provided in the like case with regard to marriages solemnised in England by licence before the passing of this Act according to the rites of the Church of England.

LXI. That in every case in which any registrar shall be removed from or cease to hold the said office, all register boxes, keys, books, documents, and papers in his possession as such registrar shall be given as soon as conveniently may be to his successor in office; and if any person shall refuse to give up any such box, key, books, documents, or papers in such case as aforesaid it shall be lawful for any Justice of the Peace for the county or other jurisdiction where such person shall be or reside, upon application made for that purpose, to issue a warrant under his hand and seal for bringing such person before any two Justices of the Peace for the said county or other jurisdiction; and upon such person appearing, or not being found, it shall be lawful for such Justices to hear and determine the matter in a summary way; and if it shall appear to the Justices that any such box, key, books, documents, or papers are in the custody or power of any such person, and that he has refused or wilfully neglected to deliver the same, the said Justices shall commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the said county or jurisdiction, there to remain without bail until he shall have delivered up the same, or until satisfaction shall have been given in respect thereof to the person in whose custody the same ought to be; and the said Justices may grant a warrant to search for such box, key, books, documents, or papers, as in the case of stolen goods, in any dwelling-house or other premises in which any credible witness shall prove upon oath before them that there is reasonable cause to suspect the same to be; and the same when found shall be delivered to the person in whose custody they ought to be.

LXII. By this Act,

After reciting that by the several Acts mentioned in Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed provisions are made for regulating the construction of buildings in the metropolis, and the neighbourhood thereof, within certain limits therein set forth; but forasmuch as buildings have since been extended in nearly continuous lines or streets far beyond such limits, so that they do not now include all the places to which the provisions of such Acts, according to the purposes thereof, ought to apply, and moreover such provisions require alteration and amendment, it is expedient to extend such limits, and otherwise to amend such Acts: And forasmuch as in many parts of the metropolis and the neighbourhood thereof the drainage of the houses is so imperfect as to endanger the health of the inhabitants, it is expedient to make provision for facilitating and promoting the improvement of such drainage: And forasmuch as by reason of the narrowness of streets, lanes, and alleys, and the want of a thoroughfare in many places, the due ventilation of crowded neighbourhoods is often impeded, and the health of the inhabitants thereby endangered, and from the close contiguity of the opposite houses the risk of accident by fire is extended, it is expedient to make provision with regard to the streets and other ways of the metropolis for securing a sufficient width thereof: And forasmuch as many buildings and parts of buildings unfit for dwellings are used for that purpose, whereby disease is engendered, fostered, and propagated, it is expedient to discourage and prohibit such use thereof: And forasmuch as by the carrying on in populous neighbourhoods of certain works, in which materials of an explosive or inflammable kind are used, the risk of accidents arising from such works is much increased, it is expedient to regulate not only the construction of the buildings in which such dangerous works are carried on, but also to provide for the same being carried on in buildings at safe distances from other buildings which are used either for habitation or for trade in populous neighbourhoods: And forasmuch as by the carrying on of certain works of a noisome kind, or in which deleterious materials are used, or deleterious products are created, the health and comfort of the inhabitants are extensively impaired and endangered, it is expedient to make provision for the adoption of all such expedients as either have been or shall be devised for carrying on such businesses, so as to render them as little noisome or deleterious as possible to the inhabitants of the neighbourhood; and if there be no such expedients, or if such expedients be not available in a sufficient degree, then for the carrying on of such noisome and unwholesome businesses at safer distances from other buildings used for habitation: And forasmuch as great diversity of practice has obtained among the officers appointed in pursuance of the said Acts to superintend the execution thereof in the several districts to which such Acts apply, and the means at present provided for determining the numerous matters in question which constantly arise tend to promote such diversity, to increase the expense, and to retard the operations of persons engaged in building, it is expedient to make further provision for regulating the office of surveyor of such several districts, and to provide for the appointment of officers to superintend the execution of this Act throughout all the districts to which it is to apply, and also to determine sundry matters in question incident thereto, as well as to exercise in certain cases, and under certain checks and controul, a discretion in the relaxation of the fixed rules, where the strict observance thereof is impracticable, or would defeat the object of this Act, or would needlessly affect with injury the course and operation of this branch of business: Now for all the several purposes above mentioned, and for the purpose of consolidating the provisions of the law relating to the construction and the use of buildings in the metropolis and its neighbourhood,—

It is Enacted,

I. That with regard to this Act generally, so far as relates to the operation thereof in reference to time, it shall come into operation at the following times; (that is to say,) as to the districts and the officers to be appointed in pursuance hereof on the 1st of September next, and as to the buildings, streets, and other matters on the 1st of January 1845; and that on the said 1st of January all the Acts mentioned in the Schedule hereunto annexed, except so far as in the said Schedule is provided, shall be and are hereby repealed.

II. And it is declared, with regard to this Act generally, so far as relates to the construction of certain terms and expressions used therein, that the following terms and expressions are intended to have the meanings hereby assigned to them respectively, so far as such meanings are not excluded by the context, or by the nature of the subject matter; (that is to say,)

The word "Street" to include every square, circus, crescent, street, road, place, row, mews, lane, or place along which carriages can pass or are intended to pass, and that whether there be or be not, in addition to the carriageway, a footway, paved or otherwise:

The word "Alley" to include any court, alley, passage, or other public place which can be used as a footway only:

The word "Story" to include the full thickness of such floor, as well as the space between the upper surface of one floor and the under surface of the floor next above it; or if there be no floor then the space between the surface of the ground and the under surface of the floor next above it:

The term "external Wall" to apply to every outer wall of buildings now built or hereafter to be built, which (excepting the footing thereof on one side) shall stand wholly upon ground of the owner of such buildings, and shall not be used or intended to be used as a party wall under the definition hereinafter contained, whether the same shall adjoin or not to other outer or to party walls:

The term "Party Wall" to apply to every wall which shall be used, or be built in order to be used, as a separation of two or more buildings with a view to the occupation thereof by different families, or which shall be actually occupied by different families, and also every wall which shall stand upon ground not wholly belonging to the same owner to a greater extent than the projection of its footing on one side:

The term "already built," used in reference to buildings, to apply to buildings built before the 1st of January 1845, or commenced before that day, and covered in and rendered fit for use within twelve months thereafter; and, used in reference to streets and alleys, to apply to all streets or alleys made or laid out before that day, and which shall be formed and rendered fit for use within twelve months thereafter;

The term "hereafter to be built," used in reference to buildings, to apply to all buildings to be built or commenced after the 1st of January 1845, or which, being commenced, shall not be covered in within twelve months thereafter; and, used in reference to streets and alleys, to apply to all streets or alleys not laid out before the said 1st of January, or which, being laid out, shall not be rendered fit for use within twelve months thereafter:

The word "Parish" to include all parochial districts and extra-parochial places in which separate churchwardens, overseers, or constables are appointed; and where two parishes have been united for ecclesiastical purposes, then to include such united parishes:

The word "Surveyor" to apply to all surveyors to be appointed in pursuance of this Act, or whose appointment is confirmed by this Act, and also to all deputy or assistant surveyors to be appointed under this Act:

The Words "the Surveyor," used without any addition, to mean the surveyor in whose district the buildings, street or alley, or other subject matter shall be, or any deputy or assistant surveyor duly acting in his behalf:

The word "Month" to mean a calendar month:

The expression "The Commissioners of Works and Buildings" to mean the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods, Forests, Land Revenues, Works, and Buildings :

The expression "Justice of the Peace" to mean a Justice of the Peace for the county, division, or liberty within which the building or other subject matter, or any part thereof, is situate; unless it be situate within the city of London or the liberties thereof, in reference to which any matter or thing elsewhere required or authorized to be done, either by one or by two or more Justices of the Peace, may be done, either by the Lord Mayor of the city of London, or by any one, two, or more Justices of the Peace for the said city; or unless the subject matter be situate in the district of any police court of the metropolis, in reference to which any matter or thing elsewhere required or authorized to be done by two or more Justices may be done by one magistrate :

And, generally, whensoever the name of an officer having local jurisdiction in respect of his office is referred to, without mention of the locality to which the jurisdiction extends, such reference is to be understood to indicate the officer having jurisdiction in that place within which is situate the building or other subject matter, or any part thereof, to which such reference applies :

And, subject as aforesaid to the context and to the nature of the subject matter, words importing the singular number are to be understood to apply to a plurality of persons or things, and words importing the masculine gender are to be understood to apply to persons of the feminine gender, and words importing an individual are to be understood to apply to a corporation or company, or other body of persons.

III. With regard to this Act generally, so far as relates to the operation thereof in reference to localities, that the operation of this Act shall extend to all places within the following limits; (that is to say,)

To all such places lying on the north side or left bank of the River Thames as are within the exterior boundaries of the parishes of Fulham, Hammersmith, Kensington, Paddington, Hampstead, Hornsey, Tottenham, Saint Pancras, Islington, Stoke Newington, Hackney, Stratford-le-Bow, Bromley, Poplar, and Shadwell :

And to such part of the parish of Chelsea as lies north of the said parish of Kensington :

And to all such parts and places lying on the south side or right bank of the said river as are within the exterior boundaries of the parishes of Woolwich, Charlton, Greenwich, Deptford, Lee, Lewisham, Camberwell, Lambeth, Streatham, Tooting, and Wandsworth :

And to all places lying within two hundred yards from the exterior boundary of the district hereby defined, except the eastern part of the said boundary which is bounded by the River Lea.

IV. And forasmuch as, partly by the rapid increase of population in the neighbourhood of the districts to which this Act is to apply, and partly by the tendency of this Act to induce building speculation in such neighbourhoods in order to evade the provisions thereof, the evils which have arisen in the districts not now subject to regulation will in all probability arise in such neighbourhoods, it is expedient to make provision for the prevention of such evils, and, if they should arise, for the remedy thereof; now for those purposes it is enacted, with regard to this Act generally, so far as relates to the application thereof to other parts and places in the neighbourhood of the districts appointed by this Act, whether such districts immediately adjoin such parts or places or not, That if, from the growing increase of the population or otherwise, it shall appear to Her Majesty in council to be expedient that the provisions of this Act should be extended to any place within twelve miles from Charing Cross in the city of Westminster, then it shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council to direct, by order in council, that at or from a time to be named in such order the provisions of this Act shall apply to such places; and at or from such time all such provisions, of whatever nature, whether penal or otherwise, so far as they shall be capable of application to such places, shall be and are hereby declared to apply thereto as if such places were expressly named herein; and that notice of the time when it shall please Her Majesty to order any such extension to be taken into consideration by her Privy Council shall be published by royal proclamation in the London Gazette one month at the least before such extension shall be so taken into consideration, and that three weeks at the least before such matter shall be so considered it shall be the duty of the official referees, and the overseers of the parishes within which such parts or places are situate, to cause copies of such proclamation to be fixed on the doors of the churches and chapels within such parishes; and that every order in council made in pursuance of this enactment shall be published in the London Gazette.

V. And now generally, for the purpose of regulating the building and the rebuilding upon sites of former buildings, and the enlarging and altering of all buildings of what nature soever, within the limits aforesaid, it is enacted, with regard to every such building hereafter to be built, (except the buildings comprised in Schedule (B.) hereto annexed, and except sewers made by or under the direction of any of Commissioners of Sewers,) so far as relates to building the same, and with regard to every such building either already or hereafter built, (except the said buildings comprised in the said Schedule (B.), and except the said sewers,) so far as relates to the rebuilding and the enlarging or altering the same, and that whether such buildings be built or rebuilt on old or new foundations, or partly on old and partly on new foundations, That, notwithstanding anything contained to the contrary in any Act of Parliament now in force, every such building shall be built, rebuilt, enlarged, or altered in reference to the walls, whether external or party walls, and to the number and height of the stories or rooms therein, and to the chimneys, and to the roofs, and to the timbers, and to the drains, and to the projections, and to any other parts or appendages of every such building, in the manner and of the materials, and in every other respect in conformity with the several particulars, rules, and directions which are specified and set forth in the several Schedules (C.), (D.), (E.), (F.), (G.), (H.), (I.), (K.) to this Act annexed, according to the classes of buildings, and the rates of such classes to which such buildings are by the Schedule (C.) declared to belong; subject nevertheless to any other rules and directions in this Act contained in the same behalf; and subject in every case of doubt, difference, or dissatisfaction in respect thereof, either between any parties concerned or between any party concerned and the surveyor of the district, to the determination of the official referees, upon a reference of the matter in question, according to the provisions of this Act in that behalf.

VI. With regard to all buildings of the first rate of the second or warehouse class, and to all buildings of the third or public building class (except the buildings hereinbefore excepted), so far as relates to the supervision thereof, That, subject to the provisions in Schedule (C.) and elsewhere in this Act made in respect thereof, every such building shall be built under the special supervision of the official referees, according to the provisions of this Act in that behalf, as well as under the ordinary supervision of the surveyor; and if any difference arise as to whether any such building be liable to such special supervision, the same shall be determined by the official referees; subject nevertheless to an appeal, at the instance of any party interested, to the Commissioners of Works and Buildings, whose decision in the matter shall be final.

VII. And after reciting that by several Acts now in force certain buildings and structures have been exempted from the operation of the Act mentioned in the Schedule (A.) hereto annexed, for the regulation of buildings and party walls within the cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and other the parishes and places therein mentioned; it is enacted, with regard to the buildings hereinbefore exempted and comprised in Schedule (B.), so far as relates to the supervision thereof, That, notwithstanding anything contained to the contrary in any Act or Acts now in force, every such building or other structure mentioned in the said Schedule (B.) Part I. shall be subject to special supervision by the official referees, according to the provisions of this Act in that behalf, and every such building or other structure mentioned in the said Schedule (B.) Part II. shall be exempt from supervision.

VIII. Provided and enacted, with regard to any building of whatever kind which is not hereby expressly assigned to any class or rate of a class, so far as relates to the application of this Act thereto, That if any party be desirous of erecting any building which does not come within any one of the said classes, or of any rate of such classes, then such building shall be built in accordance with such class and rate as shall be directed by the surveyor, subject, as in other cases of doubt, difference, or dissatisfaction, to an appeal to the official referees.

IX. Provided and enacted, with regard to any building of whatever class, so far as relates to the modification of any written contract or agreement now in force for erecting or altering such building (other than a contract or agreement in the nature of a building lease,) That it shall not be lawful to execute such contract otherwise than in conformity with the provisions of this Act; but it shall be lawful for either party and he is hereby entitled to deviate from such contract so far as any part thereof may remain to be executed after this Act shall have come into operation; and the alterations rendered necessary by this Act shall be performed as if this Act had been in force when such contract was entered into; and that if the parties thereto shall disagree about the difference of the costs and expenses of the works when performed according to the provisions of this Act, and the works as stipulated for in such contract, then, upon notice being given in writing by one party to the other, it shall be lawful for either party and he is hereby entitled to refer the matter to the surveyor, who shall determine the same, subject to appeal as aforesaid to the official referees; and the award of such official referees shall be final and binding on all the parties, and in all respects as if such award had formed part of the contract; and the costs of the reference shall be borne by all or any either of the parties in such manner and proportion as the surveyor, or in case of appeal as the official referees, shall appoint.

X. Provided and enacted, with regard to any building, of whatever class, so far as relates to the modification of any existing lease or agreement for a lease, being of the nature of a building lease, whereby any person may be bound to erect buildings, That, notwithstanding anything herein contained, if it be made to appear to the official referees that any rules by this Act prescribed will prevent the due observance of or be at variance with any such lease or agreement, and that the objects of this Act may be obtained by modifying such rules, either entirely or partially, in conformity with such lease or agreement, then it shall be lawful for the said official referees by their award to authorize such modification, subject, nevertheless, to the approbation of the Commissioners of Works and Buildings; and, subject to such modification, or in default thereof, it shall be the duty of such person so bound to erect buildings and he is hereby required to erect every building agreed to be built by such lease or agreement according to the conditions rendered necessary by this Act, in the same or like manner as if this Act had been passed and in operation at the time of making such lease or agreement; and that on the completion of such works, either according to the provisions of this Act or according to such modification aforesaid, and on giving to the lessor and other owners of such building fourteen days notice of his intention to apply to the official referees on this behalf, it shall be lawful for the lessee or tenant and he is hereby entitled to require the official referees to ascertain what loss, present and prospective, has been occasioned by the observance of the provisions of this Act, and, having regard to the respective terms and interests of the lessee or tenant, the lessor, and other owners of such building, and having regard to any profit, benefit, or advantage which may have accrued to such lessee or tenant since the execution of such lease or agreement, and which may appear to the said official referees not to have been in the contemplation of the parties to such lease or agreement at the time of such execution thereof as aforesaid, to determine whether he is entitled to any and what compensation, whether by payment of money or reduction of rent, or both, or otherwise; and that on the receipt of such requisition, and on proof of due notice thereof having been given to the lessor and other owners of such building, it shall be the duty of such official referees and they are hereby required to proceed to ascertain if any and what loss has been so occasioned, and, having regard as aforesaid to such terms and interest as aforesaid, and to such profit, benefit, or advantage as aforesaid, to determine if any and what compensation as aforesaid is to be paid in respect thereof, and by whom the same is to be paid, and in what proportions, and their decision in the matter shall be final.

XI. And for the purpose of preventing the express provisions of this Act from hindering the adoption of improvements, and of providing for the adoption of expedients either better or equally well adapted to accomplish the purposes thereof, it is enacted, with regard to every building of whatever class, so far as relates to the modification of any rules hereby prescribed, That if in the opinion of the official referees the rules by this Act imposed shall be inapplicable, or will defeat the objects of this Act, and that by the adoption of any modification of such rules such objects will be attained either better or as effectually, it shall be the duty of such official referees to report their opinion thereon, stating the grounds of such their opinion to the Commissioners of Works and Buildings; and that if on the investigation thereof it shall appear to the said Commissioners that such opinion is well founded, then it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners or any two of them to direct that such modification may be made in such rules as will in their opinion give effect to the purposes of this Act; and that although such official referees shall be of opinion that such modifications are not requisite or admissible, yet if any party interested present to the official referees a representation, setting forth the grounds whereon such modification is claimed, it shall be the duty of the official referees and they are hereby required to report such representation, as well as their opinion thereon, to the said Commissioners, with the grounds of such their report and opinion; and that thereupon, if the said Commissioners think fit, it shall be lawful for them or any two of them to direct the official referees to make such order in the matter as may appear to them to be requisite.

XII. With regard to buildings already built, so far as relates to the rebuilding thereof in conformity with this Act in respect of the required area, or in any other respect than the required height and thickness of walls. That if a full compliance with the provisions of this Act be attended by great loss and inconvenience, then, subject to the report of the official referees, and to the consent of the Commissioners of Works and Buildings, and to such terms as the said Commissioners may impose in that behalf, it shall be lawful for the parties concerned to rebuild such buildings on the site of the old buildings as near as may be practicable, but so that nevertheless both the party walls and the external walls be of the required height and thickness.

XIII. With regard to the works to be executed in pursuance of this Act, so far as relates to the supervision thereof by the surveyors, that two days before the following acts or events, that is to say,—

Before any building shall be begun to be built; and also

Before any addition or alteration, which by this Act is placed under the supervision of the surveyor, shall be made to any building; and also

Before any party wall, external wall, chimney stack, or flues shall be begun to be built, pulled down, rebuilt, cut into, or altered; and also

Before any opening shall be made in any party wall; and also

Before any other matter or thing shall be done which by this Act is placed under the supervision of the surveyor, except as hereinafter is provided;

It shall be the duty of the builder (by which term is to be understood, both in this provision and elsewhere throughout this Act, the master builder or other person employed to execute any work, or if there be no master builder or other person so employed, then the owner of the building or other person for whom or by whose order such work is to be done,) and he is hereby required to give to the surveyor, at his office, notice in the terms specified in the Form (No. 1.) contained in the Schedule of Notices annexed to this Act, or to the like effect; and that if any builder neglect to give such notice, or begin to build, or do any of the things aforesaid, before such notice, or before the expiration of such period of two days, then in every such case the party offending shall for every such default forfeit and pay to such surveyor treble the amount of the fees which such surveyor would have been entitled to receive for his trouble in inspecting the same, and shall also forfeit for every such default a sum not exceeding 20*l*.; and that if for any period exceeding three months any builder, having duly begun any building requiring compliance with the provisions of this Act, suspend the progress of such building, and again go on with the same, or if during the progress thereof the builder be changed, then, two days before such builder shall enter upon the performance of the work, it shall be the duty of such builder to give notice to the surveyor, and such notices must be in the terms specified in the Forms (Nos. 2. and 3.) contained in the Schedule of Notices annexed to this Act, or to the like effect, and must be given to the surveyor, or left at the surveyor's office, in like manner as is required upon beginning any new building, and that if any builder make default or neglect to give or leave such notice he shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding 20*l*.; and that if any such building, chimney, or wall be begun to be built, pulled down, rebuilt, cut into, or altered as aforesaid, or be proceeded with after any suspension of the progress thereof before such notice has been given; or if such surveyor or the official referees be refused admittance to inspect the same premises, then such building or work shall be liable to be abated as a nuisance under the provisions herein contained: Provided always, that if by reason of any emergency any act, matter, or thing placed under the supervision of the surveyor be required to be done immediately, or before notice can be given to the surveyor, then it shall be lawful for the builder or any person to do such act, matter, or thing so requisite, but upon this condition, that within forty-eight hours after beginning to execute such work notice thereof be given to the surveyor.

XIV. With regard to such buildings and works, so far as relates to the supervision thereof, That if in building, pulling down, rebuilding, cutting into or altering any part of any building, or party wall or external wall, or chimney stack or flue, drains, cesspools, or any work or other thing be done contrary to or not conformably with the rules and directions of this Act, then forthwith it shall be the duty of the surveyor and he is hereby required to give forty-eight hours notice, according to the Form (No. 4.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect, to the builder, foreman, or principal workman on the premises, to amend any such irregularity which he shall deem to have been committed, and forthwith after the expiration of such notice to proceed to inspect the work; and that if the work be so far advanced that he cannot ascertain whether the irregularity has been committed or not, or exists or not, then it shall be lawful for him and he is hereby empowered to order any work to be cut into, laid open, or pulled down, which shall in his opinion prevent his ascertaining whether any such irregularity exists or not; and that if within forty-eight hours the builder to whom any such notice shall have been given refuse or fail to amend any irregular work, or if any such builder, when ordered by the surveyor, refuse to cut into, lay open, or pull down any work which shall in his opinion prevent his ascertaining whether such irregular work exists or not, then, as soon as conveniently shall be, it shall be the duty of the surveyor to give information thereof to the official referees; and that upon the receipt of such information it shall be the duty of such official referees and they are hereby required to proceed to hear the matter, and if any breach of the rules, regulations, and directions of this Act be found to have been committed, or if there appear good reason to suppose any such breach has been committed and is concealed, then it shall be lawful for the official referees and they are hereby authorized to direct by their award that such building, party wall, external wall, chimney stack, flue, or other thing, or such part thereof as they shall deem necessary, shall be amended, removed, cut into, laid open, or pulled down; and that all the costs, charges, and expenses of the said work, and of the said application to the official referees, shall be borne by such party or parties as the official referees shall determine.

xv. And, for the purpose of making provision for the supervision of buildings of the first rate of the second or warehouse class, and of all buildings of the third or public building class (except the buildings hereinbefore excepted), it is enacted, with regard to every such building, so far as relates to the special supervision thereof, That when all the walls of any such building shall have been built to their full height, and all the timbers of the floors, roofs, and partitions shall have been fixed, it shall be the duty of the architect or builder and he is hereby required to give notice thereof to the official referees, according to the Form (No. 6.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and if the official referees be of opinion that such building is subject to the special supervision herein provided, then within seven days after such notice it shall be their duty to survey the said building; and that if they approve of the same, then within seven days after such survey to certify such approval, under their hands to the architect or builder; or that if any part of the walls, timbers, roof, or internal supports appear to such official referees defective, insufficient, or insecure, then within the said seven days after such survey they are hereby required to give to such architect or builder notice of such parts as shall so appear to them defective, insufficient, or insecure, which notice must be in writing; and that upon the receipt of such notice it shall be the duty of the said architect or builder and he is hereby required to amend and strengthen such defective, insufficient, or insecure parts; and that during or within a period of seven days after notice has been given to the official referees that such works have been amended or strengthened as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the official referees and they are hereby required to inspect the same, or in default thereof the said parts may be covered up; and that upon completion of every such building it shall be the duty of the architect or builder to give fresh notice to the official referees, according to the Form (No. 7.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and that thereupon, or within seven days after such notice, it shall be the duty of the official referees to survey the same; and that if upon such survey it shall appear that such building has been built sufficiently strong, and is sufficiently set to be safe, then within fourteen days after such survey it shall be their duty and they are hereby required to certify accordingly, which certificate must be under their hands and the seal of office of registrar of metropolitan buildings; and that, until such certificate shall have been made, or until fourteen days after such survey shall have elapsed without the official referees having given notice in writing that they are not satisfied, it shall not be lawful to use such building for any purpose whatever without the express authority in writing of the official referees under their hands and the seal of office of the registrar of metropolitan buildings; and that if before the certificate of satisfaction shall have been made, or if such further fourteen days as aforesaid shall have elapsed without due notice being given in writing as aforesaid, any such building subject to special supervision shall be used for any purpose without such express authority in writing, then, on conviction thereof before two Justices of the Peace, the occupier of such building, or other the person by whom such building shall be so used, shall forfeit for such offence a sum not exceeding 200*l.* for every day during which such building shall be so used without having obtained such certificate of satisfaction, or such express authority as aforesaid; and that, in determining the amount of any such penalty, it shall be the duty of the Justices and they are hereby directed to have regard to the size and character of the building, and to the nature and extent of danger involved in the use of such building, and to the amount of profit which might be derived from such use thereof.

xvi. With regard to the buildings comprised in Schedule (B.) Part I. to this Act annexed, so far as relates to the supervision thereof, that before the builder begin to build the same it shall be the duty of the architect or the builder and he is hereby required to give notice thereof to the official referees, and also, at the same time, to transmit for their inspection the plans, elevations, and other drawings which have been made for the same; and that forthwith thereupon it shall be the duty of the official referees and they are hereby required to proceed to survey the situation of the intended building with a view to ascertain whether such building can be erected on such situation with due regard to the security of the public; and that, from time to time during the progress of such building, it shall be the duty of such official referees and they are hereby directed to inspect the same with a view to ascertain the sufficiency thereof; and that if such building or any part thereof appear to such official referees defective, insufficient, or insecure, then they are hereby required to give to such architect or builder notice of such parts as shall so appear to them defective, insufficient, or insecure, which notice must be in writing; and that upon the receipt of such notice it shall be the duty of the said architect or builder, and he is hereby required to amend and strengthen such defective, insufficient, or insecure parts; and that during or within a period of seven days after notice has been given to the official referees that such works have been amended or strengthened as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the official referees, and they are hereby required to inspect the same, or in default thereof the said parts may be covered up; and that upon completion of every such building it shall be the duty of the architect or builder to give fresh notice to the official referees; and that thereupon, or within seven days after such notice, it shall be the duty of the official referees to survey the same; and that if upon such survey it shall appear that such building has been built sufficiently strong, then it shall be their duty to certify accordingly, which certificate must be under their hands and the seal of office of registrar of metropolitan buildings; and that until such certificate shall have been made, or until fourteen days after such survey shall have elapsed without the official referees having given notice in writing that they are not satisfied, it shall not be lawful to use such building for any purpose whatever without the express authority in writing of the official referees under their hands and the seal of office of the registrar of metropolitan buildings; and that if before the certificate of satisfaction shall have been made, or if such fourteen days as aforesaid shall have elapsed without due notice in writing being given as aforesaid, any such building subject to special supervision shall be used for any purpose without such express authority in writing, then, on conviction thereof before two Justices of the Peace, the occupier of such building, or other the person by whom such building shall be so used, shall forfeit for such offence a sum not exceeding 100*l.* for every day during which such building shall be so used without having obtained such certificate of satisfaction, or such express authority as aforesaid; and that, in determining the amount of any such penalty, it shall be the duty of the Justices and they are hereby directed to have regard to the nature and extent of danger involved in the use of such building, and to the amount of profit which might be derived from such use thereof.

xvii. With regard to buildings and works, so far as relates to the entry thereon for the supervision thereof, That at all times during the progress of any operations in respect thereof within the meaning of this Act, it shall be lawful for the surveyor and for the official referees, and they are hereby respectively authorized, to enter upon the premises upon which such operations have been commenced; and that if at any time whilst any building is in course of construction, demolition, alteration, or reconstruction any person refuse to admit the surveyor, or the official referees authorized under this Act, during the customary working hours, to inspect such building, or any person refuse or neglect to afford such surveyor or official referee every assistance which may be reasonably required in and about such inspection, then in every such case, on conviction thereof, the party offending shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding 20*l*.; and that if at any time during such customary working-hours the surveyor or the official referees be refused admittance to make inspection of any work, then for that purpose it shall be lawful for such surveyor or for such official referees, and they are hereby empowered, accompanied by a peace-officer, to enter upon the ground, building, and premises where the same shall be.

XVIII. And for the purpose of more effectually enforcing the observance of the provisions of this Act, it is enacted, with regard to any buildings, drains, timber buildings, chimneys and flues, party walls, party fence walls, external walls and projections, and every other part of every building of every class, or rate of any class, which shall be hereafter built, rebuilt, enlarged, or altered, within the limits of this Act, contrary to the provisions hereof, so far as relates to the removal thereof, That if the same be not built, rebuilt, enlarged, or altered in the manner and of the materials, and in every other respect according to and in conformity with the several rules and directions which are in this Act particularly specified, and if any person build or begin to build, or cause the building or beginning to build, or alter or cause to be altered, or use or cause to be used, any part of any ground or building, projection, drain, or other thing contrary thereunto, and if in either of such cases it so appear by the certificate of the official referees, then the said building, projection, drain, or other thing, or such part thereof so irregularly built or begun to be built, or so irregularly altered or begun to be altered or so used, shall be deemed a nuisance; and that thereupon it shall be the duty of the surveyor, and he is hereby directed to summon the builder before any two Justices of the Peace; and that if at the time and place appointed on such summons such builder fail to appear, then it shall be lawful for the said Justices and they are hereby authorized to issue a warrant under their hands and seals to compel such builder to appear before such Justices or any other two Justices; and that thereupon it shall be the duty of such builder and he is hereby required to enter into a recognizance, in such sum as the said Justices shall appoint, for abating and taking down the same within such convenient time as the said Justices shall respectively appoint, or otherwise for amending the same according to such rules and directions as are herein contained, and also for paying the costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the surveyor in laying the information and obtaining the conviction, including such compensation for the surveyor's loss of time as the said Justices shall think fit; and that if the party so required fail to enter into such recognizance, then it shall be lawful for either of such Justices or any Justice, and they are hereby required, to commit such builder to the common gaol of the city, county, or liberty where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or main-prize until he shall have entered into such recognizance as aforesaid, or until such irregular building shall have been abated or demolished or otherwise amended, or such nuisance shall be abated or demolished by order of such Justices respectively (which order the said Justices are hereby empowered to make), and until the costs, charges, and expenses thereof, and of all operations and proceedings in relation thereto, shall have been paid; and further, that if application be made to any two or more Justices, then thereupon it shall be their duty, and they are hereby empowered, to order the surveyor or any other person to abate or demolish such nuisance, and to order the persons authorized by them so to abate or demolish the same to sell and dispose of the materials thereof, and out of the moneys arising by such sale to pay to themselves, and all persons by them employed for such purpose, the reasonable charges for abating or demolishing such nuisance, and also such costs and expenses as aforesaid, and to pay the surplus moneys arising by such sale (if any) to such owner of the building as the official referees shall determine to be entitled thereto; and that if the moneys arising by such sale be not sufficient to pay such charges, then it shall be the duty of the person entitled to the immediate possession of such building, or the occupier, to make good the deficiency, subject to reimbursement as hereinafter provided; and if he fail, then he shall be liable to the same remedies for the recovery thereof as are by this Act provided concerning the expense of taking down ruinous buildings, and putting up hoards for the safety of passengers.

XIX. With regard to any building or work, so far as relates to the non-observance of the provisions of this Act in that behalf by workmen and others, that if any workman, labourer, servant, or other person employed in any building, or in the alteration, fitting up, or decoration of any building, wilfully, and without the direction, privity, or consent of the person causing such work to be done, do anything in or about such building contrary to the rules and directions of this Act, then upon conviction thereof before any two Justices of the Peace, upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses (which oath the said Justices are hereby empowered and required to administer), every such offender shall be liable to forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding 50*l*.; and that if upon or immediately after such conviction any such forfeiture be not paid, then it shall be the duty of any two Justices of the Peace to whom application shall be made to commit the offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of such Justices, to the common gaol for any term not exceeding one month, at the discretion of such Justices.

XX. And forasmuch as from time to time occasion hath arisen and will hereafter arise to execute the following works in relation to adjoining buildings and premises parted by the same party wall or party fence wall, but belonging to different owners, or occupied by different persons, or to buildings intermixed belonging to different owners or occupied by different persons; namely,

The reparation of the party walls by which such premises shall be parted:

The pulling down and rebuilding of such party walls:

The raising of such party walls:

The reparation of party fence walls:

The rebuilding of such party fence walls:

The raising of such party fence walls:

The pulling down of timber partitions which part buildings the property of different owners or occupied by different persons, and building in lieu thereof proper party walls:

The pulling down of buildings built over public ways, or having rooms or stories the property of different persons, or occupied by different persons, lying intermixed, for the purpose of building proper party walls or party arches:

And generally the performance of other necessary works incident to the connexion of such party walls or party fence walls with the premises adjoining; it is expedient to make provision, as well for facilitating the execution of such works by any such owner desirous to execute the same (who is herein denominated the "building owner"), as for protecting the interests of the owner of the adjoining premises (who is herein denominated the "adjoining owner"); now for that purpose it is enacted, with regard to all premises parted by a party wall or party fence wall, or parted by timber partitions, and with regard to all intermixed properties not so parted, so far as relates to the execution of any such works by any owner of any such premises, That if the adjoining owner shall have consented thereto, or if, without such consent, the required notice of such work shall have been given by or on the part of the building owner to such adjoining owner, then, subject to such modification as shall be made by virtue of the provision in that behalf, and subject to the provision for supplying the want of consent of the owners, and subject moreover to the respective conditions hereby prescribed with regard to such works respectively, as well as to the payment of the costs of such works, and to the sanction or to the award of the surveyors or of the official referees, as hereby prescribed in reference thereto, it shall be lawful for every such building owner and he is hereby authorized or required to execute such works.

XXI. With regard to such works, so far as relates to the notice thereof, That, unless the adjoining owner consent thereto, it shall not be lawful for the "building owner" to execute such works until he have given notice thereof to such "adjoining owner"; and every such notice with regard to the pulling down, rebuilding, or repairing of party walls or party fence walls must be given three months at the least before the work is to be commenced; and every such notice with regard to the pulling down and rebuilding intermixed walls and timber partitions must be given three months at the least before such work is to be commenced; and every such notice must be in the form or to the effect of the notice (No. 8.) for that purpose contained in the Schedule of Notices hereunto annexed.

XXII. With regard to every such work, so far as relates to the modification thereof, in order to render it suitable to the premises of the adjoining owner or his tenant, that if the adjoining owner, at any time within two months after the receipt of the said notice from the building owner, give notice of his desire that any modification be made in the work, so as to render it suitable to his premises, according to the Form (No. 18.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect, then within seven days after the receipt of such notice it shall be the duty of the building owner, and he is hereby required, to signify his consent to or dissent from such modification or delay; and that if the building owner dissent from, or do not within such seven days signify his consent to such modification, then it shall be lawful for the adjoining owner and he is hereby entitled to require the building owner not to commence the work until the official referees shall have determined thereon; and that if within seven days thereafter application be made in writing to the official referees, according to the Form (No. 19.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect, and notice thereof be given to the building owner, according to the other Form (No. 20.), then within ten days after such application it shall be the duty of the official referees to signify their decision thereon, and it shall be the duty of the building owner not to commence the work till the decision of such official referees shall have been given; and that if within the period of three months from the date of the first notice such adjoining owner do not make any objection or any requisition in conformity with this enactment, then, subject to the provisions of this Act with regard to such works, it shall be lawful for the building owner and he is hereby authorized to proceed to execute the same.

XXIII. With regard to every such work, so far as relates to the modification thereof, in order to render it suitable to the premises, or to the convenience of the adjoining owner or his tenant, That if the adjoining owner, at any time within three months after the receipt of the said notice from the building owner, give notice of his desire that the work be delayed, so as to cause it to be executed at a more reasonable or a more convenient time in reference to the business or to the family or domestic arrangements of such adjoining owner or his tenants, according to the Form (No. 18.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect, then within seven days after the receipt of the notice thereof it shall be the duty of the building owner and he is hereby required to signify his consent to or dissent from such modification or delay; and that if the building owner do not within such seven days signify his consent to such modification or delay, then it shall be lawful for the adjoining owner and he is hereby entitled to require the building owner to delay the work until the official referees shall have determined thereon; and that if within seven days thereafter application be made in writing to the official referees, according to the form (No. 19.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect, and notice thereof be given to the building owner, according to the other Form (No. 20.), then within ten days after such application it shall be the duty of the official referees to signify their decision thereon, and it shall be the duty of the building owner to delay the same till the decision of such official referees shall have been given; and that if within the period of three months from the date of the first notice such adjoining owner do not make any objection or any requisition in conformity with this enactment, then, subject to the provisions of this Act with regard to such works, it shall be lawful for the building owner and he is hereby authorized to proceed to execute the same.

XXIV. With regard to any such works hereby authorized to be done in relation to party walls, party arches, party fence walls, or other such structures belonging to the owners of adjoining buildings or parting adjoining premises, so far as relates to supplying the want of consent of the adjoining owners, That if the adjoining premises be unoccupied, or if the owner thereof cannot be found, or if the owner although found cannot, by reason of legal disability or otherwise, consent to the work, or if the owner will not consent thereto, or if differences arise amongst the parties concerned, then the notice required to be given in respect of such work must be served both on the surveyor and on the official referees, in addition to such other parties entitled to notice under this Act upon whom such notice can be served, which must be according to the Form (No. 9.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and that forthwith on the receipt of such notice it shall be the duty of the surveyor and he is hereby required to give notice to the parties by whom such work is to be executed, and to any one or more surveyors or other agents by them appointed, as to the day and hour when he will view the premises, according to the form (No. 10.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and at such time it shall be the duty of the surveyor of the district and he is hereby authorized to proceed to inspect such premises accordingly, and to certify to the official referees,

First, Whether such work ought to be done or not; and

Secondly, If the same ought to be done, whether it ought to be done in the proposed manner; and

Thirdly, The site whereon the party wall should be built; and, with regard to Intermixed buildings, what party arches may be necessary over or under any rooms of such buildings so intended to be rebuilt; and

Fourthly, The quantity of the soil or ground or other parts of the premises (if any) necessary to be laid to or taken from the house of the person desirous to rebuild to the house of the person permitting him to erect a party wall or party arch; and

Fifthly, The compensation (if any) which should be made and paid by either the building owner or the adjoining owner to the other in lieu of the lessening either of the said buildings by such party wall or party arch, or as a satisfaction for such other injury (if any) as shall be done or occasioned thereby to any of the said parties;

And that upon the receipt of such certificate it shall be the duty of the official referees, and they are hereby required, to cause notice thereof to be given to the parties or to such of them as are known; and that if within seven days after such notice to the parties the certificate be not appealed against, and if the official referees be of opinion that the work is proper to be done, and the compensation is fair, then it shall be lawful for the official referees to confirm such certificate, and to authorize the building owner to proceed with the works as if the consent of the adjoining owner had been obtained; and that if any party concerned shall appeal against the certificate of the surveyor as to the work to be done, or as to the compensation, or as to any other matter referred to in such certificate in pursuance of the above provisions, then it shall be the duty of the official referees, and they are hereby required, to appoint one of their number to survey the building in question; and that for that purpose it shall be the duty of the official referee so appointed, and he is hereby required, to give notice to the parties, and to any one or more surveyors or other agents by them appointed, as to the time when he will view the premises; and that at such time it shall be the duty of such referee and he is hereby authorized to view such premises accordingly, and to inquire into the matters appealed against, and to certify to the official referees his opinion thereon; and that upon such certificate being made it shall be lawful for the official referees to make their award, thereby either confirming or reversing or modifying, as to them the case may seem to require, the certificate of the surveyor, and appointing by whom and in what proportions the expenses of the surveys and of the reports thereon are to be paid, and such award shall be final and conclusive; and with regard to any works by such award authorized, so far as relates to the proceedings of the building owner, that if upon the making of the award the periods of the notices by this Act prescribed with regard to works of that nature have elapsed, then immediately upon the making of the award, but if such periods have not elapsed then as soon after the making of the award as such periods shall have elapsed, it shall be lawful for the building owner, his agents, servants, and workmen, to proceed to execute the works.

xxv. With regard to any party wall, party arch, or external wall used wholly or in part as a party fence wall, so far as relates to the reparation and rebuilding thereof at the joint expense of the owners of the buildings parted thereby, That if such party structure be so defective or so far out of repair as to render it necessary to pull down and rebuild the same, or any part thereof, then on notice being given by the owner of one of the buildings to the adjoining owner, according to the Form (No. 2.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect, it shall be lawful for the building owner to require a survey, certificate, and award, authorizing the execution of such reparation, or rebuilding, according to the provisions hereinbefore contained in that behalf.

xxvi. And for the purpose of facilitating and regulating the execution of any works authorized by this Act, or by any award in pursuance thereof, in respect of any party wall or party arch parting the buildings or grounds belonging to different owners, or in the occupation of different persons, or in respect of intermixed buildings, it is enacted, with regard to any such works, so far as relates to the power to enter the adjoining premises in order to execute the same, That if such work have been duly authorized, either by the consent of the parties competent to give such consent, or by the award or certificate of the official referees, then, at any time between the hours of six in the morning and seven in the afternoon (Sundays excepted), it shall be lawful for the building owner, or any other person acting in his behalf, accompanied by a constable or other officer of the peace, and they are hereby respectively empowered, to enter on the premises of the adjoining owner, so far as may be necessary for executing such work; and that if the outer door of such building be shut, and being thereunto required the person therein refuse to open the same, or if such building be empty and unoccupied, then it shall be lawful to break open such outer door; and if any fixtures, goods, furniture, or other thing obstruct the building of such intended party wall or party arch, or the pulling down any wall, partition, or other thing necessary to be pulled down and removed in order to the building such intended party wall or party arch, then to remove such fixtures, goods, furniture, and things to some other part of the same premises, or if there be no room on the premises sufficient for that purpose, to remove them to some other place of safe custody; and that from and after such entry, and at all usual times of working, it shall be lawful for the builder employed to erect such intended party wall or party arch, and for his servants and all others employed by him, to enter into and upon the premises, and abide therein the usual times of working, as well for the shoring up of the said building so broken into and entered upon, and for taking down and removing any party wall, partition, wainscot, or other thing necessary to be taken down and removed for the purpose aforesaid, as to build such intended party wall or party arch; and that if in any manner any such owner or other person hinder or obstruct any workman employed for any of the purposes aforesaid, or wilfully damage or injure the said works, then every such person so offending shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding 10*l*.

XXXVII. And for the purpose of further protecting the interests of adjoining owners, it is enacted, with regard to external walls adjoining the ground or building of another owner, so far as relates to the making of openings therein, That if, without the consent in writing of the owner of such ground or building, any opening be made in any such wall, then it shall be lawful for such owner and he is hereby entitled to require the owner of the premises in which such opening shall be made to stop up the same with brick or stone work, as the case may be, according to the Form (No. 5.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and that if within one month after such notice such stoppage be not effected, then it shall be lawful for such owner and he is hereby entitled, either by himself or his workmen, with tools, implements, and materials, to cause such openings so to be stopped, and he is also hereby entitled to be repaid the costs thereof; and with regard to such costs, so far as relates to the adjustment thereof, that if such owner refuse to make payment thereof, or if there be any dispute as to the amount thereof, then, on application for the purpose to the official referees, by either of the parties concerned, it shall be lawful for the person by whom they have been incurred and he is hereby entitled to refer the matter of such dispute to the official referees, and to have their determination thereon; and that it shall be the duty of such official referees to give to the applicant a certificate in relation thereto; and that if any party liable to pay any sum of money under such certificate fail to do so, then it shall be lawful for the party entitled to such costs to recover the same in the manner hereinafter provided for the recovery of the costs, charges, and expenses of executing any works in pursuance of this Act.

XXXVIII. With regard to walls, so far as relates to the building thereof on vacant ground at the line of junction of premises belonging to different owners or in different occupations, that one month before the owner of any piece of vacant ground, or ground not hitherto built upon, shall build any building adjoining to another piece of vacant ground, or ground not hitherto built upon, or build a fence wall for such piece of ground, it shall be his duty and he is hereby required to give to the owner or occupier of such adjoining vacant ground a notice, which must be in writing, and must set forth his desire to build a party wall or party fence wall, and describe the thicknesses and dimensions of such desired party wall or party fence wall, according to the Form (No. 16.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and that if within such period of one month such adjoining owner shall signify his consent in writing, then the same must be built partly on the ground of one of the said owners or occupiers, and partly on the ground of the other owner, and such last-mentioned part is to be paid for as is hereinafter directed by such other owner or occupier; but if he do not signify such consent, then it shall be the duty of the building owner to build an external wall for such building, and fence wall for such ground, entirely upon his own ground, except as to the footings of any such wall.

XXXIX. With regard to any new party wall built on the line of junction of premises belonging to different owners, so far as relates to the providing of chimney breasts and other accommodation for the adjoining owner, that when the owner of any piece of vacant ground shall have obtained the consent of the adjoining owner to build a party wall on the line of junction of their respective premises, then, ten days at the least before beginning to build such party wall, it shall be the duty of the building owner to give the adjoining owner notice thereof, according to the Form (No. 16.) in the Schedule of Notices, or to the like effect; and that if in due time the adjoining owner shall give instructions in writing, or by a plan and elevations or other sufficient drawings, then it shall be the duty of the building owner to construct, if practicable, such and so many chimney jambs, breasts, and flues of chimneys in all such parts of such party wall as shall be by such instructions required, and to leave such recesses in every such wall as may be so required, but so that they be conformable with the directions of this Act concerning party walls and chimneys; and that thereupon it shall be lawful for the building owner to claim and he is hereby entitled to recover from the adjoining owner all the expenses of constructing such chimney jambs, breasts, and flues of chimneys, and recesses, as provided by this Act in that behalf.

XL. And after reciting that buildings within the limits of this Act are often, either from litigated titles thereto, or from the obstinacy, neglect, or poverty of the owners thereof or of the parties interested therein, or from other causes, in so ruinous a condition that passengers are endangered thereby; now, for the purpose of making provision in that behalf, it is enacted, with regard to ruinous buildings or parts of buildings, so far as relates to repairing or pulling down the same, that upon receiving information of any building being in a ruinous and dangerous condition it shall be the duty of the surveyor and of the overseers for the time being of the parish or place in which the same shall be, and they are hereby respectively required, to apply forthwith to the official referees to authorize a survey to be made thereof; and that thereupon it shall be lawful for the official referees to direct the surveyor to make such survey; and that thereupon it shall be the duty of such surveyor to act in all respects as in the case of a survey of party walls; and that upon the receipt of the certificate of the surveyor it shall be lawful for the official referees and they are hereby required to cause a copy thereof to be transmitted, if the premises be within the city of London, then to the court of Lord Mayor and aldermen, and if they be elsewhere, then to the overseers of the poor of the parish or place in which such premises shall be; and that thereupon it shall be the duty of such mayor and court of aldermen, and overseers, to cause with all convenient speed any such ruinous building to be securely shored, or a proper and sufficient hoard to be put up for the safety of all passengers, and to cause notice in writing to be given to the owner of such building to repair or pull down the same or any part thereof, as the case may require, within fourteen days then next ensuing; and that if within the said fourteen days the repair or demolition thereof be not begun, and be not completed as soon as the nature of the case will admit, then, on a declaration being made before the said Lord Mayor or a Justice of the Peace of such notice having been so given (which declaration the said Lord Mayor and Justice are hereby respectively empowered and required to receive), it shall be lawful for the said Lord Mayor and court of aldermen, and they are hereby authorized and required, out of the cash in the chamber of London, and also for every such overseer of the poor by and out of the money in his hands, and they are hereby severally authorized and required, with all convenient speed, to order and cause such building, or such part thereof so certified to be in a ruinous and dangerous condition as shall be necessary for the safety of the passengers, to be repaired or pulled down, or secured in such manner as shall from time to time be requisite: Provided always, that if such Lord Mayor and aldermen, or such overseers, appeal against such certificate, it shall be the duty of the official referees to proceed to survey, to certify, and to award in all respects as in the case of an appeal from the certificate of the surveyor with reference to party walls or intermixed buildings; and that if such official referee certify that the said premises are ruinous and dangerous, it shall be the duty of the said Lord Mayor or the said overseers to repair or pull down such building as aforesaid.

XLI. With regard to any such ruinous building so pulled down, so far as relates to the disposal of the materials thereof, and to the application of the proceeds, that it shall be lawful for the said Lord Mayor and court of aldermen, or the said overseers, to sell and dispose of such of the materials as they shall judge necessary, and out of the monies arising from the sale thereof to reimburse to themselves, the surveyors and official referees, and every person by them respectively employed for the purposes aforesaid, all the charges of the survey and appeal, and of putting up every such hoard, and of repairing, pulling down, and securing such premises, and of making good the pavement, and of selling the said materials as aforesaid, or so much thereof as the monies arising by such sale will extend to; and that if there be any surplus after payment of all expenses, then, upon demand thereof made by such owner, it shall be the duty of the said Lord Mayor, or of the said overseers, to account for and pay such surplus of the monies arising by such sale to the owner of such building; or if there be any question as to the person entitled to such surplus, or as to the priority of title to such sum of such persons so entitled, or as to the proportions to which such persons are so entitled, then it shall be lawful, either for the Lord Mayor or the overseers, or for any person claiming to be so entitled, to refer the matter to the determination of the official referees, and their decision shall be final; and that if no such demand be made then such surplus shall, as regards places within the city of London and the liberties thereof, be paid to the chamberlain of the city, and as regards all other places such surplus shall be paid to the overseers, and added to the monies raised as rates for the relief of the poor of the parish or place, and accounted for accordingly: Provided nevertheless, that at any time within six years from the deposit of such surplus, it shall be lawful for any such owner, his executors or administrators, to claim and he and they are hereby entitled to recover such surplus; and the said Lord Mayor and aldermen of the city of London, as regards the said city and liberties thereof, are hereby required to pay such surplus out of the cash in the chamber of London; and every overseer, as regards places not within the said city or the liberties thereof, is hereby required to pay such surplus out of any monies raised or to be raised by any rate for the relief of the poor.

XLII. With regard to such ruinous buildings, so far as relates to the expenses of any such survey and appeal, putting up such hoard, repairing, pulling down, and securing such buildings, and selling the materials, beyond the amount thereof which shall have been satisfied by the application thereto of the proceeds of the materials, That if the monies arising from such sale be insufficient to repay all such expenses, then from time to time such deficiency shall be paid by the owner of every such building, being the person entitled to the immediate possession thereof, if known; and that if, on demand thereof, such owner fail to pay such deficiency, then it shall be lawful for the Lord Mayor for the time being, if such ruinous building in question be within the city of London or the liberties thereof, or if elsewhere, for two or more Justices of the Peace, to levy the amount thereof by warrant under their hands and seals, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such owner, if any such can be found; and that if no such owner can be met with, or being met with, shall not, on demand, pay the said deficiency, and no sufficient distress of the goods and chattels of such owner can be found, then it shall be lawful for the person who shall at any time thereafter occupy any such building, or the ground where the same stood, and he is hereby authorized and required, to pay and deduct the same out of the rent thereof; and that if he neglect or refuse to pay such deficiency, then it shall be lawful for the said Lord Mayor, or two or more such Justices of the Peace, and they are hereby empowered and required, to cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of any occupier of the premises, together with the costs of every such distress and sale; and that if the premises be situate within the city of London and its liberties it shall be the duty of the person by whom the same shall be received, and he is hereby required, to pay the amount to the chamberlain, to be by him from time to time placed to the credit of the cash of the said city of London, and if the premises in respect of which such money shall be received or recovered be not situate within the said city of London and the liberties thereof, then to pay the amount received to the overseers of the poor for the time being of the parish or place where the premises shall be situate, to be by them placed to the account of the said parish, in aid of the poor rate of the parish or place.

XLIII. With regard to ruinous chimneys, roofs, and projections, so far as relates to the repairing thereof, That if a chimney shaft, chimney pot, or other thing thereon, or the eaves, or parapet or coping, or slates or tiles on the roof, or any projection from the front walls of any building, be in danger of falling, then it shall be the duty of such surveyor and he is hereby required to require the occupier of such building, or if there be no occupier then the owner thereof, to take down or secure the same within thirty-six hours after notice thereof shall have been given; and that if within the time specified such occupier, or some other person interested in such building, do not begin to take down or secure the same, and as soon as the nature of the case will admit complete such taking down or securing of the same, then it shall be the duty of such surveyor to give information thereof to a Justice of the Peace, and thereupon it shall be the duty of such Justice of the Peace to proceed to cause such chimney shaft, chimney pot, or other thing thereon, or the eaves, or parapet or coping, or slates or tiles on the roof, or projection from the front or side wall of such building as shall be considered by such surveyor in danger of falling, to be forthwith taken down or secured; and that if there be no occupier or known owner then it shall be lawful for such Justice to direct that the reasonable expenses, to be certified by the official referees, be paid by the overseers of the parish or place in which such building shall be situated; and that if thereafter the owner of such building become known, or if the building become occupied, then it shall be lawful for the overseers of the poor and they are hereby entitled to recover the amount of such expenses from such owner or from such occupier as in the case of ruinous buildings hereinbefore provided for; and that if within the time limited the occupier or some other person interested in such building, do not take down or secure the same, then for every day during which the same shall so remain unrepaired or not sufficiently secured such occupier, or the owner if there be no occupier, shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 5*l.*; and that such occupier or owner shall also pay the surveyor's fees, and all other costs, charges, and expenses attendant upon any such taking down or securing the building; and all such surveyor's fees, and other costs, charges, and expenses, may be recovered and levied in the same manner as such penalty: Provided always, that if the occupier of such building be not bound by virtue of any lease or other instrument to repair, reinstate, or secure the premises, then such occupier is hereby entitled to retain out of the rent payable in respect of such premises all such penalties, costs, charges, and expenses attendant upon or arising out of the taking down or securing, or the repairing or rebuilding the same, as in the case of any other works the costs of which he is hereby required to pay in the first instance.

XLIV. With regard to adjoining buildings, so far as relates to the making good any damage arising from the falling down of parts thereof (except any such part of a party wall as shall belong to and be used conjointly by the owners or occupiers of the buildings parted thereby), That if at any time any injury or damage be caused to any part of an adjoining building, or to the internal decorations and furniture, goods, wares, and merchandise in such building, by the falling down from any other building of any chimney shaft, chimney pot, parapet, coping, or other thing, then it shall be the duty of the owner of the building from which such part shall fall, and he is hereby bound and required, to reimburse the expense to which the owner or occupier may be put in making good such injury or damage, in like manner as herein directed concerning the reimbursement of the expenses of ruinous party walls; and such costs shall be recoverable in the manner hereinafter directed for the recovery of the costs and expenses of executing works in pursuance of this Act.

XLV. That all the powers and authorities by this Act vested in the Mayor and Aldermen of the city of London may be lawfully exercised by the Court of Mayor and aldermen of the said city to be holden in the outer chamber of the Guildhall of the said city according to the custom of the said city.

XLVI. And for the purpose of reimbursing any building owner for the expense of works incurred in respect of any party structure, it is enacted, with regard to the following works, so far as relates to the reimbursement by the adjoining owner of expenses incurred by the building owner in respect of any party structure built to part the buildings or premises belonging to other owners from the buildings or premises belonging to himself, that is to say,

First, with regard to any party wall hereafter built on the line of junction of any two buildings; and,

Second, with regard to any party wall hereafter built on the line of junction of any building and any vacant ground or of vacant premises belonging to different owners or occupiers; and,

Third, with regard to a ruinous and defective party wall pulled down and rebuilt, either with the consent of the adjoining owner, or in pursuance of the condemnation thereof according to this Act, except a party wall condemned on account of the injury done thereto by any building owner, and the expenses of which and of other incidental works the official referees shall have awarded to be paid by such building owner by virtue of the provision in that behalf; and,

Fourth, with regard to one or more timber partitions between any two or more buildings, pulled down, and a party wall built in lieu thereof; and,

Fifth, with regard to a new party wall or party arch built in lieu of any party wall or party arch between intermixed properties pulled down, either with the consent of the adjoining owner, or in pursuance of the condemnation of such party wall or party arch; and,

Sixth, with regard to any party wall built on the site of a party fence or party fence wall, and used otherwise than as a party fence wall by the person who shall not have built the same; and,

Seventh, with regard to every other case of reimbursement in respect of any party structure, That if the party structure be built in the manner, and of the materials, and of the thicknesses of such structure as required by this Act in reference thereto, then it shall be lawful for the building owner at whose expense such work shall have been executed to claim and he is hereby entitled to be paid, and to recover from the person who is entitled to the immediate possession of the adjoining building or ground, or who is in the immediate occupation thereof, the following compensations; that is to say,

If a new party wall or party arch built on the line of junction by one owner be made use of, either wholly or partially, by the adjoining owner, then the sum of money proportionate to the value of so much of such party structure so made use of; and,

If chimney jambs, chimney breasts and flues, have been set up in any party wall, in pursuance of the instructions of the owner of any vacant ground adjoining to the same, then a sum equal to the value thereof; and,

If a party wall be built in lieu of a timber partition or other party structure, and be made use of by the adjoining owner, then a sum of money proportionate to the value of so much of such new party wall as shall be so made use of, and also a proportionate part of all expenses which shall be necessary for pulling down the old timber partition or other party structure; and,

If a party wall or party arch already built or hereafter rebuilt be used by any adjoining owner, then a sum of money proportionate to the value of so much of such party structure as the adjoining owner shall use, deduction being made, where proper, for the value of old materials;

And in every case the whole of the reasonable expenses of the shoring up the adjoining building, and of removing any goods, furniture, or other things therein, and of pulling down any wainscot or partition thereof;

LXX. With regard to the surveyors who at the time of this Act coming into operation shall have been appointed under the Act, 14 Geo. 3. c. 78, mentioned in the Schedule (A.) hereto annexed, so far as relates to their continuance in office, and the application of this Act to them, that until they shall be removed it shall be lawful for them and they are hereby entitled to continue to be the surveyors for the purposes of this Act, and for the districts assigned to them at the time this Act shall come into operation, but subject to such alteration of such districts as may be made by virtue of any power in that behalf, and to act in all respects as if they had been appointed under this Act; and that every provision in this Act applicable to district surveyors, so far as relates to the exercise of the office of surveyor, and to their remuneration in that behalf, shall apply to them.

LXXI. With regard to every surveyor hereafter appointed, so far as relates to making a declaration of official fidelity, that before any such surveyor shall act in pursuance of this Act it shall be his duty and he is hereby required to make a declaration of official fidelity, which must be administered by the said Lord Mayor and aldermen in their court of aldermen, or by the said Justices of the Peace in their respective General Quarter Sessions, and must be in the form or to the effect following: that is to say,

‘I A. B., being One of the Surveyors appointed in pursuance of an Act made and passed in the Eighth Year of the Reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled ‘An Act for regulating the Construction and the Use of Buildings in the Metropolis and its Neighbourhood,’ and commonly called the Metropolitan Buildings Act, do solemnly declare, That I will diligently, faithfully, and impartially perform the Duties of my Office, and to the utmost of my Power, Skill, and Ability endeavour to cause the several Provisions of the said Act to be strictly observed, and that without Favour or Affection, Prejudice or Malice, to any person whomsoever.’

And that if before making such declaration any such surveyor act in pursuance of this Act, then on conviction thereof he shall be liable to pay, for every day during which he shall so act before making such declaration, the sum of 5*l*.

LXXII. With regard to the surveyors, so far as relates to the regulation of their official duties, that it shall be the duty of every surveyor for the city of London and the liberties thereof, and he is hereby required, to have an office at his own expense, in such public situation as shall be approved by the Lord Mayor and aldermen; and that it shall be the duty of every other surveyor and he is hereby required to have an office, at his own expense, in some central part of the district to which he shall be appointed, as shall be approved by the Justices of the Peace in Quarter Sessions within whose jurisdiction he shall act; and that it shall be the duty of every such surveyor and he is hereby required, by himself or by some other person in his behalf, to attend at his office every day (Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday excepted) from ten of the clock in the morning till four of the clock in the afternoon; and that immediately upon his appointment, and from time to time upon every change of his residence or of his place of business, or oftener if required, it shall be the duty of every surveyor and he is hereby required to make a return to the registrar of metropolitan buildings, and to the overseers of the poor of every parish or place within his district, of his name and place of abode, and the place where such office shall be.

LXXXIII. With regard to such surveyor, so far as relates to the appointment of a deputy or substitute in certain cases, that if any surveyor shall be prevented by illness or any other unavoidable circumstances from attending to the duties of his office, then forthwith it shall be his duty and he is hereby required, but subject to the previous consent and approval of the official referees, to appoint some other surveyor, duly qualified as aforesaid, as his deputy, to perform all such his duties for so long a time as he shall be so prevented from executing them; and that thereupon, during such time as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of such deputy surveyor and he is hereby required to perform all the duties of such surveyor, and that in all respects as if he were the surveyor appointed or confirmed under this Act; and that it shall be lawful for such deputy surveyor and he is hereby entitled to receive the fees payable in respect of the services so performed by him in such district.

LXXXIV. With regard to such surveyors, so far as relates to the filling up of vacancies, that if any vacancy shall happen through the death or removal of any surveyor, then, within one month thereafter, it shall be the duty of the Lord Mayor and aldermen, or of the Justices of the Peace in General Quarter Sessions or any adjournment thereof, as aforesaid, and they are hereby respectively required, to appoint a successor as herein directed; and that in the meantime it shall be lawful for the official referees to direct the surveyor of any one or more of the other districts to perform the duties of surveyor for the vacant district, or if no district surveyor can be spared from his own district to appoint some other competent person duly qualified as aforesaid for that purpose; and that every such surveyor is hereby entitled to receive the fees payable in respect of the services so performed by him in such vacant district.

LXXXV. With regard to the surveyors, so far as relates to the regulation of their business, that if it shall appear to the official referees that the district appointed for any surveyor is too extensive for the prompt discharge of his functions, then it shall be their duty to represent such their opinion to the Lord Mayor and aldermen of the city of London, or to the Justices of the Peace with whom the appointment of a surveyor for that district may rest, and for that purpose to transmit with their letter of representation a transcript of their "Register of Notices," with the results; and that if at any time it appear to such official referees that on account of the pressure of business in any district, or on any other account, the surveyor of that district cannot discharge his duties promptly as regards the builders and others engaged in building operations, and efficiently as regards the purposes of this Act, then it shall be lawful for such official referees and they are hereby empowered to appoint any other district surveyor to assist the surveyor of such district in the performance of his duties, or if no district surveyor can be spared from his own district, then to appoint some other competent person to give such assistance; and that with regard to all buildings surveyed by such assistant surveyor, and all other acts done by him, it shall be the duty of such assistant surveyor to make returns and to act in all respects as if he had been appointed by the said Lord Mayor and aldermen, or by the said Justices, to be the surveyor of such district; and that every such person shall be entitled to receive the fees payable in respect of the services so performed by him.

LXXXVI. With regard to such surveyors, so far as relates to the supervision of buildings built, rebuilt, enlarged, or altered, by or under their professional superintendence, that it shall not be lawful for any such surveyor to survey any such building for the purposes of this Act, but that such building must be surveyed by another district surveyor, or by another surveyor to be appointed by the official referees for that purpose.

LXXXVII. With regard to such surveyors, so far as relates to their remuneration, That upon the expiration of one month after the roof of any building erected and surveyed under this Act shall have been covered in, and all the walls thereof have been built to their full heights, and the principal timbers and floors shall have been fixed in their places, and upon the expiration of fourteen days after the completion of any addition, alteration, and repair, and upon the expiration of fourteen days after each special service shall have been performed, and upon delivering to the owner of the building an account of the fees incurred, and upon tendering a receipt, signed with his christian and surname, and stating the amount of such account, and the work done, it shall be lawful for the surveyor and he is hereby entitled to receive from the builder, or from the owner or from the occupier of the building, for his time and trouble and expenses in causing the rules, regulations, and directions of this Act to be observed, the several fees specified in the Schedule of Fees (L.) hereunto annexed; and that if on tender of such receipt any builder, owner, or occupier who shall become liable to pay any such fee shall refuse to pay the same, then, upon application to any Justice of the Peace, it shall be lawful for such Justice and he is hereby required to summon the party complained of in the first instance, and if he do not appear, or if he fail to satisfy the said Justices as to the refusal of payment as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such Justice and he is hereby required to issue his warrant to levy the amount of such fee by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party so refusing, in like manner as poor's rates are by law recoverable, and if such fee be paid by the occupier he shall be entitled to recover the amount thereof from the owner: Provided always, that if the work in respect of which such fee shall become payable have not been done in every respect agreeably to the directions of this Act, then it shall not be lawful for any surveyor to receive such fee; and that if he shall so receive it, then, upon application to the official referees by any party interested in the building in respect of which such work shall have been executed, and upon its appearing that such fee has been received wrongfully, it shall be lawful for such official referees and they are hereby authorized (if they think fit) to order the said surveyor to refund such fees.

LXXXVIII. With regard to such surveyors, so far as relates to a return of the business done by them, and to the inspection thereof, That within seven days after the first day of every month it shall be the duty of every surveyor, and he is hereby required to make a return to the registrar of metropolitan buildings, enumerating therein the number and nature of all the several works executed within the previous month under his supervision, and the fees paid to him for the same, and also a copy of the list or register of notices served upon him, with the results thereof, and to keep in his office a copy of such return; and that if any person shall apply to inspect the same, then on the payment of one shilling it shall be open for inspection at all reasonable times; and with regard to such return, so far as relates to the authentication and effect thereof, that every such return must be signed by such surveyor, and if so signed it shall be deemed to be a certificate that all the works enumerated therein have been done in all respects agreeably to this Act, according to the best of his knowledge and belief, and that they have been duly surveyed by him; but no such return shall be any protection from or hindrance to any future proceedings in respect of works not executed according to the provisions of this Act, though the same may have been done before the making of such return.

LXXIX. With regard to every surveyor, so far as relates to the discharge of his duties, That if any surveyor demand or wilfully receive any higher fee than he shall be entitled to under this Act, or if in his capacity of surveyor he receive a fee for any act or omission in respect of which he is not entitled to receive any remuneration, or if he refuse to refund any fee wrongfully received by him in respect whereof the official referees shall have made an order to that effect, or if at any time he wilfully neglect his duty, or behave himself negligently or unfaithfully in the discharge thereof, then and in every or any such case it shall be lawful for any person to present a complaint in writing under his hand to the Lord Mayor and aldermen of the city of London, or the Court of Quarter Sessions having jurisdiction over the district for which such surveyor shall act for the time being, at any sessions of the peace, quarter or general, either original, intermediate, or adjourned, and which complaint shall set forth the nature and particulars of the offence charged by the complainant against any such surveyor; and that the said Lord Mayor and aldermen or court of sessions, as the case may be, shall by order of court appoint a time for the hearing of the said complaint, and a copy of which order and of the said complaint shall be served by or for the said complainant on the said surveyor ten days at the least before the time appointed for the hearing of such complaint; and the said surveyor shall appear before the said Lord Mayor and aldermen or court of sessions, as the case may be, at the time and place so appointed for hearing the said complaint, to answer the same; and that if, upon the hearing of the complainant and of the surveyor, and the evidence respectively produced by or for them, it shall appear unto the said Lord Mayor and aldermen or court of sessions, as the case may be, that such complaint in whole or in part is well founded, then it shall be lawful for the said Lord Mayor and aldermen, or the said court of quarter sessions, as the case may be, and they are hereby respectively required, either to fine such surveyor in such sum of money not exceeding 50*l.* as they shall think fit, or to discharge him forthwith from his said office; and that if for any such cause such surveyor be discharged, he shall be incapable of being again appointed a surveyor for the purposes of this Act.

LXXX. And for the purpose of providing for the appointment of competent official referees to superintend the execution of this Act throughout all the districts to which it is applicable, and also to determine sundry matters in question incident thereto, as well as to exercise, in certain cases, a discretion in the relaxation of the fixed rules and directions of this Act, where the strict observance thereof is impracticable, or would defeat the object of this Act, or would needlessly affect with injury the course and operation of this branch of business, it is enacted, with regard to the official referees, so far as relates to their appointment, to their qualifications, and to the tenure of their office, That it shall be lawful for one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State and he is hereby empowered to appoint two persons, being of the profession of an architect or surveyor, to be official referees of metropolitan buildings, and from time to time, as he shall think proper, to remove such official referees, and in their place to appoint other persons so qualified; and that while any such person shall so hold the office of official referee it shall not be lawful for such person and he is hereby expressly prohibited to act as surveyor, either alone or with any partner or by an agent, or to act as official referee in the case of any building or matter in which he shall act as architect; and that if an official referee be employed as architect as to any building or matter within the limits of this Act, then it shall be the duty of such official referee and he is hereby required to report thereon to the Commissioners of Works and Buildings; and thereupon it shall be the duty of such Commissioners of Works and Buildings and they are hereby required to appoint some other competent person to act in conjunction with the other official referee as to such building or matter.

LXXXI. With regard to such official referees, so far as relates to their functions generally, That it shall be the duty of such official referees and they are hereby required to superintend the execution of this Act by the several district surveyors already existing or hereby authorized to be appointed, and to perform the several matters to them respectively assigned by the provisions of this Act, and to determine all questions referred to them, whether expressly by this Act or at the instance of any one or more of the parties concerned.

LXXXII. With regard to the official referees, so far as relates to their jurisdiction, That if any doubt, difference, or dissatisfaction in respect of any matter within the limits of this Act arise between any parties concerned, or between any party and any surveyor, or between any two surveyors, as to any act done or to be done in pursuance of this Act, or as to the effect of the provisions thereof in any case, or as to the mode in which the provisions and directions of this Act are or ought to be carried into effect, and particularly as to whether the requirements implied in terms of qualification applied to sites, to soils, to materials, or to workmanship, or otherwise, and denoting good, sound, fire-proof, fit, proper, or sufficient, are fulfilled in certain cases, or as to the district in which any building, matter, or thing is to be deemed to be situate, especially in cases where such building, matter, or thing is partly in one district and partly in another, or as to the expenses to be borne by the respective owners of premises parted by the same party walls, or the proportions thereof, or as to the proportions of the expense to be borne by the occupier or by the owners of premises in respect of any work executed, or any other matter whatever, then it shall be lawful for any party concerned and he is hereby entitled to require the official referees to determine such matter, but so that such requisition be made in writing, and that it set forth, either generally or otherwise, the matters in respect of which the determination of the official referees is required; and that the determination of such referees, or of one of such referees, with the assent of the registrar of metropolitan buildings, as to all or any of the points in difference on which such referees shall make their award, and as to the costs, charges, and expenses of such reference, shall be binding on all parties to such reference.

LXXXIII. With regard to the official referees, so far as relates to their authority in respect of any reference to them, and to the effect of their award upon the rights and interests of the owners and occupiers of property, That it shall be lawful for such referees and they are hereby empowered to exercise all such powers of arbitrators as they would have had in case they had been appointed under an order of Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Westminster; and that if such award be given in writing, and be sealed by the official seal of the registrar of metropolitan buildings, it shall be as effectual as if made under an order of reference by such Court, and shall be enforced by the said Court in all respects as if made under an order of such Court; and that it shall be binding and conclusive against every person, including the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, claiming any estate, right, title, trust, use, or interest in, to, or out of the said premises or any part thereof, either in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy, and against every other person whomsoever.

LXXXIV. With regard to any reference to the said official referees, so far as relates to the revocation of their authority, That the power and authority of the official referees shall not be revocable by any party to such reference without the consent of all parties thereto; and that although any party shall not attend upon such reference it shall be lawful for such official referees to proceed with the reference, and to make their award.

LXXXV. With regard to such reference, so far as relates to the evidence of any matter thereof, That it shall be lawful for the official referees and they are hereby empowered, by their summons in writing sealed with the seal of office of the registrar of metropolitan buildings, to require the attendance of any person who may be able to give evidence in the matter of any reference to them, and to require by such summons the production of any documents to be mentioned therein, and that if, in addition to the service of such summons, an appointment of the time and place of attendance in obedience thereto, signed by one at least of the official referees before whom the attendance is required, be also served, either together with or after the service of such summons, then, if the party so summoned do not attend in obedience thereto, such party shall be liable to be proceeded against as for a contempt of court; and that every person whose attendance shall be required shall be entitled to the like conduct money and payment of expenses as for and upon attendance at any trial; and that no person shall be compelled to produce under any such summons any writing or other document that he would not be compelled to produce at a trial, or to attend on more than two consecutive days to be named in such summons; and that it shall be lawful for the official referees and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to administer an oath to such witnesses as may come before them, or, in cases where affirmation is allowed by law instead of an oath, to take their affirmation; and that if upon such oath or affirmation any person making the same wilfully and corruptly give false evidence, then every person so offending shall be deemed to be guilty of perjury.

LXXXVI. With regard to such award, so far as relates to the effect thereof as evidence of the matter thereof, That if on the trial or hearing of any cause or matter in any court of law or equity, or elsewhere, any copy of an award, signed and sealed with the seal of the said registrar, be produced, then it shall be the duty of all Judges, Justices, and others, and they are hereby required, to receive the same as prima facie evidence of the matters therein contained.

LXXXVII. With regard to the official referees, so far as relates to the declaration of official fidelity, That before any official referee shall act in pursuance of his appointment it shall be his duty and he is hereby required to make the following declaration to be administered by the Chief Baron or any other of the Barons of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer; that is to say, 'I A. B. do solemnly declare, That I will diligently, faithfully, and impartially execute the Duties of an Official Referee in relation to Matters arising under the Provisions of the Act made and passed in the Eighth Year of the Reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled, An Act for regulating the Construction and the Use of Buildings in the Metropolis and its Neighbourhood, and commonly called the Metropolitan Buildings Act.'

LXXXVIII. With regard to such official referees, so far as relates to the regulation of the business of their office, That when any matter is by this Act required, directed, or permitted to be done by the official referees the same may be done by either of them, with the assent of the registrar of metropolitan buildings, unless express provision to the contrary be made, and if done by any one of them with such assent it shall be as valid and effectual as if done by both of them; and that, subject to such restrictions and regulations as may be made in that behalf by the Commissioners of Works and Buildings, it shall be lawful for the official referees to appoint one of their number, under their hands and the seal of the registrar of metropolitan buildings, to make any inquiry or any survey which shall appear to them either necessary or expedient in order to enable them to determine any matters in reference.

And for the purpose of duly recording relaxations of the requisitions of this Act, made in pursuance of the provisions hereof in that behalf, and of providing for the revision from time to time both of such relaxations and requisitions, and of providing against the partial exercise of the powers of this Act, and for the more effectually providing for the due recording of the acts of the official referees, and for exercising a due controul thereon:—

It is Enacted,

LXXXIX. That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Works and Buildings, and they are hereby authorized and required, to appoint a registrar of metropolitan buildings; and that such registrar shall hold his office during the pleasure of the said Commissioners; and that, subject to the provisions of this Act, it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to make rules for regulating the execution of the duties of the office of the said registrar; and that it shall be the duty of such registrar to keep a seal, and to affix such seal to all documents made by the said official referees, and required to be sealed, and to keep all the documents and records relating to the business of their office, and to register the same: Provided always, with regard to such registrar, so far as relates to the affixing the seal of office to any document, that if it shall appear to the said registrar that any such documents are contrary to law, or not complete in any of the requisite forms, or beyond the competence of the said official referees, either with regard to the provisions of this Act, or any rules or regulations prescribed for their guidance by the said Commissioners of Works and Buildings, then it shall be the duty of the said registrar to refuse to affix the seal, and that thereafter, if the said official referees shall so require, it shall be his duty and he is hereby required to report the matter, and the particular grounds and reasons for his refusal, to the said Commissioners; and that upon the receipt of such report it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners to authorize the said registrar to affix the seal, or to confirm his refusal: Provided always, with regard to such office of registrar, so far as relates to the execution of his duties in certain events, that if such registrar be ill, or otherwise unable to discharge the duties of his said office, or if he be absent, then it shall be lawful for the said Commissioners of Works and Buildings to appoint some other person to act temporarily in his behalf, and to assign to such person such part of the remuneration of the said registrar, or otherwise to remunerate him, as the Lords of the Treasury shall appoint in that behalf.

xc. With regard to the registrar, so far as relates to the declaration of official fidelity, That before any registrar shall act in pursuance of his appointment it shall be his duty and he is hereby required to make the following declaration, to be administered by the Chief Baron or any other of the Barons of Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer; that is to say,
 'I A. B. do solemnly declare, That I will diligently, faithfully, and impartially execute the Duties of Registrar in relation to Matters arising under the Provisions of an Act made and passed in the Eighth Year of the Reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled, An Act for regulating the Construction and the Use of Buildings in the Metropolis and its Neighbourhood, and commonly called the Metropolitan Buildings Act.'

xcI. With regard to such awards, certificate, and other records of the said official referees, so far as relates to the custody and the inspection thereof, That all such awards, certificates, and other documents relating to the business of their office shall be kept in the office of the registrar of metropolitan buildings; and that if, for the purpose of evidence or otherwise, any party require a copy of such award, or certificate, or other document, or to inspect the same, then on payment of the expense thereof, and of such fees as may be appointed in that behalf, it shall be lawful for such party and he is hereby entitled to demand from the registrar an inspection thereof, or a copy thereof or extract therefrom; and that on such payment and demand it shall be the duty of such registrar and he is hereby required to give, under his hand and seal of office, a copy of any such award or any other document to the person so demanding the same.

xcII. With regard to the registrar of metropolitan buildings, so far as relates to his office or place of business, and to the regulation of the business thereof, That it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Works and Buildings and they are hereby required to appoint, in some central and convenient situation within the city of London or the city of Westminster, an office for carrying on the business of the registrar of metropolitan buildings, and registering all documents relating to such business; and in such office it shall be the duty of such registrar, and he is hereby required,—

To keep a register of all matters referred to the official referees, and otherwise of all matters which shall come under their cognizance in pursuance of this Act; and also

To keep and preserve all documents connected with the duties of official referees; and also

To receive all notices requiring any act to be done by them, and to file and number them in the order in which they are received.

xcIII. With regard to all the awards and certificates, and all documents relating to the business of the official referees, so far as relates to the registration thereof, that the same shall be registered, not only chronologically in the order in which they are received, but according to the subject matters thereof, and also according to the order of and in relation to the provisions of this Act.

xcIV. With regard to such official referees and registrar, so far as relates to their remuneration, That it shall be lawful for Her Majesty to grant to each of such official referees and the said registrar a salary not exceeding 1,000*l.* by the year, in four equal quarterly payments; and that if any such official referee or such registrar shall be appointed, or shall die, resign, or be removed from office, in the interval between two quarterly days of payment, then he shall be entitled to a proportionate part of the salary for the period of such interval during which he shall hold such appointment.

xcv. Provided and enacted, with regard to the said official referees and registrar, so far as relates to their qualifications, That if any person be or become commissioner, receiver, steward, or agent for or on behalf of any owner of houses within the limits of this Act, then such person shall not be eligible to the office either of official referee, or of registrar under this Act; and that if after having been appointed thereto he shall become such commissioner, receiver, steward, or agent, then he shall cease to be qualified to hold such office of official referee or registrar, and thereupon such office shall be vacant, without prejudice, nevertheless, to any acts done by any such person in his capacity of official referee or registrar, so far as other persons are affected thereby.

xcvi. And forasmuch as the services of such official referees and of such registrar will be employed chiefly on behalf of the localities comprised within the limits of this Act, it is expedient to provide for the payment of a portion of their salaries by means of a county rate, or by a rate in the nature of a county rate, on such localities, in proportion to the assessed value of inhabited houses and buildings therein, or as near thereto as may be; now, for that purpose, it is enacted, with regard to such official referees and registrar, so far as relates to the payment of a portion of their salaries out of local funds, That it shall be lawful for the Lord Mayor and aldermen of the city of London and they are hereby required to direct the chamberlain of the said city, and for the Justices of the Peace for the several counties of Middlesex, Surrey, and Kent, and they are hereby respectively required, to direct the treasurer of such respective counties to pay, by two half-yearly payments in the months of June and December in every year, to or into the hands of the cashier of the Commissioners of Works and Buildings, on account of the said official referees and of the said registrar, the several sums of money hereinafter mentioned, as and by way of contribution to such salaries; that is to say,

The city of London and the liberties and the suburbs thereof, the sum of	£ 100
The county of Middlesex	1,000
The county of Surrey	320
The county of Kent	80
	£1,500

And it shall be lawful for the said Justices and they are hereby empowered and required to cause the same to be levied by a rate upon the several parishes and places within the limits of this Act, in such amounts as to such Justices may seem proper, having regard to the assessed value of the inhabited houses and the buildings in such places respectively, in addition to the county rate in respect thereof; and that for the purpose of levying such sums they shall be deemed to be part of the county rate, and leviable by all the ways and means by which a county rate is leviable, and subject in all respects to the legal incidents of a county rate.

XCVII. Further, with regard to the official referees and registrar, so far as relates to the payment of the balance of their salaries, That such balance shall be payable and paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

XCVIII. With regard to the fees payable to the registrar, so far as relates to the appointment thereof, and to the application thereof, That from time to time it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of the Treasury to appoint such fees to be paid in respect of the services to be performed by the said official referees or by the said registrar as shall be deemed requisite to defray the expenses of the said office, or incident to such services, and the salaries or other remuneration of any persons employed under the registrar in the execution of this Act, with the sanction of the Commissioners of the Treasury, and which are not otherwise provided for by this Act; and that the balance, if any, shall be carried to the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, and be paid accordingly into the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster; and that it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of the Treasury to regulate the manner in which such fees are to be received, and in which they are to be kept, and in which they are to be accounted for; and that it shall be the duty of the registrar and he is hereby required to cause a list of the fees so appointed by virtue of this Act to be fixed up in some conspicuous part of his office.

XCIX. Provided and enacted, with regard to the officers appointed by or by virtue of this Act, so far as relates to the functions, appointment, and tenure of office of such officers, That any appointments to such offices which shall be made by virtue of this Act shall be made subject to any provision that may be made by any Act of Parliament hereafter to be passed for assigning other duties than those to be imposed by virtue of this Act; and such offices shall be held not only subject to the pleasure of the officers and Justices by whom such appointments shall be made, but also subject to the provisions of any future Act of Parliament in relation thereto.

c. And for the purpose of regulating sundry legal proceedings, it is enacted, with regard to any distress for any sum of money to be recovered by virtue of this Act, so far as relates to the remedying of any damage occasioned by any irregularity therein or in reference thereto, That, notwithstanding there be any defect of form in the proceedings relative to any such distress, neither the distress itself shall be deemed unlawful, nor shall the party making the same be deemed a trespasser ab initio, but that if any irregularity be committed by any party, then, subject to the conditions in this Act prescribed with regard to actions brought for anything done in pursuance thereof, it shall be lawful for the person aggrieved by such irregularity and he is hereby entitled to recover full satisfaction for the special damage only, and that by action on the case, and not by any other action whatsoever.

ci. With regard to any action for any irregularity or other proceeding, so far as relates to the tender of amends, or payment of money into court in respect thereof, That if, before such action be brought, the party who committed or caused to be committed any such irregularity or wrongful proceeding make or cause to be made tender of sufficient amends, then the plaintiff shall not be entitled to recover in such action; and that although such tender shall not have been made, yet if at any time before issue joined the Court in which such action shall be depending, or a Judge of any of the superior courts, grant leave, then it shall be lawful for the defendant, to pay into court any sum of money, by way of compensation or amends, in such manner, and under such regulations as to the payment of costs and the form of pleading, as is and are customary and in force in the said superior courts.

cii. With regard to every sum of money by this Act or by any award or certificate or other proceeding in pursuance of or in accordance with this Act, charged upon any person in respect of any work done in pursuance of or in accordance with this Act, so far as relates to the recovery of such sum of money, that if any party claim such sum of money, that it shall be lawful for any one Justice of the Peace to summon the person on whom such sum is alleged to be charged before any two Justices, or, if the matter arise within the district of the metropolitan police, then before any Police Magistrate having jurisdiction within that district; and if such award or certificate be produced, or if such other proceeding be proved by the oath of the party claiming or of any other credible witness, and if it be proved by the oath of such party or other witness that such sum of money is still due, then it shall be lawful for such Justices or such Police Magistrate, and they respectively are hereby required, to issue a warrant to levy the amount thereof, and also the costs of the proceeding, to be levied by distress of the goods and chattels of the person in default; and if such person have no goods and chattels whereon to distrain, or if such goods and chattels be insufficient for that purpose, then it shall be lawful for such Justices or Police Magistrate, or for any other Justice or Police Magistrate, to commit the person in default, until the amount of such sum so due, and of such costs, shall have been fully paid, or until the party shall be discharged by or in accordance with the provisions of any Act for the relief and discharge of insolvent debtors.

ciii. First Class.

If a Building be built originally as a Dwelling House, or be occupied or intended to be occupied as such, then it is to be deemed to belong to the First or Dwelling House Class.

Second Class.

If a Building be built originally as a Warehouse, Storehouse, Granary, Brewery, Distillery, Manufactory, Workshop, or Stable, or be occupied or intended to be occupied as such, or for a similar Purpose, then it is to be deemed to belong to the Second or Warehouse Class.

And the Buildings included in the said Classes are to be deemed to belong to the Rates of those Classes according to the Conditions of Height, Area, and Number of Stories set forth in the following Tables; which Conditions are to be determined according to the following Rules:—

Rule for ascertaining Height.

The Height of every Building is to be ascertained by measuring from the Surface of the lowest Floor of the Building up to the under Side of the Ceiling of the topmost Story at the highest Part thereof, whether such Story be within the Roof or not.

And if there be no Ceiling made or intended to be made to the topmost Story, then by measuring from the Surface of such lowest Floor of the Building up to the under Side of any Tie-beam, Collar-beam, or other Substitute for a Tie-beam, to or within the Roof of the Building, and to the highest Part of such Roof; and the Level of the under Side of such Tie-beam, or such Substitute for a Tie-beam, is in such Case to be taken to mean the Ceiling of the topmost Story.

And the Area of every Building is to be determined by the Number of Squares contained in the Surface of any Floor which shall contain the greatest Number of Squares at or above the principal Entrance to such Building, including in such Surface the Area of all the external Walls, and such Portions of the Party Walls, as belong to such Building, but excluding from such Surface the Area of any attached Building or Office, Area, Balcony, or open Portico.

Rule for ascertaining the Capacity of any Building of the Second Class.

And the Capacity or Cubical Contents of any such Building is to be ascertained by measuring according to the Rule for ascertaining Area, and from the Surface of the lowest Floor up to the under Surface of the Roof Covering of such Building.

Rule for ascertaining Number of Stories.

And if the Space in Height between the Top of the Footings and the Level of the lowest Floor do not exceed Five Feet, then the Story nearest the Foundation is to be considered the lowest or first Story; but if such Space exceed Five Feet, then such space is to be considered to contain the lowest or first Story; and in that Case Nine Inches above the Top of the Footing is to be considered the Level of the lowest Floor.

With regard to the inclosing Walls to Stories of Buildings of the First and Second Classes, each of the inclosing Walls of any such Story throughout the whole Height thereof, from the Top of the Footing up to the Top of such Story, and with all the Sets-off in addition required for such Wall, to whatever Rate or whichever Class it may belong, and throughout at the least One Third of the whole Length of such Wall, in Piers properly distributed, must be of the following Dimensions (unless cross or return Walls, coursed and bonded with the inclosing Walls, shall in the Opinion of the Official Referees, upon special Application to them in each particular Case, give sufficient Strength with less Thickness in such inclosing Walls); that is to say,—

As to First Class Buildings:—If the story be in Height more than 11 Feet, then the Thickness of its inclosing Walls must be at the least 13 Inches.

And also if any such Wall be abutted by cross or return Walls within a Length of 12 Feet, and if not more than One Aperture or Recess occur within such Length of 12 Feet, and not more than One Half the Quantity in Length be taken out of such Compartment of a Wall by any such Aperture or Recess, then such external Wall may be built of any Thickness not less than 13 Inches, notwithstanding the Rate of such Wall may require a greater Thickness.

PART II.—EXTERNAL WALLS.

Construction and Materials.

And with regard to the component Materials of external Walls to Buildings of whatever Class,—

Every such Wall must be built of sound Bricks or of Stone, or of such Bricks and Stone together, laid in and with Mortar or Cement in such Manner as to produce solid Work; and every such Wall must be carried up of its full Thickness to the under Side of the Plate under the Roof.

Nevertheless in such Walls, besides all requisite Openings for Doors and Windows, Recesses may be formed, so that the Back thereof be of the Thickness of Eight Inches and a Half at the least, and so that the Stability and Sufficiency of the Wall be not injuriously affected by making such Recesses.

And with regard to other Substances than the component Materials of external Walls,—

There may be such Wood and Iron as shall be necessary.

And every Plate, Lintel, Bond, Corbel, being of Wood, and every Wood-brick laid into any external Wall, and all Ends of Joists, of Girders, and of the Heads and Sills of Partitions running into any external Wall, must be fixed at a Distance from the external Face of the Wall of Four Inches at the least.

And the Frames of Doors and Windows must be fixed in Reveals at a Distance from the external Face of the Wall of Four Inches at the least.

And the Tiers of Door Cases to Warehouses must be fixed in the Openings left in such Walls at a Distance from the external Face of the Wall of Two Inches at the least.

But no Timber must be laid into any external Wall in such Manner or of such Length as to render the Part of the Wall above it wholly or in great Part dependent upon the Wood for Support, or so that any such Wood might not be withdrawn without endangering the Safety of the superincumbent Structure, except in the Case of Breastsummers.

Height and Thickness of Parapets.

If an external Wall adjoin a Gutter, then such external Wall must be carried up, and remain One Foot at the least above the highest Part of such Gutter.

And the Thickness of an external Wall so carried up above the Level of the under Side of the Gutter Plate, and forming a Parapet, must be at the least,—

In every such Wall of the extra First Rate of the First Class, and in every such Wall of the First Rate of the Second Class, 18 Inches thick; and—

In every other external Wall, of whatever Rate or whichever Class, 8½ Inches thick.

Brestsummers.

With regard to every Brestsummer fixed to carry any front Wall of a Building,—

If such Brestsummer have a Bearing at one End upon a Party Wall, then it must be laid upon a Template or Corbel of Stone or Iron, which Template or Corbel must be tailed through such Wall at least Two Thirds of the Thickness thereof; and the End of such Brestsummer must not be fixed into, and must not have its Bearing solely upon, such Party Wall, but must be supported by a sufficient Pier built of Brick or Stone, or by an Iron Column, or Iron or Timber Story Post fixed on a solid Foundation.

And if any such Brestsummer have its Bearing at each End upon a Party Wall, then it must be supported by at least Two sufficient Piers built of Brick or Stone, or by Iron Columns, or by Iron or Timber Story Posts fixed on solid Foundations, and standing within and clear of the Party Walls.

Or any such Brestsummer may bear upon constructed Returns in the Direction of the Length of the Brestsummer of Four Inches at the least, coursed and bonded with the Substance of the Party Wall or Party Walls; and such constructed Returns must be increased One Inch at the least for every Six Feet in Length that the Brestsummer may be otherwise unsupported.

And if the Height of the under Side of any Brestsummer laid from Party Wall to Party Wall to carry any external Wall exceed 15 Feet from the Surface of the public Foot Pavement in front of the Building, then there must be constructed Returns in the Direction of the Length of the Brestsummer from the Inside of each Party Wall of 8½ Inches at the least, and at the least of the full Thickness of such Brestsummer; and every such Return must be increased One Inch at the least for every Foot or Part of a Foot the Brestsummer may be in Height from the Surface of the public Foot Pavement more than 16 Feet, whether the Brestsummer be otherwise supported or not.

Materials to be used in Repairs.

And with regard to old external Walls or other external Inclosures of any Building already built, in reference to Materials to be used in the repair thereof,—

If any such Wall or Inclosure be not built of the Materials required by this Act for external Walls or other external Inclosures hereafter to be built, then every Part of such Wall or other external Inclosure (except the Inclosure of Roofs, and the Flats, Gutters, Dormers, Turrets, Lantern Lights, and other Erections thereon,) may be at all Times thereafter repaired with Materials of the same Sort as those of which such external Wall or Inclosure has been already built.

Materials to be used in rebuilding.

But if any such external Wall or Inclosure be at any Time hereafter taken down or otherwise demolished for the Height of One Story, or for a Space equal to One Fourth of the whole Surface of such external Wall, then every part thereof not built in the Manner and of the several Materials by this Act directed for external Walls must be taken down, and the same must be rebuilt in such manner, and of such Materials, and in all respects as by this Act directed for external Walls hereafter to be built, according to the Class and Rate of the Building to which such external Wall or Inclosure shall belong.

External Wall used as a Party Wall.

And with regard to external Walls to be used as Party Walls to any Building adjoining thereto (except an attached Building or Office as is hereinbefore described),—

If the external Wall of any Building have not such Footings, or be not of such Heights and Thicknesses, or be not built in such Manner and of such Materials as are herein directed for Party Walls of Buildings of the highest Rate to which such Wall shall adjoin, then such external Wall must not be used as a Party Wall for any such Building; but there must be a distinct external Wall built as herein described for external Walls of the Rate to which it shall belong.

But if such external Wall to any Building already built be at the least 18 Inches in Thickness in every Part, and be of sound and proper Materials, and in good Condition, then such Wall may be used as a Party Wall; but if the House of which such Wall forms a Part be rebuilt within Five Years from the Time at which the Wall shall have been so first used as a Party Wall, then such Wall must become subject to the Provisions of this Act in respect of Party Walls, according to the Class and Rate to which the said Wall did first belong.

PART III.—PARTY WALLS.

Division of Buildings.

And with regard to Walls used to divide single Buildings into Two or more,—

If it be intended to divide any Building into two or more distinct Parts, then every Wall for that Purpose must be built as a Party Wall in the Manner and of the Materials, and of the several Heights and Thicknesses for Party Walls of the highest Rate of Building to which such Party Wall shall belong or adjoin, as prescribed in reference to the Thicknesses of Party Walls in Schedule (C.)

And if any Building already built or which shall be hereafter built be converted, used, or occupied as Two or more separate Buildings, each having a separate Entrance and Staircase, then every such Building shall be deemed to be Two or more separate Houses, and such separate Houses must be divided from each other by a Party Wall or Party Arch or Arches built in the Manner and of the Materials required for Party Walls, or for Party Arches, for the Class and Rate to which the largest of the Buildings so divided shall belong.

Site of Walls.

With regard to Party Walls, in reference to the Site thereof,—

If the Buildings be of equal Rate then such Party Wall must be built on the Line of Junction of such Buildings, One Half on the Ground of the Owner of one of such Buildings, and One Half on the Ground of the Owner of the other of such Buildings.

If such Buildings be of different Rates, then such Wall must be built on the Line of Junction thereof, as follows; that is to say, One Half of the Thickness of the Wall required for the Building of the lower Rate on the Ground of each of the adjoining Owners; and the whole of the additional Thickness of the Wall required for the Building of the higher Rate on the Ground of the Owner of such Building of the higher Rate.

And if such Building of the lower Rate be thereafter enlarged or altered so as to become a Building of a higher Rate, then the Owner of such first-mentioned Building of the higher Rate for the Time being shall be entitled to receive from the Owner of such Building of the lower Rate such Sum of Money as shall be a sufficient Compensation for the Ground occupied by that Portion of the Party Wall, which according to the Rate of the Building enlarged ought to have been built by its Owner on his own Ground, as well as the Value of so much of the Wall itself as may be more than the Owner of such Building of the lower Rate had already paid for.

Construction and Materials.

And with regard to Party Walls, in reference to the component Materials thereof,—

Every Part of such Party Wall must be built of sound Bricks or of Stone, or of such Bricks and Stone together, laid in and with Mortar or Cement in such manner as to produce solid Work.

And as to the Wood-work which it may be desired to connect with the Party Walls of any Building, the bearing Ends of wooden Beams, Brestsummers, Girders, Trimming Joists, and the Ends of Partition Heads and Sills, and the bearing Ends of the main Timbers of a Roof, and Wood-bricks may be laid into the Substance of a Party Wall; but no such Beam, Brestsummer, Girder, Joist, Partition Head, or Sill, nor any Part of a Roof being Wood, nor any Wood-bricks, must be laid or placed within Four Inches of the Centre of any Party Wall; and no other Wood-work of any Kind must be laid into, placed upon, or be run or driven into any Part of the Substance of any Party Wall.

But if the Ends of Timbers be carried on Iron Shoes or Stone Corbels, then such Iron Shoes or Stone Corbels must be built into the Wall at the least One Half of the Thickness of such Wall.

And the Top of every such Party Wall must be finished with one Course of sound Stock Bricks, set on edge with good Cement, or by a Coping of any other properly secured and sufficient Water-proof and Fire-proof Covering.

Height of Party Walls above Roof.

And with regard to Party Walls, in reference to the Height thereof,—

If a Party Wall adjoin to any Roof, then such Party Wall must be carried up and remain One Foot Six Inches at the least above the Part where the Party Wall and Roof adjoin, measured at a Right Angle with the Back of the Rafters of such Roof.

And if any Party Wall in any Building of the First Class adjoin a Gutter, then such Party Wall must be carried up, and remain Two Feet at the least above the highest Part of any such Gutter.

And if any Party Wall in any Building of the Second Class adjoin a Gutter, then such Party Wall must be carried up, and remain Three Feet at the least above the highest Part of any such Gutter.

If there be fixed within Five Feet of a Party Wall, upon the Flat or Roof of the Building, any Turret, Dormer, Lantern-light, or other Erection of combustible Materials, then every such Party Wall must be carried up next to every such Turret, Dormer, Lantern-light, or other Erection, and must extend One Foot Six Inches higher and One Foot Six Inches wider than any such Erection on each Side thereof.

Openings in Party Walls.

And for the Purpose of regulating the making of Openings through any Party Wall between One Dwelling House and another, whereby Two or more Dwelling Houses shall be united,—

With regard to any Dwelling Houses of any Rate, such Dwelling Houses may be united by Means of Openings in the Party Walls.

But with regard to any Dwelling Houses which when so united will contain more than Fourteen Squares,—

If such Dwelling Houses shall be and continue to be in the same Occupation, then upon its being declared by the Official Referees that in their Opinion the Stability and Security from Fire of any or either of such Dwelling Houses will not be endangered by making such Openings, they may be made accordingly.

Recesses and Chases.

And further, with regard to any Party Wall, as to Recesses and as to Chases in such Wall,—
